HACKENSCHMIDT WATCHES THE PROFESSIONAL DRIVING.

BUT PREFERS TO KEEP TO HIS OWN STYLE.

RECEIVES SOME INSTRUCTION

SNAP SHOTS OF HACKENSCHMIDT, THE STRONG MAN, PLAYING GOLF.

Having tried almost all other kinds of sport, having even threatened to become a professional pugilist and fight for the heavyweight championship, and demonstrating a certain amount of physical cleverness in everything in which he has taken part, Hackenschmidt, the champion wrestler, has been induced to try his hand at golf, and, barring a natural amount of crudeness, has really accomplished quite a little progress in the game.

Because of his great physical strength it was anticipated that he would make a terrific drive, and so he probably would but for the fact that he cannot be induced to take his grip on the club after the style which is considered orthodox. Instead of placing his right hand above the left he insists upon reversing the grip and really is swinging against his own effort when he tries to rap the ball from the tee.

Hackenschmidt says it is a fine game to keep down flesh. "A two-mile walk, with a lot of swinging and striking at the ball, is worth its weight in gold, when a wrestler is training for a match," said the champion. "It's good exercise for everybody. If I resided permanently in England, I should be on the golf links whenever I had spare time, and I should make it a point to see that I found spare time for at least three rounds of a good course every week."

Hackenschmidt's short game was not quite as good as his work through the green, as he found a tendency to putt with too much strength, and frequently overran the cup when he was trying to hole the ball.

He asked one English professional how long he thought it would take to make a good player out of a beginner. "Oh," said the "pro.," "it's all a matter of dependence. Some men I've known to play a fairly good game in three or four years, and others have been working at it for twenty, and they don't know much about golf now."

"I might be fifty, at that, before I would become any kind of a player," said Hackenschmidt, "or sixty or seventy-five if I lived to be so old."

"You might," replied the "pro."

"Then I guess I'd better stick to wrestling," said the champion. I'm pretty good at it and I think I shall be likely to make a little more money by it than by trying to become a star golfer. But after all I like the game and I don't blame you for taking it on."

EMPRESS STEAMERS DIRECT TO ST. JOHN?

Ottawa, Nov. 11—It is stated here on pretty good authority that the C. P. R. Empress steamers will go direct to St. John even at the risk of losing its contract with the Allans for carrying its part of the British-Canadian mails.

It is said that the C. P. R. steamers in connection with their overseas mail contract with the British government will have to go direct to St. John.

So far the department of trade and commerce has nothing to give out officially on the subject, although it is admitted that the above is likely to be the case.

H. A. Allan, of the Allan line, was here on Saturday in connection with this matter.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McLeod are expected home from New York about the 20th inst.

THIS IS REAL CHRISTIANITY

(Montreal Witness)

A new hotel was opened in Boston last week by the Salvation Army which eclipses the famous Mills hotel in New York in providing accommodation for that class of people who are not welcomed at hotels. It is called "The People's Palace," and combines within its walls all the comforts and conveniences of an ordinary hotel, except the sale of liquor and tobacco. It is conducted like other establishments of the same kind, only its rates are from ten to fifty cents a day. Even those who have no money will be given food and lodging and employment, whereby they will be able to rise above their misfortunes. As was stated at the opening, it will provide accommodation not only for those who can pay a little, but also food for the hungry, work for the willing, and lodging for all. The building contains two hundred and eighty-seven rooms, a reading room, parlors, bathrooms, quarters for officers of the Army, and shops on the ground floor front. Elaborate in all its appointments, it will be a charity of the most practical kind on the principle of helpfulness, with doors always open and Christian kindness the ruling motive in giving a welcome to all who enter, however lost, unfortunate or degraded they may be. The Salvation Army has shown, as no other humanitarian institution ever showed, that it can go down into the deeps of the submerged, and, knowing how to deal with and manage the vicious and forlorn, rescue the perishing and bring light and hope into the darkest regions of wretchedness. Surely, this is the noblest work in which devoted men and women could engage, and should receive the earnest support of all who can spare much or little in aid of a cause so good and holy. From a practical point of view it is no less worthy of support as a potent influence for lessening crime, destitution and the saddest of social diseases. Cases are known in this city of roughs who jeered and hooted the Army parades who, when they had fallen to the lowest depths of misery, were sought and saved by the Army. This is practical Christianity, as well as the highest civic wisdom, and, in an age given to the worship of material things, bears testimony to a power in the midst of us which will yet save the world.

