BASE BALL

The St. Johns evened matters with the Tartars of Fredericton when they shut out the boys from the capital in a fine game of ball Saturday afternoon on the Victoria grounds. The St. Johns made four runs by good timely hitting. The weather was about perfect for good ball and the two teams put up a game that was interesting from start to finish. They were evenly matched and while, in a way, it was a pitchers' battle, the fielding was, with the exception of a few mistakes, excellent.

Malloy, the Fredericton crack pitcher, was in the box for the visitors and while he was touched for nine safe hits—one being a three-bagger by Britt and another a home run by Case—he managed to strike out no less than nine St. Johns.

Case was in good form and managed to keep the Fredericton batters down to two hits, one, however, being a two-bagger by Baird.

BASE STEALING CLEVER FEAT.

Good base running consists in reaching the base safely; bad base running consists in being caught. At least that is the verdict of the crowd, and even an expert has a hard time to tell whether the base running is good or bad. Some of the worst breaks made on bases win games and some of the best result in defeat. The expert can tell a good base runner by the way he gets the start, the ground he gains while the pitcher is delivering the ball, the way he slides to the objective base and the judgment he uses in stealing.

A good base runner will take a chance at one stage of the game that he never would think of attempting at another; will make seemingly insane steals at unaccountable times. He is using his judgment.

Base running has, in a sense, become almost art. Baseball now is played by certain mathematical rules and regulations and there is no more of the brilliant individual feats of the old days. Every one who plays now knows just what stage the game is in, what to do in that stage and if he does not the signals from the batter to him show him his duty. In the old days most of them ran unaided by bunt, "squeeze," hit-and-run or blocking or feinting to bunt to draw the fielders out of position.

Teams still run bases, hoping to demoralize the opposition, but not to the extent that they did in the early years of the game. In those days a team would run bases at every stage and many times would so upset the defense that it broke all to pieces and then the victors ran at will.

TIP O'NEIL'S PROMISES.

There is a debate on as to the fastest runners in the American league, and "Billy" Maloney, "Honus" Lobert of Cincinnati, Browne of New York and Odwell of Cincinnati have been mentioned. Umpire "Silk" O'Loughlin thinks Harry Bay of Cleveland is the fastest baseball man in the country from home to first, and that John O'Neill, of the White Sox can beat anyone in a 100-yard straightaway.—Boston Herald.

THE TURF

THE READVILLE SALE.

(American Horse Breeder.)

The sale at Readville, favored by propitious weather, is over, and the horses have gone to their new stables. Two hundred and forty horses were sold and the sales aggregated approximately $78,000. Deducting $1400, the amount received for the dogs from the Dreamwold kennels, and we strike an average price of $320 per head, a highly creditable showing for the class of offerings, thus proving, as has been often reiterated, that New England has no equal as a sales mart.

The star of the sale was the roan three-year-old colt, Codero, son of Bingen, and as the Bingens are apt to do, he brought the highest price. Bard Palmer drove Codero a quarter in 31 3-4 seconds, last eighth in 15 seconds, on Monday, and so steadily did he move that one would almost be willing to believe he could race off the entire mile at that gait. He was started by a New York man at $2000, and Sam Hastings, Frank Hayden, Francis S. Parker and Lon McDonald followed along. At $3000 the latter two were left alone in competition. Mr. Parker shook his head when McDonald said $5000 and the colt became the property of B. R. Williams of Boston. He is engaged in $47,000 worth of stakes, and has as good a chance as any one in sight to win them. F. J. Cameron, Charlottetown, P. E. I. bought a brown filly, by Deamer, dam Indabelle, by Jay Bird, for $130.

W. J. Furbush, secured Outcast, a roan mare, by Vernwood, for $205.

HORSE NOTES.

The news from Cleveland report Major Delmar (1.59 3-4) in better shape than ever before at this time of the year.

The pacing Miss Adbell (3) (2.14 3-4) is booked for a record as fast as that of her trotting namesake.

From the present outlook it seems like the Director family would be quite prominent on the turf this season.

Ten dollars per bale was the price of hay during the four days following the earthquake at San Francisco.

