THE ART OF BLISS CARMAN

An English Writer Styles Him the Wordsworth of Canada.

A writer who signs himself "Aramis," in an article in Canada of May 26th (the new illustrated London weekly) pays this high tribute to Bliss Carman:

"Not one of the sister states in the great Imperial League of free and independent British nations possesses a poetic literature which can be compared with that of Canada, either in achievement or promise. Australia has produced several makers of songs and ballads (in which the lines gallop along like Virgil's 'quad-ruplantia putem sonitu quatit Ungula campum'), but hitherto the wider vision has been denied to her poets. New Zealand has only one poetic voice, and South Africa is no better off. In the Frederickton school of poets alone Canada has an artistic brotherhood, the like of which has not existed since the decadence of the 'Lake School' (divided in those latter days to the rev. H. B. Ravensley, that machine for turning out tiresome sonnets) in the mother country, where 'the poetry of beauty, sincerity, and elation' is out of fashion for the time being. Of the idea of the wealth of this treasury of Canadian poetry—of which 150 copies have been printed for this country, and are to be obtained from John Murray—which certainly entitles its author to call himself (if he chooses) the Wordsworth of Canada—and sometimes more than the Wordsworth, because of the youthful vitality, rejoicing in open-air life, and the labors of the camp and the delights of the road nowhither, in every simple strenuous line."

ROY DEMMINGS FOUGHT HARD

But the Whirling Waters of the Yak-i-ma Were too Much for Him and He Drowned.

BRIGGS' CORNER, June 6.—Roy E. Demmings, son of Rufus Demmings, of Gaspereaux, Queens County, who left home seven years ago for the Pacific slope, met a sad death by drowning on the 23rd ult. while engaged in stream driving on the Yakima river in the state of Washington. The Yakima, which is a tributary of the Columbia takes its rise in the snow-clad Cascade mountains, is a somewhat rapid and deep stream abounding in eddies and whirlpools which are a source of much danger to the men engaged in driving lumber. The deceased who was floating on a log some distance from his companions, was carried by the strong current into one of those treacherous whirlpools, was seen to lose his balance and fall into the icy water. He came to the surface but once and although a good swimmer was rendered powerless against the chilly waters that swept him to a sudden death. His comrades who hurried to the scene could see the form of a man floating beneath the surface, recovered the lifeless body in about fifteen minutes after the accident. Lock McDougall who was from the same place here had the body embalmed at Ellensburg and shipped home to his parents who have the deep sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement. The remains of the deceased, who was about 30 years of age arrived by the late train Saturday night, and were interred in the family burying ground at the Forks on Sunday morning, June 3rd inst. where a large concourse of friends and neighbors gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed. The services were conducted by the Rev. W. E. McIntyre, D. D. who preached an excellent sermon from Col. 3: 2.

The four brothers of the deceased were all present, viz. Warren and Randolph, of Ellensburg, N. S.; Rev. A. Willard Demmings, who has charge of the Baptist church at Andover, and Horatio Demmings, who lives at Hibbing, Minn. Also his only sister, Winifred, who is a trained nurse in Boston, Mass. arrived home in time to be present at the funeral.

Rev. John S. McFadden of Rochester Theological Seminary will preach at Briggs Corner Public Hall next Sunday forenoon, i. e. June 10th, and the Sunday following Rev. Milton Addison will commence regular services in all the Baptist churches in this vicinity.

Yesterday being the 3rd of June was the third anniversary of the great fire which wiped out Briggs' Corner almost from existence. It originated from no forced fire, as was then currently reported, but from an old fire-trap of a mill which was the death knell of the village.
