

ROOSEVELT AFTER MEAT PACKERS NOW

Muck rake Working in Filth of Chicago Packing Houses---Awful Revelations Made in Inspector's Report---Conditions Even Worse than Pictured.

(From our Regular Correspondent) WASHINGTON, June 2.—Almost as soon as the President had concluded his speech at the laying of the corner stone of the new office for the house of representatives here in which he denounced the man with the muck rake, he himself through his agents began the business of raking in the ordure of the Chicago packing houses. However earnestly the President disapproves the muck raking which is done for sensational purposes he is in the matter of honest exposure of dishonesty and villainy the most energetic muck rake of them all, and at heart he believes, as nearly the entire country is coming to believe, that the security of the country depends upon the still further exposure of evils and abuses that have been too long unknown or whitened over with the white wash brush. The President, who reads all of the new novels, that are of any importance was early among those who read the shocking story of Packingtown, the centre of the beef trust, which was written by Upton Sinclair and which he called the "Jungle." This book brought out many magazine articles several written by of the best writers of the country, and the President was among the first to read them. He had them sent to him in manuscript and proofs that he might have them in advance of the publication of the magazines for which they were written. The result of his interest was his determination to have the conditions in the great packing houses investigated for himself and he appointed two men, one a man of wealth who has devoted his life to working among the poor to go to Chicago and make a thorough inspection of the stock yards and packing plants. Their report has not been made public but it is said to be shocking beyond description and to reveal a condition of affairs that is even more abhorrent than those of the picture painted by Sinclair in his novel. They report that the meats are packed in surroundings wholly unsanitary and by employees having tuberculosis and loathsome diseases; that cattle and hogs condemned by the inspectors as suffering with tuberculosis, lumpy jaw, ulcers and other diseases were not destroyed but were packed and sent out with the government stamp on them whenever the traces of the disease could be removed or when this was impossible were used as sausage, potted meats and other delicacies in which their defects could be concealed; that the refuse of diseased animals, lumpy jaw, ulcers and tuberculous glands, unborn calves, etc., passed also into sausage and tinned meats, while decayed and putrefying meats were treated with formaldehyde, painted and dyed that they might have the color of fresh meats, and doctored with borax and other preservatives. The list of the vile practices, "everything of the hog and the squeal" would take a book of many pages and not since the days of the embalmed beef scandal during our late war has there been so much agitation about meat.

The result of the excitement was the bill passed by the senate last week, which provides that an adequate number of inspectors be employed by the packing companies to inspect all of the meat and that these inspectors shall have the right to destroy all that they condemn. It provides for an inspection that does not stop at the gates of the packing houses, but which follows the animal through every department until it reaches the can or the refrigerator for shipment. The bill that goes up from the beef trust, may be heard pretty nearly around the world, and the bill will have serious opposition in the house where Speaker Cannon, whose interests in Illinois are interwoven with those of the meat packing industry, but that it must and will pass is a foregone conclusion. The President is disposed to keep back the report of

JURY DISAGREES IN WHITE CASE, PRISONER IS FREE UNTIL AUGUST

Harry B. White will be tried again at the August session of the county court. The present trial failed of result as the jury returned this afternoon, after being out two hours, and announced that they failed to agree. Eight of their number stood for acquittal and four for conviction. Judge Forbes thanked the jury and dismissed them. He then announced that the case would be tried again at the August session. He then released the prisoner on his own recognizance of $2,000 and in two sureties, Thomas A. Linton and Hon. H. A. McKeown, in $1,000 each.

When the county court opened this morning a large crowd was present which manifested the greatest interest that is taken in the case of Harry B. White, who is charged with forgery. The judge, Solicitor-General and Hon. H. A. McKeown's addresses were all strong, and when they were concluded at 12 o'clock, many of the spectators lingered about the corridors of justice anxiously awaiting the coming of the jury. The jury, however, not having put in appearance at one o'clock, Judge Forbes adjourned court until this afternoon at two o'clock.

During the morning a number of clerical men were present, Rev. Campbell occupying a seat alongside of the judge. Mr. McKeown's Address At nine o'clock this morning Hon. H. A. McKeown began his eloquent and powerful address to the jury in the case of The King vs. Harry B. White, on the complaint of the Dominion Express Company.

Mr. McKeown said in substance that since last March his client had been held in a false light before the public, but now Mr. White had cleared himself of every suspicion of guilt. The prosecution have not made out their case, and this had been a cruel case against the defendant from the beginning.