It is said that some 80 mares will visit the paddock of Admiral Dewey (2.04 3-4) this season, and that 40 more are already booked for 1907, and 30 for 1908.

Reports have it that they are trying to make a trotter of Pan Michael (2.03), and that so far he is taking very kindly to the diagonal gait.

With the three-year-old colt, Codero, and the two-year-old colt by Todd (2.14 3-4) (from the dam of Poindexter, 2.09), Lon McDonald is liable to make it interesting for the winners in some of the rich three and two-year-old stakes this fall.

At the Readville sale Heron, by Arion (2.07 3-4) out of Mrs. Jack, by Athanio (2.10), was sold to James D. Keith, Stellarton, N. S. He is a six-year-old bay stallion and should win races and get some colts to help the quality of stock in the section where he is going.—Breeder.

Hon. T. H. Phair, of Presque Isle, informs the Breeder that he has solr Mars (2.13 3-4) and Lord Arleigh, trial 2.18 1-2, to J. Bradbury, of Boston, who will keep the horses for service in Aroostook County. Mr. Phair also sold a couple of fast, well-bred youngsters to Mr. Bradbury at the same time.

We notice in an exchange that Hon. F. C. Murchie, of Milltown, N. B., has in his stable three very fine two-year-old colts, by Bingen (2.06 1-4). The first is a bay colt, named Malcolm Forbes, out of Nancy Hanks (2.04); the next from Iva Dee (2.12 1-2), and a third out of Chasna, by Larabie the Great (3) (2.12 3-4). A yearling, by Baron Silver (2.28 3-4) is out of Nelly Glen, sister of Lady Glen (2.15), etc. This is very promising young stock and will show up well in Mr. Murchie's hands.

One of the horses that looks like he would be a troublesome factor in deciding races in the Maritime Circuit is Kingsboro, black stallion, by May King (2.20); dam, by Kensington, son of Kentucky Prince. He is owned by L. D. Morton, of Digby, N. S., and Trainer S. A. Rockford brought him to light in a race last fall where he showed a great deal of speed. Kingsboro is seven years old and eligible to the green classes.—Breeder.

It is announced that the Maine-bred mare, Gene D, (2.12 1-2), lately taken to Austria, will be trained and raced this season, and after that will be used as a brood-mare. As her dam was by Kohinoor, a son of Volunteer, and her second dam by Chenery's Grey Eagle, a son of the noted four-mile race horse Grey Eagle, she should be a success in her new home, both as a race winner and a producer of such.

At the matinee races of the Metropolitan Driving Club, Boston on May 25th. Loma, owned by Furbush was second in class A. Chief Wilkie was first in class E time 1.07; Mazie Sidney was first in class F, best time 1.06 and Colbath was third in class G. These were all driven by Furbush.

Helen R. was first in class G, best time, 1.09.

Trainer S. A. Rockford drove Gen. Fiske (2.14 3-4) a half in 1.04 1-4 at Combination Park last week and also worked Peacherina (2.19 1-4) a half in 1.07 1-2

The pacing stallion, Will Be Sure, that was raced successfully in the provinces last year and took a race record of 2.19¼ was placed in Lester Dore's hadns some two months ago, to be conditioned and campaigned in New England. A company of horsemen in Nova Scotia recently bought the horse for $2750 and he has been shipped back to the provinces again.—Breeder.

THE RING

BOXING GOSSIP.

Terry McGovern's showing against Jimmy Britt in New York will put him in the limelight again, but the fans generally are not carried away with the idea that he can defeat Nelson.

Britt has evidently not got over the beating that Nelson gave him. He has been slowed down and there is not the snap in his work that he showed before he ran across Nelson. While boxers of Britt's type are never heavy hitters, still in his fight there was very little force in his punches. In view of the form that McGovern has been in for some time no one expected him to do as well as he did, and it places him in line for other good matches.

To the fans it appears as if Britt is on the down grade and his showing was a big disappointment. It may be that it was on account of not being in condition, but McGovern had nothing on him in that respect, and it is safe to say that neither of them trained a day for the contest. The result of the fight will probably upset the plans of the promoters who figured Britt a sure winner and had booked him to meet Hock Keyes and Nelson at the Garden.

