OPERA SEASON CLOSES TONIGHT

The opera season closes at York Theatre tonight, the latter half of this week's plans being abandoned because of the summoning of some of the leading members of the New York Co. to new duties in the states. It was intended to sing The Chimes of Normandy on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, but Manager Armstrong is forced to forego this idea. Therefore this evening's performance of Sousa's "El Capitan will be a farewell to the popular singers, and a bumper house is almost assured. Last evening the piece was accorded an ovation by a highly fashionable and large-sized audience. The matinee this afternoon is a large one.

A FIRST CLASS SHOW

The Vitagraph Company still continues to enjoy its good attendance at the Opera House. New pictures were plentiful as well as songs. Harry Mayo appears to have an endless supply of the latest. Last night he introduced two very beautiful and catchy songs entitled: "When the Morning Glories Twine Around the Door," and "I'll be waiting in the gloaming sweet Genevieve."

CHAMPIONSHIP BILLIARDISTS AT PLAY

(By Thomas J. Gallagher.)

NEW YORK, April 14—Jacob Schaefer and Willie Hoppe were the winners in the games of the world's championship billiard tournament played Thursday. Schaefer won easily from Morningstar in the afternoon. At night Hoppe defeated Cutler. Morningstar did not give the "Wizard" the semblance of a contest. Cutler, however, made the evening game interesting until near its end. The results sustained public opinion. Nevertheless, those who attended the games witnessed entertaining performances.

Schaefer was more than usually unsteady. He made the high run of the tournament and an average that did not harmonize. The most daring wielder of a cue that ever lived, he indulged in periods of bewildering brilliancy that more than compensated for a lack of uniformity and amused and enthused spectators. Two of his runs, one of 137 and another of 94, presented gems of conception and execution by an artist whose genius and skill are simply amazing and whose style is inimitable.

So experienced a patron of the game and backer of players as "Al" Smith declared he had never before seen billiards that equalled the run of 137. That it was beautiful beyond description must be conceded, but from a professional view the shorter run was even better. It was of a more varied character and developed several extremes of difficulty that only a veritable wizard could have mastered. Either run was sufficient to arouse manifestations of admiration. And either was strongly corroborative of the reports from Chicago that "Jake" is playing better than at any time in his career.

Lithe and sinuous as ever, he is able to ignore the bridge, reach all over the table with either hand and steady himself to make, with apparent ease, masse shots that look almost impossible. That a man of so short stature can reach, wriggle and do contortion acts over a billard table without any indication of a strain is alone wonderful.

"Willie" Hoppe is another player who invariably essays the "right shot." He ignores safety. Any opponent who endeavors to check him by strategic operations will waste time and opportunities. Already a champion at 18-1 style of balkline, whether he is invincible at 18-2 is a matter that will in a measure be determined by the present tournament. That he is in public opinion the equal if not the superior of any other expert in the tourney is evidenced by the fact that in betting circles he is a prime favorite. Possessing remarkable skill, an admirable disposition and supreme confidence, Hoppe plays differently from any other living expert. He does not play closely, but, depending on his general execution, keeps the balls rather wide apart and moving; and manages to secure and retain positions which yield respectable runs and averages.

When Hoppe has to deal with a bad break he generally plays to count. If there is a chance for a run he will run to count, that chance [illegible]. If the line position is [illegible] room to every other consideration. [illegible] he does not play for the line, he does it frequently and holds it well without running so closely as some of the older experts, and will not overlook a chance to get it. As a matter of fact, he is cool and calculating and does not overlook any situation that arises in a game. There is an attractive, if not inspiring celerity, in his style of playing. His perception is keen and his action prompt.

FIGHT TONIGHT.

Mike (Twin) Sullivan and Rube Smith fight at Pueblo, Colo., tonight. Smith has done all his fighting in the west, where he is considered a great boxer. The western sports know that he has won from some good men, but they believe that Mike will at least get a draw.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and even Labrador may be called on during the summer to supply the demand, there being no import duty on ice.
VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass, April 16—Brig Boston Marine (Br) Bridgewater, N. S., for New York, split staysails and two jibs during the gale yesterday on Nantucket shoals. She sailed from here this morning.
WESTBROOK, Conn., April 16—The schr Nettie Cushing, which went ashore on Corn Field sand shoals a mile northeast of Corn Field light, Sunday, will be a total loss as she broke in two the day after her sides opened. An effort will be made to save part of her cargo of 1600 barrels of lime which was consigned to a New York firm. Capt. Calloch and crew went ashore soon after the vessel grounded. The vessel was owned by A. J. Bird, of Rockland, Me., and built in Thomaston, Me., in 1867. Her gross tonnage was 117 and net 84. Her length was 77 feet.

BRITISH ROYALTY IN GREECE

HEAVY BUYING OF IRON AND STEEL

Great Activity in Pig Iron ---- Rail Prices Raised -- Orders for Steel.