REV. E. TENNYSON SMITH TEMPERANCE LECTURER OPENS AT CAMPBELLTON

Campbellton, N. B., Nov. 11—Rev. E. Tennyson Smith, the distinguished English temperance lecturer, arrived here on the English mail special on Friday evening to enter upon a week's campaign. Friday evening he met the local committee and the plans for the meetings were discussed and final arrangements made, but it was not until today that the real campaign began.

On Saturday evening a welcome was given Mr. Smith by the temperance people and by Mayor Murray, on behalf of the town. The mayor's address was warmly applauded and at its close he gave Mr. Smith a hearty handshake. J. M. McLean, W. P. of Campbellton division, presided and gave an appropriate address. Warm words of welcome were also expressed by each of the four Protestant clergymen of the town.

SET CLOTHES ON FIRE AND BURNED TO DEATH

Dalhousie, N. B., Nov. 10—The four year old son of Paul Savoy, of Dalhousie, met with a horrible death Thursday. His mother went to the nearest store for some groceries and left her three children at home, two babies in a cradle and the boy, a lively chap, was left outdoors with orders to remain there till his mother returned.

The little fellow said "Do not be long away, mamma," and immediately after her departure he returned to the house, climbed on a chair and reached for matches. He sat fire to his own clothing and was found in a hopeless condition when the frantic mother returned.

She saved the two babies as fire had already reached the cot, but all that could be done by medical aid could not save the lad, who suffered torture during two hours. His death was the saddest scene ever witnessed in this community.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Eveleigh, of Sussex, passed through St. John Saturday on their way home from a pleasant visit to Hampstead.

FOOTBALL

Harvard, 5; Carlisle, 0.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 10—Harvard defeated the agile Carlisle Indians today in a lively game on Soldier's Field by a score of 5 to 0. The touchdown came through a fine 47 yard run by Wendell in the first five minutes of the second half. Harvard's back went through the Indians and planted the ball on Carlisle's eight yard line. From that point six Harvard rushes carried the ball across the line. Burr failed to kick an easy goal.

Yale, 5; Brown, 0.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 10—Speed, staying and rallying power won today's game at Yale field, a victory for Yale over the Brown team in one of the hardest fought football battles of the season here. The final score was 5 to 0. Yale was unable to cross the Brown line until the second half. The visitors played all around the Yale team for almost the whole of the first half; sensational work marking the opening moments of the game. Brown started with a rush. Yale's defense was crushed, the line being unable to withstand the attack. Alcott and Forbes, the Yale ends, were boxed repeatedly and the Brown interference swept past them for gain after gain.

HAD LEG BROKEN.

ANN HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 10—Capt. "Joe" Curtis of the University of Michigan football team had his left leg broken this afternoon during the second half of a game between the 'Varsity and a team composed of scrubs. Curtis was running with the ball, when he was tackled low. As Curtis fell, his leg snapped.

The course will be from Brookville to the north side of King square, and the runners will come to the finishing point by way of Brussels, Union and Sydney streets. The entries have closed and the competitors will be: T. M. Morrow, St. Paul's A. C.; J Barbour, unattached; E. D. W. Wilson, unattached; W. P. Bell, H. Atkinson, Mt. Allison A. C.; J. S. Lord, G. A. Stubbs, Marathon A. C.; George Emery, Victorias; G. Paterson, E. Stirling, unattached; Alfred McNutt, Clipper A. C.; W. W. Garnett, Neptune R. C.; L. Lenerton, Dartmouth (N. S.). The medals for the successful runners are to be seen in Oak Hall window, King street.

The Marathons had expected to have a football match with the Wanderers on Saturday next, but word has been received that the Wanderers have to play a deciding game with Dalhousie, so will be unable to come. This will be regretted by those interested in football in St. John.

CHESS

CHALLENGE TO ENGLISH COLLEGES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—A challenge addressed to Oxford and Cambridge, joint holders of the Isaac L. Rice, international intercollegiate chess trophy, was forwarded to England today by Louis J. Wolff, captain of the university chess team.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE

Morden, Man., Nov. 11—The jury, after being out one hour yesterday, returned a verdict of not guilty against Martin Doyle, charged with murder.

The crime of which Doyle was accused was the murder of Vincent Weiler, a North Dakota farmer, his neighbor, at Snowflake, on or about Nov. 19, 1905. Great mystery surrounds almost every detail.

Weiler suddenly disappeared about that time, after having been seen in the company of Doyle, and at first kidnapping was feared. Indeed, Doyle's son was arrested, but acquitted of such a charge.

REAL SIGNIFICANCE OF NEW YORK ELECTION

Real Wrongs Must Now be Righted or the Tide of Radicalism Will Shake American Institutions to Their Foundations.

(N. Y. Journal of Commerce.)