Now that Terry proved the best man in this fight the promoters are liable to change matters and give Terry the chance.

If the reports of the Sandy Ferguson and Gus Ruhlin fight in New York are correct, the Chelsea strong boy as usual lost his nerve after going a few rounds. That he did not foul Ruhlin is the only surprising thing about the fight.

Sandy was in good enough condition to go six rounds, and as Ruhlin is in the has-been class, Sandy ought to have got a clear win. Neither one of them showed enough ability to warrant anyone considering them seriously as contenders for the heavyweight championship title.

DOES NOT WANT AMERICAN MEAT

BERLIN, June 2.—The meat packing revelations give the meat interests of Germany powerful arguments in support of their petition to the government not to modify the meat tariffs and regulations in the event of a commercial traty being negotiated with the United States. The meat combinations as represented by the national associations of dealers and slaughterers, memorialized the government in March not even to consider relaxation of the import prohibitions. Inquiries by the Associated Press at the imperial health office elicited the fact that no official notice has been made in the matter. In the news from the United States, the agrarian press finds, abundant ammunition with which to wage the party's continuous campaign against meat imports.

Roy Likely arrived home Saturday from Edmonton, Alberta.

ACADIA STUDENTS HEAR ELOQUENT SERMON

of those hours when the Holy Grost his thoughts and he uttered that supreme language of "harping symphonies of sevenfold hallelujahs" in which his message was incarnated. It was the same spirit that filled Wordsworth when he preached peace to his generation from the high altars of the everlasting hills. It is not the statesmanshhip of an Abraham Lincoln that has made his name immortal, but his piety and reverence and nobility of soul. It is not the brilliance of the page of Ruskin that gives it life, but the fervour of the spirit that inspires it. Longfellow's message is the inspiration of every man who knows the size and value of his soul and he acknowledges;

Life is real, life is earnest

And the grave is not its goal,
Dust thou art to dust returneth,
Was not spoken of the soul."

It is this spirit of meeting difficulties that enables men to stand for liberty and freedom. It gives spiritual insight, and this coupled with intellectual brilliance and ability will make an enduring mark in the history of civilization.

The true test of civilization is not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops, but the kind of man that the country turns out. Men of tender heart and loving sympathy and gentle touch are wanted to give comfort to the world's sorrows; to help other tempted men in their battles to rescue the perishing out of their bondage. Today, the one thing sacred is the individual. No dominance attaches to the accidents and incidents of life. Only manhood counts. There is no divine right of kings, no apostolic succession, no inherited greatness. Greatness is built up of wounds, struggles, sacrifices and tears.

The true test of civilization, of greatness, of progress, is in the man. It is not so much the world as the man in it. There is a sort of continued attrition, resulting from our necessary intercourse with the world, which of itself deadens the movements of the soul; there is, moreover, a continued temptation to yield in little points, under the notion of conciliating; to indulge in little things, to forego little strictnesses, to omit little duties; and all with the idea that what looks so slight cannot be of real moment. And, by these littles, thousands, tens of thousands, perish.

On the other hand men become eminent in piety by giving heed to little things; grateful for the smallest good, watchful over the smallest error, fearful of the smallest sin, careful of the smallest truth. They become great, through counting nothing little but themselves; great in knowledge through studying the least sentence, and treasuring the least fragment, great in faith through noting God's hand in little incidents, and going to Him in little sorrows; great in holiness, through avoiding little faults. It is the little, which neglected, makes apostates; which observed, makes apostles.

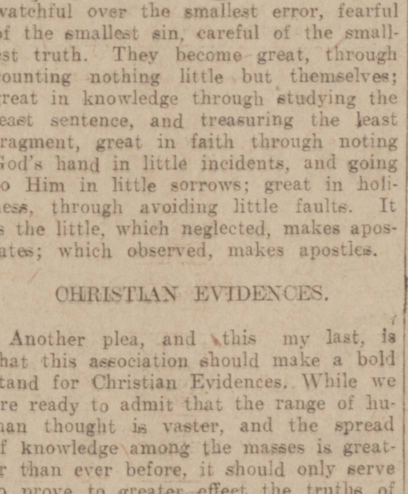

CHRISTIAN EVIDENCES.