Mr. White has been able to take their books and show that his statements are true, and after he made his explanation to the court and to you they have not called a single witness to question what he said. That being so, we have established Mr. White's innocence.

Mr. McKeown went on to say that the company had been on trial, for the company has brought this cruel charge against Mr. White. For over two months Mr. White bore the burden of the company's cruel charge of taking that large amount of money attributed to him. He now stands clear of the guilt of that baseless charge.

A Sorry Spectacle Mr. White has been in the company's employ for six years. Whatever he learned about the manner of doing business the company taught him. His co-workers were his teachers, and he had before him the spectacle of them dipping into the company's funds. Putting in their I. O. U's and when the auditor came covering it over. That has been Mr. White's schooling. There is a duty by the employer to the employee, and the employer has at least to set forth the example of honesty. It is a marvel that Mr. White has come through this ordeal as he has, and is able to point to the company's books for confirmation to his statements.

In the early part of January Mr. White went into the cashier's box and found the company's accounts juggled. He learned what he knows from those people. They say he has committed forgery, but I will be able to show you that he is as clear of that as of the taking of money. Forgery is a very serious crime. It is one that calls for very severe punishment. It is rightfully heavily punished. If it were not society would be disturbed.

Forgery is the making of a false document, knowing it to be false, with the intention that it shall be used or acted upon to the prejudice of any one. The intention must be there. Mr. White made those false documents knowing them to be false, but there was no intention to defraud and furthermore there is no prejudice to the company. Mr. Haycock said that there was not. "It is something more than a false document."

Mr. McKeown laid special stress upon the intention being there in all such cases and one fully. They have simply proved that he has made those false documents. There is not a tittle of evidence to prove that they were prejudiced. They have not proved that they were ever deceived. They did not prove that White had made the false documents to defraud them. Mr. Haycock admitted that they were not prejudiced. First, they had to prove the making; second, the intent, if possible; third, that they were deceived. The company's men did not say when they came down that they were deceived. They have not shown that the company was misled.

In case the defence had been unable to show that the money had been used for the company's benefit as far as the St. John office was concerned, then it would be different. We have come through and shown that White has not taken one dollar of the $5,800 that they allege the defendant appropriated. "From this point view the intent," said Mr. McKeown.

Mr. White has told you what he did with the money day by day. How can the solicitor-general argue the case. They took up a report of Oct. 23rd, one at random, the cashier received eleven orders and forwards but five of them. That was only one of the lessons for Mr. White that excellent school. I fail to see where they have the ground for proceeding against this boy.

Mr. Haycock is the only one that has testified in contradiction of Mr. White as to the genuineness of the "Bolyton" orders, and every chance he got he said Mr. White took the $5,800 and Mr. Haycock has not heard the last of it either. Going on to the "Goodwill" orders, Mr. McKeown said that Mr. White had got no money for them, but now he sees what a mistake he made. "Anyone who spent six years in that office, as he did, is liable to come out with leanings to the penitentiary. He was schooled there."

Mr. McKeown went through the forgery cases and stated that the company had not been prejudiced by a single dollar. If it had been shown that White had taken the money there would be no justification for him. Nevertheless, they will ask you for a verdict of guilty. They will ask you to hold him on a question of words. I know these companies have great power. No painted savage ever pursued their victims with more savagery than three men have pursued White.

They started out without knowing and Mr. Haycock should have known, as auditor. When he asked for the books he was put in jail, and supposing his honor had not allowed him out on bail to get the books, look at the horrible injustice that would have been done him. They want to roll the whole burden on White's shoulders. The company know that they charged this man falsely. Harry White stands in a better position than any one of the company. He has been justified in what he has done. They have loaded this boy's name with calumny. I am not able to tell that company the depth to which they have sunk in popular estimation. We would lay our friends away rather than have the black line of criminality drawn across the family record.

The company has not hesitated to endeavor to bring false charges against White. It is hard for the boy because he has made a slip to be branded as a criminal by the company. "I want to say, gentlemen, that I have not at my command, or have the public command, of the English language to show sufficiently their contempt for these men." White never was a thief. His only fault is that he has acted unwise. He has endeavored to help along the business of the St. John office and he had the example of his superiors in

AWFUL ACCIDENT ON STMR. HAMPTON

George Bavard Caught in Paddle Wheel of Steamer and Whirled in Circle of Death Until Terribly Injured---Now at Hospital in Precarious Position.

