PEARY DID NOT REACH POLE BUT GOT "FARTHEST NORTH" ABSENT MORE THAN A YEAR

New York, Nov. 2—Commander Robert E. Peary, of the United States Navy, has given to his native country the record of having penetrated "farthest north"—87 degrees and 6 minutes. News of the feat came tonight. The intrepid Arctic explorer failed to reach the North Pole as he had confidently hoped to do with his specially constructed vessel, the Roosevelt, but he penetrated nearer the pole than the Duke of Abruzzi's expedition, which had held the Arctic record, 86 degrees, 34 minutes.

What Commander Peary did and his experiences during the past year in the frozen North are rather briefly but certainly vividly summarized in a communication received tonight by Herbert L. Bridgeman, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club.

This communication follows:

"Hopedale (Labrador) via Twilligate (Nfld), Nov. 2.

"Herbert L. Bridgeman:

"Roosevelt wintered north coast Grant Land somewhat north Alert winter quarters. Went north with sledges February, via Heckla and Columbia. Delayed by open winter between 84 and 85 degrees. Beyond 85 six days. Gale disrupted ice, destroyed caches, cut off communication with supporting bodies and drifted due east. Reached 87 degrees, 6 minutes, north latitude over ice, drifting steadily eastward. Returning ate eight dogs. Drifted eastward, delayed by open water. Reached north coast Greenland in straitened circumstances. Killed musk oxen and returned along Greenland coast to ship. Two supporting parties driven on north coast Greenland. One rescued by me in starving condition. After one week recuperation on Roosevelt, sledged west, completing north coast Grant Land and reached other island, near 100th meridian. Homeward voyage incessant battle with ice, storms and headwinds. Roosevelt magnificent ice-fighter and seaboat. No deaths or illness in expedition.

(Signed) "PEARY."

After furnishing the contents of Commander Peary's missive to The Associated Press, Mr. Bridgeman said that the receipt of any news from the explorer now was quite a surprise to him, because he supposed it had become too late in the season for Commander Peary to send news of his venture. Mr. Bridgeman added that the message spoke for itself, and that since he did not know more of the results of Commodore Peary's effort to reach the pole than the public did he could hardly comment upon the dispatch. There was little doubt, however, he said, that Commander Peary was coming home. This seems to be borne out by the routing of the dispatch. Hopedale or Hoffenthal is a Moravian missionary station on the east coast of Labrador. Twillingate is a port on the west coastof Newfoundland. Mr. Bridgeman said the message was probably mailed by Commodore Peary from Hopedale to the most accessible cable point.

Commander Peary's polar steamship, the Roosevelt, left New York on her long Journey in search of the North pole July 16, 1905. The Roosevelt was built in Maine and came to New York, where she was refitted before starting. The vessel, for which funds were furnished by the Peary Arctic Club of New York, was designed by Naval Architect William E. Winant, particularly for Arctic exploration. She cost $100,000. The vessel had a crew of twenty men, under Captain Bartlett. Commander Peary did not go with the ship from New York, but joined her later at Sydney (C.B.), where she took on coal and additional supplies. The ship left Sydney on July 26. She was next reported at Domini Run, Labrador, July 29, from which point she crossed to Greenland. The vessel was next heard from at Etah, North Greenland. She passed Cape York August 7, and reached Etah August 6.

NEW BRUNSWICK WOODS FOR MOOSE HUNTING

An Old Hunter Thinks Maine Woods are too Populous Nowadays --- New Brunswick the Place for Game --- Bullet Proof Suits Needed.

(Portland, Me., Advertiser).

"I should like to go up in the woods and get a deer and a moose," said a Bangor man the other day, "but I'm not going. My bullet proof suit hasn't come from the boilermaker's ,so I shan't go."

"Time was," continued the cautious man, "when a body could go off and in a day's journey find a place where there wasn't a hunter behind every bush waiting to see your bush move before firing at it. There used to be some fun then, when a fellow could get his rifle and walk all day without seeing tracks of a half dozen other men and running across tin cans and sardine boxes every half mile. Now I don't know of but mighty few corners of the Maine woods where seclusion, or anything like it, can be had. The great increase in the rush of hunters to Maine and the consequent springing up of sporting camps on every stream, lake and pond, has made the woods altogether too populous to be comfortable. You remember some good hunting place where you killed a couple of deer and a moose ten years ago, and you think you'd like to go there again, but next time you pick up any literature about the woods you see the name of your lake in headlines and the picture of a collection of camps which are guaranteed to hold from ten to twenty honeymoon couples without letting them interfere in the least.