Another plea, and this my last, is that this association should make a bold stand for Christian Evidences. While we are ready to admit that the range of human thought is vaster, and the spread of knowledge among the masses is greater than ever before, it should only serve to prove to greater effect the truths of Christianity. There is a growing intensity of democratic thought; and because of this intensity, it is of paramount importance that every follower of Christ should put first things first. There are schools of thought which teach that the evidences are crumbling by decay and they are waiting to write in glaring letters "ICHABOD." We glory in the fact that Scripture so commends itself to the conscience, and experience so bears out the Bible, that the gospel can go round the world, and carry with it, in all its travels, its own mighty credentials. And though we depreciate not, but rather confess thankfully, the worth of external evidences, we still think it the noblest provision of God, that if the external were destroyed, the internal would remain and splendidly uphold Christianity.

We are never afraid of subjecting the external evidences of Christianity to the most sifting process which our adversaries can invent. We do not receive a religion without proof; and our proof we will bring to the best touch-stones of truth. Christianity is not the grave but the field of vigorous inquiry. And we cannot see, therefore, why scepticism should claim to itself a monopoly of intellect. It would seem today that the high-road to reputation for talent is boldness in denying Christianity. Many a young man passes now-a-days for a fine and original genius, now-a-days for a fine and original genius, who could not distinguish himself in the honorable competitions of a university, who makes no way in his profession, and is nothing better than a cipher in society; but who is of so independent a spirit, that he can jeer at religion in a club-room, and of so inventive a turn that he can ply Scripture with objections a hundred times refuted.

But the evidences of Christianity are not to be set aside by a sneer. We will take our stand as on a mount thrown up in the broad waste of many generations; and one century after another shall struggle forth from the sepulchres of the past; and each, as its monarchs, and its warriors, and its prophets, walk dimly under review, all lay down a tribute to Christianity. We will have the volume of history spread out before us, and bid science arrange her manifold developments, and seek the bones of martyrs in the east and in the west, and tread upon battle plains with an empire's dust sepulchred beneath; but on whatever we turn the evidences of our religion shall look nobler and wax mightier. It were the work of a lifetime to gain even cursory acquaintance with the proofs which substantiate the claims of Christianity. We may well think ourselves warranted in contending that God has marvellously prepared for the faith of educated men. Everything has a voice to attest the truth of the gospel, the mountains of the earth have a voice, and the cities and the valleys and the tombs. The sail must be unfurled to bear the inquirer over every ocean, and the wings of the morning must carry him to the outskirts of infinite space, if he must needs accumulate facts for the arranging of the evidences of Christianity. Scepticism, whatever its boasts, walks to its conclusions over a fettered reason, and a forgotten creation. And any man who will carefully study, and think candidly, shall rise from his inquiry a believer in revelation.

I appeal to you as men, as Christians, as members of an association that is Christian to keep diligently in mind the principles for which you stand. I know full well how commonly the pride of talent, or the appetite for novelty, or the desire to be singular, or the aversion for what is Holy, will cause an unstable mind to yield itself to the specious sophistry, or the licentious effrontery of sceptical writings. I pray God that none of you be drawn within the eddies of that whirlpool of infidelity which rends into a thousand shivers the noblest barks, freighted with a rich lading of intellect and learning. I charge you to be watchful alike against the dogmas of an insolent reasoning, and the siren strains of a voluptuous poetry, and the fiend-like sneers of reprobate men, and the polished cavils of fashionable contempt. Let none of these seduce or scare you from the simplicity of the faith and breathe blightingly on your allegiance, and shrivel you into that withered and sapless thing, the disciple of a creed which owns not the divinity of Christ. The world wants men, honest, straightforward men, Christian men, true followers of the manliest man this world has ever known. In seeking the ideal of life, we cannot go beyond Jesus Christ. It has been well said that there are three fixed facts of human experience beyond which we cannot go. Of these, there are on the one side matter and force, and on the other the character of Jesus Christ. Physics cannot carry us beyond matter and force, and moral history leads us before the latter, as its grandest and most enduring fact. The one is of the intellect, the other of the heart and consecration. If you will only consecrate yourselves to God and get a larger nature and a warmer heart, you will be astonished at what a service you can give to God out of the slenderest health and the shortest life and the fewest opportunities. It is never a question of material, it is never a question of arithmetic; it is never a question of strength; it is a question of love, faith, hope, devotion, and of a great nature. With these only you can do great things, although when they are done they look so poor to lay at the feet of the great and generous Giver. But Christ will change the brick to marble, the cotton thread to a silken band, the straw basket to a golden casket, the empty life to life abundant. He is our all; our whole life is in Him; in Him or nowhere we see the Father, in Him or not at all we see the victory over sin, and the way of holiness; and continuing in one place together with an undivided thought, self-emptied, self-surrendered, we receive the promise of the Father. The Spirit will come and take of the things of Christ, and show them to us. We shall be mastered, subdued, filled, uplifted, changed, and we—no longer ourselves but Christ living in us—go, to be in this world, as Christ is in this world.