Whirled around on the paddle wheel of the steamer Hampton until his body was racked and bruised so that he now lies in a precarious condition in the public hospital, was the experience of George Bavard, a fireman and a deckhand on the steamer Hampton this morning. According to the story told by eyewitnesses Bavard was standing on the stern of the boat, (which is a stern wheeler) reclining against the wheel and watching the approach of the steamer Elaine, which was then coming into her wharf, alongside the Hampton. The engineer of the Hampton, not knowing of Bavard's position, started his engines ahead, so as to allow the Elaine room to get in. At the first movement of the wheel Bavard's support gave way under him and he fell inside the huge revolving wheel, whence he was whirled, clutched wildly meanwhile, round and round. As soon as possible the machinery was stopped and the then limp form was tenderly removed and placed on a bed of straw on the Elaine, while Dr. Roberts was sent for immediately. He arrived very quickly and after a brief examination ordered Bavard's removal to the hospital, where he was taken in a coach. Capt. R. Myles, Fred McMillan, Officer Silas Perry and W. H. Dunham assisted in removing the unfortunate man from his dangerous position. Dr. Roberts was of the opinion that the man's back was broken, though he could not be sure until a more thorough examination had been made. He thought his chances of recovery were very slight. Bavard is a native of Hampton, where his father conducts a livery stable. He is about 25 years of age. His father has been notified and will arrive this afternoon.

BISHOP KINGDON IS IN CRITICAL STATE

He Had a Bad Turn Early this Morning Which Left Him Very Weak.

FREDERICTON, June 4.—(Special)—The condition of Bishop Kingdon is not so favorable and is causing his family and friends considerable anxiety. He had another bad turn at two o'clock this morning which has left him in a critical condition. Even should his lordship rally from his illness it will be months before he will be able to resume work and it is likely that the synod at its meeting here this month will consider the question of appointing a coadjutor.

The Fredericton Boom Company, raised last week 1894 joints of logs, 1339 at Douglas and 533 at the Mitchell boom. Two hundred men are now employed and it is proposed to increase the number to five hundred.

Ready For Business

CHEAP FARES TO EXHIBITION

Manager Milligan has Made Excellent Passenger and Freight Arrangements with the I. C. R.

Manager C. J. Milligan of the St. John exhibition has arranged especially low railway rates on the I. C. R. in connection with the coming exhibition. He has made a particularly attractive arrangement in regard to freight rates, which will be of benefit to other exhibitors as well as St. John's big show. One full freight rate will be charged to exhibitors coming to the St. John fair, one-half rate will be charged back to any other exhibitor with free carriage back to first point of shipment. For instance, an exhibitor in Quebec would be charged full rate from Quebec to the St. John fair, half-rate from St. John to the Halifax fair and free carriage from Halifax back to Quebec. Passenger rates on the I. C. R. during the exhibition will be fixed at one fare for every day, while special trains will be run from Moncton on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, September 4, 5 and 7, when much lower excursion rates will prevail.

Manager Milligan had an interview with the I. C. R. authorities in Moncton on Saturday, when he completed the transportation arrangements. He also went to a bill hunt at the exhibition, and as a result the Humphrey Woollen Mills and L. Higgins & Co. will exhibit here and it is also likely that the Record Foundry will display its wares.

It has been suggested that Labor Day, September 3, be made St. John day at the big show. This plan proved highly successful in 1902.

RIOT LEADERS SHOT TO DEATH

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 4.—A despatch to the Herald from Douglas, Arizona, reports the execution of eight leaders of the Cananea riots yesterday by Col. Connelley. The rioters were lined up in front of a stone wall a few blocks over the hills from Ronquillo and killed by a volley from the rifles of the rurales, under the command of Colonel Kosterlitzky.

The despatch further states that the arrival of Kosterlitzky with his troops had more to do with the quelling of the riot than the presence of American soldiers on the scene. The pecuniary loss of the Cananea Consolidated Mining Company is estimated at $300,000 and work will be resumed within a week.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Opening prices today were a fraction higher generally than Saturday's closing. The trade showed signs of activity in spite of the closed London market. Smelting rose 1/4 and there were 2,000 shares of St. Paul sold at an advance of a point. Colorado fuel, sugar and General Electric for three months.
