

THE GOLDEN FORD

(Conclusion.)

"So, of course, he got the best of me, as usual, and we climbed into the stage when she came along. Now, our bad luck seemed to hold, because you wouldn't find any men in that country who would stake two fellows to a wagon ride whenever they wanted to go and be pleasant about it. I'd have seen that the man got paid, even if Aggy forgot it, but the man that drove me was the surliest brute that ever growled. When you'd speak to him he'd say 'Unh—a style of thing that didn't go well in that country. I kept my mouth shut, as knowing that I didn't have the come-uppance with my spirit; but Aggy gave him the jolly. He only meant it in fun, and there was plenty of reason for it, too, for you never seen such a game of driving as that fellow put up in all your life. The Lord save us! He cut around one corner of a mountain so that for the longest second I've lived through, my left foot hung over about a thousand feet of fresh air. I'd have had time to write my will before I touched bottom if we'd gone over. I don't know as I turned pale, but hair ain't been of the same rosy complexion since."

"Well," says Aggy, in a surprised tone of voice when we got all our wheels on the ground again. "Here we are! He says 'Who'd have suspected it? I thought he was going to take the short cut down to the creek.'"

"The driver turned round with one corner of his lip lifted—a dead grin of a man man. Says he to Aggy, 'You, a funny bloke, ain't yer?'"

"Why?" says Ag, that's for you to say. It wouldn't look well coming from me, but if you pass me I'll admit I give birth to a little gem now and then."

"Our bold bluff puts on a greater swagger. 'Well, yer needn't be funny in this wagon,' says he, 'the pair of yer spongers in a ride! Yer needn't be gay—yer hear me, don't yer?'"

"Why, I hear you as plain as though you sat right next me," says Ag. "Now you listen and see if I'm audible at the same range—You're a blasted chump! he roars, in a tone of voice that would have carried forty miles. 'Did you hear that, Red?' he asks, very innocent. I was so hot at the driver's sass—the cursed lowdownness of doing a fellow a favor and then heaving it at him—that you could have hit a match on me anywhere, but to save me I couldn't help laughing—Ag had the comicallest way!"

"At that the driver begins to lurch the horses. I ain't the kind to feel faint when a cayuse gets what's countin' to him for raisin the devil, but to see that dead while this team because there wasn't anything else he dared hit, got me on my hind legs. I nestled one hand in his hair and I twisted his ugly mug back."

"Quit that!" says I.

"You let me be—I ain't hurting you," he hollers.

"That ain't to say I won't be hurting you soon," says I. "You put the bad on them horses again, and I'll boot the spine of your back up through the top of your head till it stands out like a flagstaff. Just one more touch and you get it!" says I.

"He didn't open his mouth again till we come to the river. Then he pulled up. 'This is about as far as I care to carry you two gents for nothing,' he says. 'Of course, yer two to one and I can't do nothing if you see fit to bull the thing through, but I'll say this: If either one or both of you rosters has got the little snell of a gentleman about him, he won't have to be told his company ain't wanted twice. 'Now, mind you, Ag and me didn't have the first caused thing—not grab nor blankets, nor gun, nor nothing; and this the fellow well knew.'"

"Red," says Aggy, "what do you say to pulling this thing apart and seeing what makes it act so?"

"No," says I. "Don't touch it—it might be catching. Now, you whelp!" says I to the driver, "you tell us if there's a place where we can get anything to eat around here. We'd expect to go hungry, but until we hit the place some forty miles further on, where we know there'd be plenty for any body that wanted it."

"Yes," says he, "there's a man running a shack two mile up the river."

"All right," says I. "Drive on. You've played us as dirty a trick as one man can play another. If we ever get a cinch on you, you can expect we'll pull her till the hinges snap."

"He kept shut till he got across the river, where he felt safe."

"It's all right about that cinch," he hollers back, grinning. "Only wait till you get it, yer suckers! Sponges! Beats! Dead-heads! Yah!"

"Well, a man can't catch a team of horses, and this fellow is about it, but I want to tell you he was on the anxious seat for a quarter of a mile. We tried hard."

"When we got back to where we started and could breathe again, we held a council of war."

"Now, Aggy," says I, "we're dumpe—what shall we do?"

"He sat there awhile looking around him, snapping his teeth with his thumb."