NEW YORK, April 17—The belief in the settlement of the coal miners' strike stimulated buying of pig iron last week, and during the last three or four days transactions have aggregated about 150,000 tons of foundry, forge and steel-making grades. Not since the middle of January, when the steel companies bought very heavily, has there been as great activity. Pipe works have been the largest purchasers, taking about 80,000 tons of foundry and forge, mainly for shipment during the second quarter of the year. Steel plants, both in the Central West and in the East, were the next largest buyers, taking between 40,000 and 50,000 tons of Bessemer and basic grades. The balance, aggregating 30,000 to 35,000 tons, was distributed among manufacturers of pumps, textile and other machinery manufacturers, railroad equipment, general and special foundries.

In the face of the unprecedented production it is surprising how well prices are maintained. Because of local conditions the Eastern markets have been somewhat above the other sections of the country, but it is significant that the large tonnages have been sold at concessions from the prices previously asked by the producers who took the business. For instances, the four or five large Southern companies who have been endeavoring to hold the market at $14.50, Birmingham basis, under an agreement accepted 50c per ton less to secure the business offered, since which time other Southern producers have shaded this price 25c to 50c per ton, so that New England consumers have been able to obtain Alabama and Tennessee iron on the basis of $13.50 Birmingham, thus enabling Southern producers to compete with the lake furnaces who have been capturing the New England business heretofore on the basis of $16.50 foundry for No. 2 at the furnace.

Steel companies in the Central West have either purchased or have under option nearly all of the surplus steel-making iron available for the second quarter, so that it seems probable that prices will be maintained.

RAIL PRICES RAISED.

NEW YORK, April 17—The Tennessee Coal & Iron Company has raised the price of steel rails from $28 to $29 a ton for deliveries in 1907. The entire output of the company for 1906 has been sold, and it is understood that a considerable part of the 1907 output has been engaged. Some orders have been taken at the new price, and one Western railroad has offered to take a big part of the remainder.

ORDERS FOR STEEL MATERIAL.

NEW YORK, April 17—There were a host of small contracts for structural and fabricated steel placed last week, and while the aggregate tonnage was not very heavy the character of the business indicates that there is widespread activity among manufacturing industries, and as such is more significant than the placing of large contracts by great financial interests. Since last Wednesday there have been contracts placed for warehouses, extensions to steel plants, brass foundries, iron mills and highway bridges, which are of special interest.

STOCK MARKET CHAFES AT EVERY RESTRAINT

New York Evening Post's Comment on the Money Stringency and the Attitude of Wall Street.

(New York Evening Post.)

One fact that has been rather obvious all through the money stringency is that the stock market chafes at restraint; it is held in leash, but is constantly running forward the length of its tether, only to halt unwillingly when the noose tightens. Nor is the stock market to blame for its disposition. The story of American prosperity is uninterrupted, and financial markets consider it their vocation to "discount" prosperity. Just what allowance must be made, in its calculations, for the mere fact of tight money? This, it will readily be seen, is a curious problem which is working itself out before our eyes. It is natural, under such circumstances, that Europe's reserves of capital should be looked to by many eyes as the real solution of the difficulty. That Europe itself has not rejected such a possibility, has been plainly enough shown by correspondents writing in these columns from the various foreign markets. Yet they too seem to be oddly at a loss what to make of our money market's gyrations. The most that any one yet feels safe in saying is, that in the natural order of events, stringency ought to relax between now and midsummer.

The "fifty-million-dollar brokers' bank," which some of the newspapers have been exploiting to the admiration of the financial world, is one of those topics which ought not to have been wasted at a time when "scare heads" on other matters are abundant, but should have been reserved for the trying days of August. There can be no doubt that many Stock Exchange houses were harshly used by their banks in the recent "money squeeze." It is probable that, on occasion, an already high call money rate was forced higher because banks called in loans outstanding at the lower figure and placed them again only at the top rate of the day. A very nice question of ethics may be drawn out of these transactions. Exactly where, for instance, does the right of a bank to follow rates on a stringent money market end? In the worst day of the panic of 1893, when the late Frederick D. Tappen had charge of the Stock Exchange loans in behalf of all our clearing house institutions, he refused to lend except at the high rates bid in the urgent pressure of the day. This position was maintained on the express ground that no other way could be found to discover what borrowers most genuinely needed the limited available supply. It must frankly be admitted that it is not at all pleasant for a Stock Exchange house to have its call loans snatched away at one moment only to see the same money offered again at a higher rate the next. A bank which does this ought to be ready to say to its customers, beforehand, just what it means to do.

One unfortunate part of this controversy is that it leads to confusion of an action which emphasizes tight money, with conditions which caused the stringency. Seeing that recall of loans, under the circumstances above described, helped to a 30 per cent. money market, the lighter-headed element leaps to the conclusion that the entire rise in money resulted from conspiracy among the banks. This theory is absurd, and the man who shapes his actions by it will come to grief. As for the "brokers' bank with $50,000,000 capital" (double the size of any bank in the United States, and half as large again as the Bank of France) the wicked caviller will ask why stock brokers, with this amount of ready capital lying idle, need to worry about the rate for call loans in Wall Street.

A STRIKING SIGN

of superiority is found by analysis, when they subject this choice spirit to thorough examination. They declare it to be mellowed to the perfection of flavour by great age, thus proving excellence. Inferior spirit refuses to develop no matter how long stored