"Well, if you want a good place to stay, good food, good bed, good fresh air and good company, you would go to that place, but if you want a nice quiet moose hunt you wouldn't. Not much. You have to go away off down to New Brunswick where they haven't learned to talk English yet or to eat with forks, for that sort of thing.

"It may be good for the state, all this building and advertising, and for the tired city people who want a good, long, unrestricted dose of the Lord's clean atmosphere. But for the hunter, no.

FISHING DIFFERENT.

"Fishing is, of course, different. You don't mind so much then because at the end of a long day you like someone to talk to and to tell the lies you have been having such a good time thinking up. There are plenty of fish and plenty of good fishing places. But fishing rods don't shoot.

"Remedy? Why, so far as stopping the rush of vacationists and sportsmen to this state is concerned, you might as well try to stop the tide with a broom, but there is something which might be stopped and that is the use of these modern, high-powered guns.

"I have hunted in the Maine woods all my life and I have shot a good many deer, maybe more some years than the law would allow nowadays. Deer were just as hard to kill and so were moose in the days when I went hunting as they are now, but I never had the least difficulty, and I never carried anything more powerful than a 44.40 Winchester or a 38.55. Along the last of my shooting I did all I needed to do with a 44 carbine.

SHOOT TOO FAR.

"What is the use of these long distance, high-powered cartridges that will send a bullet through a tree a foot thick and kill a man half a mile on the other side of it? I know they say the bullets won't do it; that they mushroom and stop, but some of them don't. They keep right on. If, for instance, a man is shoting at something, slightly above him on a knoll and doesn't hit it, what is there to prevent that bullet going on a mile or so and killing whatever it hits before it is spent. If you shoot across a stream or a pond you never know what you may hit on the other side.

"And what is the use of such long distance shooting. Nine times out of ten a man can't see a deer more than 60 yards in the woods and almost any gun will shoot straight at that distance. As for killing power I believe there is as much shock and as much heart stopping quality in a 44.40 as in any gun made, for the distance one ordinarily shoots.

EVERY LITTLE WHILE.

"We hear every week or so of a bullet smashing through the window of a house or a railroad car, shot from so far away that the report of the gun cannot be heard. I don't think it is right for such steel jacketed death pellets to be singing around loose. There is no need of these modern guns in Maine where the country is thick woods. Any old hunter will tell you that a moose dies easier than a deer and if an old-fashioned gun will bring down a buck it will kill Mr. Moose though naturally you have to shoot straight ahead with any gun.

"I have heard the matter discussed by lots of old hunters and I have heard it whispered that a bill would be introduced in the legislature this winter to prohibit the use of high powered weapons. I believe it would be a step in the right direction, and while it would not stop these careless killings altogether it would make the Maine woods a lot safer for the fellow behind the hill or across the lake who doesn't want to have his mind disturbed either physically or through his imagination by a steel slug that comes from a gent over in the next county that he hasn't even a bowing acquaintance with."

NEW YORK POLITICIANS CHARGED WITH FORGERY

Four Prominent Word Heelers Arrested on Warrants Issued by District Atty. Jerome.

NEW YORK, Nov 2—Four men were arrested and locked up at a police station tonight as an aftermath of the contest in the thirtieth assembly district between Percy Nagle and John F. Cowan, rival Democratic leaders. The men were all charged with forgery in the second degree.

The men arrested are Henry A. O'Brien Daniel H. Coleman, Joseph Cavanaugh, and Michael J. Barry. The arrests were on warrants issued by the district attorney's office.

"There were a great many men who made affidavits stating that they had voted for Nagle when Cowan disputed his election" Assistant District Attorney Hart said today. "We investigated 107 of these affidavits and found that only 38 were genuine. Many men whose names were signed to affidavits said that they had not signed the papers at all. They claimed that their signatures were forgeries."

Cavanaugh and Barry are alleged to have signed affidavits falsely stating that they voted for Nagle. O'Brien and Colemen are notaries-public and, according to Assistant District Attorney Hart, they witnessed the affidavits of Cavanaugh, knowing that they were not correct. The Cowan and Nagle men in the district recently held conventions and each chose a candidate for the assembly. The Nagle candidate, however, was constituted the regular one by the decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.