"Tell you what it is, Red," he says at last, "two might as well go mining right here. This is likely gravel, and there's a river. If that bar in front of it would have been further in the mountains, it would have been punched full of holes. It's only because it's on the road that nobody's taken the trouble to see what was in it. This road was made by cattle ranchers, that didn't know nothing about mining, and every miner that's gone over the trail had his mouth set to get further along the trail as quick as possible—just like us. Do you see that little hollow running down to the river? Well, you try your luck there. I'll give you that place as the mine, and you as the tenderfoot in the business will have all the luck. I'll make a stab where I am."

"Well, sir, it sounds queer to tell it, and it seems queerer still to think of the doing of it, but I hadn't dug two feet before I came to bed rock, and there was one heavy black chunk."

"Aggy," says I, "what's these things?"

"Glowing one over to him. He caught it and stared at it."

"Where did you get that?" says he, in a most a whisper.

"Why, out of the hole, of course!" says Aggy, laughing. "Come and take a look."

"Aggy wasn't the kind of man to go the handle over trifles, but when he had dug into that hole he turned perfectly white. His knees gave out from under him and he sat on the ground like a man in a trance, wiping the sweat off his face with a motion like a machine."

"That the devil says you?" says I, as I asked. "I thought maybe I'd done something I hadn't ought to, through ignorance of the rules and regulations of mining."

"Red," says he dead solemn. "I've mined twenty years, and from Old Mexico to Alaska, but I never saw anything that was as high to that before. Gold laying loose in chunks on top of the bed-rock is too much for me—I wish I could see this!"

"Gold!" says I. "What you talking about? What have these black hunks to do with gold?"

"The only answer he made was to lay the one I had thrown him on top of a rock and hit her a crack with a pick. Then he landed it to me. Sure enough! There, under the black was the yellow. Of course, I'd known more about the business I could have told it by the weight, but I'd never seen a piece of gold fresh off the farm before in my life. I hadn't the slightest idea what it looked like, and I learned afterwards it all looks different. Some of it shines up yellier in the start, some of it's red, and some is like ours, coated black with iron-rust."

"So I looked at Ag, and Ag looked at me, neither one of us believing anything at all for the while. I simply couldn't get hold of the thing—I ain't yet, for that matter. I expect to wake up and find it a pipe dream, and in some ways I wouldn't mind if it was. I never was so completely two men as I was on that occasion. One of 'em was hoppin' around and hollerin' at Ag, yellin' 'hoony!' and the other didn't take much interest in the proceedings at all. And it wasn't until I thought, 'Now I can pay that cursed cayote of a stage driver what I owe him!' that I got any good out of it. That brought it home to me."

THE ORIGIN OF CATARRH IS INTERESTING

But a True Cure is What You Seldom Find.

Scarcely anyone escapes catarrh in some form.

At first it is a cold.

But each day makes it more sickening and offensive.

As the nose gets plugged up, the patient has to breathe through the mouth and run the risk of letting consumption germs into the lungs.

No one in trying to cure with snuffs, atomizers or stomach medicine.

The germs are in the nostrils, the throat and eye passages. Only Catarrhoxone can reach the trouble for it goes wherever the air you breathe can go.

Into the smallest air cells, into every passage, wherever there's a sign of Catarrh—you can quickly apply Catarrhoxone.

Sore spots are healed, inflammation subdued, the mucous membranes are cleansed and strengthened, the cause of the trouble being cured by Catarrhoxone, thorough cure quickly follows.

Poosh to put off when cure is so handy. Your druggist sells Catarrhoxone, two months' treatment, $1.00.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER

ST. GEORGE, S. C., April 3. —Mrs. Nora Bivens, wife of State Senator Bivens, of Dorchester county, was tried and acquitted in the Dorchester court today of the charge of murder. Last fall a Henry Eddler named Greenbaum entered Mrs. Bivens' room and refused to leave when the neighbors sought to eject him, asserting Mrs. Bivens sent for him. Mrs. Bivens shot and killed him. She testified Greenbaum made advances to her.

ANOTHER STRIKE

MILWAUKEE, April 3. —One thousand union men employed on the construction work of the Allis-Chalmers Company's new shops at West Allison walked out today because they allege John F. Harvey, one of their number, was brutally assaulted and without provocation by five guards hired to prevent trouble between the union and non-union men at the shops. All construction work is completely tied up.