Charles E. Hughes has been elected governor of this state by the votes of Democrats. There is no triumph for the Republican party in the result. It nominated Hughes at Saratoga at the demand of President Roosevelt and under the compulsion of fear of the popular movement led by Mr. Hearst. The pur-blind leaders of the party would have preferred a pliant tool of their own, an ardent supporter of the machine and a purveyor of official spoils, but they dared not risk it. They knew that Hughes was not and could never be their man, and they gave him only a luke-warm and perfunctory support. He carried the burden of the campaign on his own shoulders, and the triumph was his. He knows as well as anybody that he was not elected by the party vote, and he will not forget it. He drew numerous votes to the ticket, for many Democrats voted it straight as a protest against the conduct of their own party, though many others stuck to the party candidates with the exception of Hearst regardless of who or what they were. If Hughes had not been thrust upon the Saratoga convention by the force of an aroused sentiment and the sympathy and sagacity of President Roosevelt, and if the Democrats had acted with an intelligent appreciation of their opportunity, repudiated the selfish bargaining of Hearst and Murphy and put up a ticket of strong, sincere and upright men, they might have swept the state.

The real issue was confused by the personality of the leading candidates, and the contest was between them rather than the parties which they nominally represented. That issue is clear, but neither party stood squarely upon it. The rapacity of great combinations of capital, whether they are called trusts or by some other name, corporate abuses in stock watering, misusing franchises for inordinate gain at the cost of public service, violation of trust by life insurance companies, railroad rebates and discriminations, the oppression of monopolies and, in spite of the protests of obstinate standpatters, resentment at tariff exactions, together with official negligence and the corrupt support of abuses or failure to grapple with them by political organizations, were at the bottom of the upheaval in public sentiment which Hearst with his newspapers did so much to excite and egg on and which he attempted to direct. He was accused of inflaming discontent and fomenting disturbance for selfish purposes, but he would have been powerless to do anything of the kind if the causes of discontent had not existed. The party in power in the state and nation was held largely responsible for the growth of conditions which caused the political unrest and for failure to apply needed remedies. Under the lead of Roosevelt it had made a reluctant beginning in national affairs and Mr. Hughes had been instrumental in making a start in this state, but the party was still held in suspicion and there was a desire to castigate its shortcomings.

The Democratic party as such had put itself in no position to administer the needed chastisement. It had no settled policy of its own, no cohesion of forces, no strong leadership, no hold upon public confidence. It was swayed by every wind of political doctrine and carried away by whatever vagaries gave promise of local or momentary advantage and was as much subject to machines and bosses as the party to which it was or should have been opposed. When Hearst started an independent movement there was a ready impulse to fall in with it and accept him at his own valuation, but it became a question whether he would capture the Democratic organization for his purposes or whether it would accept the rising issue as its own and turn it to account in a masterly fashion. It paltered and bargained and preferred demagogism to statesmanship. Hearst revealed his unfitness to lead in any sound cause and brought discomfiture on the party as well as himself, because respectable Democrats had no stomach for his methods or his character. Neither party prevailed, but Hughes saved the situation from disaster.

Will his party learn its lesson, accept the issue and give him the support necessary to fulfill the promise of his election? Will it set about rooting out abuses and effecting reforms that are unmistakeably demanded or will it obstruct the way and give new force to the spirit of discontent? Will the Democrats learn their lesson and rise to the opportunities of a rational opposition with sane leadership or will they continue to waver to palter and to bargain away their political birthright? The spirit which Mr. Hearst has aroused and which he has failed to control to beneficent ends, because he exhibits the power to excite, to assail and to destroy without capacity to direct and construct, will not be allayed until wrongs that are real shall be corrected in some reasonable measure. Unless Republicans accept their lesson and support Hughes as Governor and in national affairs sustain the policy of substantial reform and progress, of protection for the people and the general well being against the overweening power of combinations that draw the wealth of the nation into few hands instead of diffusing it through the mass, or unless Democrats undertake the work that Republicans fail to do, undertake it on lines of sanity and enlightened statesmanship, the tide of radicalism and turmoil will gain new force and shake the edifice of our institutions to its foundations.

The tourist association last week called for tenders for the printing of 10,000 copies of the provincial canoeing book. This week they will call for tenders for 50,000 copies of a tourist book, to be ready for distribution at the Sportsmen's Fair in Boston. A number of artists have submitted cover designs for this booklet. A meeting of the executive will be held either Tuesday or Wednesday, when one of these designs will be selected and the tenders for the canoeing booklet opened.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKane, of the Miramichi, registered at the Canadian office, London, the week ended Oct. 30.