MUKDEN FORMALLY OPENED TO TRADE

TOKIO, June 2.—Mukden was formally opened yesterday to international trade. The occasion was widely celebrated. The Chinese general, Chao, and the Japanese consul general, Hagiwa, representing their respective governments, exchanged the most cordial greetings. The authorities are busy drafting harbor regulations for Tairen, the new Japanese name for Port Dalny and as soon as they are completed that port will be opened to international trade.

PRESIDENT MULLIN

(The New Freeman.)

The New Freeman congratulates Daniel Mullin, K. C., upon his election to the position of president of the St. John Law Society. Although still a young man, Mr. Mullin has enjoyed a recognized position at the bar for many years past, and his election as president is a fitting recognition of his ability by his brother barristers. Who will say that religious prejudice is not disappearing among intelligent and cultured people in this city and province? With Daniel Mullin, K. C., president of the Law Society; Richard O'Brien, chairman of the Library Commission; John Keefe, president of the Hardwaremen's Association, and Dr. J. P. McInerney, president of the New Brunswick Medical Association, not to speak of some others, it looks as though people of intelligence were getting able to understand each other and farther away from prejudices which in times past have been productive of so much evil.

MAY HAVE BEEN ROBBERY

Policemen Ira Perry and Howell found a ladder extending from the ground to an open window in the second story rear of Messrs. Elmore & Mullin's wholesale grocery and commission house on South wharf late Saturday night, and thinking that some intruder might be within the building the officers climbed the ladder and inspected the premises.

The policemen found Mr. Elmore in the office and informed him that they believed thieves had been at work. Mr. Elmore stated that he had arrived in his store at 10.30 o'clock and the police believe that his coming frightened the robbers away.

Yesterday afternoon the stock was examined, and nothing save a small tub of butter was found missing. $150, which was in the safe, was not touched.

The second floor is used for the storing of potatoes, and it is customary to leave the windows open, so as to admit the air.

The commissioners from the Presbytery of St. John who will attend the meeting of the General Assembly in London (Ont.), soon are Rev. J. J. McCaskill, Rev. L. A. McLean, Rev. A. H. Foster, Rev. James Ross, Rev. D. McOdrum and Rev. G. D. Ireland. The alternate clergymen are Rev. A. A. Graham, Rev. Frank Baird, and Rev. David Lang. The following elders were also elected to attend: Hon. J. G. Forbes, W. C. Whittaker, S. R. Jack, H. A. White, Petter Campbell, and E. E. Fraser, with the following alternates, Robert Reid, W. S. Sutton, L. H. Munns, L. W. Johnston and J. A. Moore.

An Enclosure Suggestion
Did you ever stop and figure that the two cents expended in carrying every letter you write will do more than carry that letter? It will also carry additional matter about equal in weight to the letter and envelope. This extra penny's worth of postage can be utilized by enclosing with your letters neat circulars or folders advertising your business, which, if strikingly gotten up, will often gain more attention than if mailed separately. Try this experiment once, with the right kind of printed matter—the kind we do—and you will be convinced.