BURNED TO DEATH

HARTFORD, Conn., April 3. —Amelia, the four year old daughter of Antonio Scito, was fatally burned by a bonfire early tonight near her home and died in the hospital after three hours of suffering.

MRS. WILLITON SPEAKS

From her home at 29 Gilmour Ave., Toronto, Ont., Mrs. J. Williton tells of her new found cure for neuralgia and muscular pain.

"I have long been troubled with neuralgia, and Nerville has been my only relief. When rubbed on it seems to sink right to the core of the pain and gives instant ease. I can honestly recommend Nerville for any pain or ache—it's a cure."

"Can't help curing, it's so strong and penetrating. Sinks right to the core of the pain and prevents it returning. Don't forget the name—'Polson's Nerville,' and refuse any substitute."

The Express Agents' Strike.

The strike among the Canadian Express Company's agents along the I. C. R. appears to be marking time and the outlook is that there will not be any important development until the 14th inst. H. C. Creighton, superintendent for the Atlantic division of the Canadian Express Company, said last night that he expects to see matters remain as they are until that date.

J. A. Thibierge, of Rogersville, Northumberland county, general secretary of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, left the city yesterday.

Chicago printers have inaugurated a movement for organization against "government by injunction." It is proposed to support only such candidates for political office as shall pledge themselves to vote for anti-injunction measures.

How will you cold be tonight? Worse, probably. How about tomorrow? The trouble is, colds always tend downward. Stop this downward tendency with Ayer's Pectoral. Your doctor will tell you why it can do this. Ask him all you can. Ask him if he has anything better for coughs and colds. Then take Ayer's Pectoral. It will cure you, whatever it is.

Ayer's Pectoral is a small, handy, and effective remedy for all the common ailments of the throat and lungs. It is a sure cure for colds, coughs, and bronchitis. It is a small, handy, and effective remedy for all the common ailments of the throat and lungs. It is a sure cure for colds, coughs, and bronchitis.

LEAVES WITH GOOD WISHES OF MANY

Presentations to C. H. Abbott on Leaving for Western Position to Which He Has Been Promoted.

C. H. Abbott left last evening for Boston, en route to Winnipeg, where he has accepted a very responsible position as manager of the R. E. T. Pringle Company, Ltd. Mr. Abbott, who has been the company's manager here for some years, will be much missed in St. John, and the regard in which he is held has been shown in the past few days.

His friends tendered him a farewell dinner in White's dining hall on Monday night, when guests were wished him, among those present being V. C. Curry and Geo. T. Douglas, of Amherst, and W. F. McLaren, of Montreal. During the evening Mr. Abbott was made the recipient of a very handsome chiming clock. There was a round of good speeches, in which much good fortune was wished him, and he responded with expression of his best thanks.

Again, yesterday, there was a presentation, for a number of friends met in his office and presented to him a handsome breast pin, the presentation being made by S. P. Gower, who is a friend of his. The pin was a token of the esteem in which he is held, and the recipient has been very pleased.

Mr. Abbott five years ago took charge of the business of the R. E. T. Pringle Company, Ltd., here, and by ability and constant devotion to the company's interest he has succeeded in establishing a large business for his firm. His good work now finds its reward in his promotion to a larger field in the west. The Telegraph joins many in wishing Mr. Abbott continued success in his new surroundings.

WAS VERY PLEASANT

Hon. H. A. McKeown Excellent Host at Gathering to Introduce New Sun Manager.

Few men have made the acquaintance of representative citizens of St. John under more agreeable auspices than did John S. Leighton, the new manager of the Daily Sun, last evening.

Hon. H. A. McKeown had extended an invitation to a large number of gentlemen friends to meet Mr. Leighton, at his home Queen Square, and the invitation was very generally accepted. There must have been more than 100 well known citizens in the spacious rooms from a little after 8 o'clock till after 11. The affair was entirely informal, and the guests mingled freely and moved about and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Among those present The Telegraph man observed D. J. Purdy, M. P. P. E. Lantam, M. P. P., Ald. MacLachlan and Bullock, Hon. R. J. Ritchie, Recorder Skinner, Chief Clerk, A. O. Skinner, Edward Sears, John A. Chesley, Dr. Silas Alward, L. P. D. Tilley, Dr. H. G. Addy, Dr. Berryman, Dr. G. H. B. Addy, H. C. Tilley, R. T. H. Leighton, Mr. MacLachlan, C. B. Allen, G. S.
