THE JEWS UNDER THE RUSSIAN CZARS

(Mail and Empire.)

As the sparks fly upward, the Jews are born to persecution. Long before the birth of Christ their religious beliefs had made them intolerable to pagan kings, and afterwards, when Christianity had become firmly established, they were regarded, in many quarters, as little better than heathen Turks. There is hardly a Christian country that has not on its records some dark pages of Jewish persecution; but the black record of Russia is approached by no other nation. There the Jews have been bullied and butchered for hundreds of years, and the hatred with which they are regarded appears to be as strong as ever. The news from Odessa announces that once more the hooligans of Holy Russia are at their favorite work.

EARLY JEWISH COLONIES.

History relates that Jews had established themselves along the Caspian Sea and the lower Volga as long ago as 740 B. C. Tradition credits them with founding the City of Kiev, and undoubtedly at one time they preponderated on the lower Don, the Dneiper and the Volga. In modern or Muscovite Russia their presence is first recorded in 1471. They had swarmed up from the south, and had embarked upon an aggressive Judaizing campaign. About 1500 the first restrictive laws were enacted to check the spread of the Jewish heresy among the faithful in Russia. From this it would appear that the proselytizing among the Jews was responsible for the first official action against them, although, privately, they may have been baited, as they were in other parts of Europe.

DROWNED IN THE DON.

Ivan the Terrible was the first Russian monarch to treat his Jewish subjects harshly, and he acted under the severest pressure from Western Europe. When this monarch conquered the City of Polotsk, he drowned in the Don all the Jews who refused to embrace Christianity. But hostility to the Jews was far from being a fixed policy with the Russian people at that time, and, as a rule, they were merely treated as foreigners. Under the first of the Romanoffs the Jews from Poland were forbidden to enter Russia. Peter the Great, undoubtedly, disliked the race, but nevertheless he made a Jew the chancellor of his empire. Under his daughter, Catherine I., the persecution was active, for the Queen hated them with fanatical fury. In her reign they were all ordered out of Russia. Probably a good lawyer could prove that the presence in Russia of any Jew is illegal today, for Catherine's orders have been repeated from time to time, and it is likely that some of the decrees are still in force.

THE REAL PROBLEM CREATED.

Elizabeth was also anti-Jewish, but her successor, the great Catherine II., moderated some of the harsh enteotments against the Jews, although in her reign took place the first of those events that led to the annexation of Poland, and the creation of the real Jewish Problem of Russia. Heretofore, the Jews were numerous only in the southern districts, and in other parts of Russia were few and nomadic. But Poland had a vast Jewish population, which, in Catherine's reign, came under Russian law. The empress, however, took a tolerant view of their religious belief, and set her face agains their spoliation. About this time we hear, for the first time, the charge that the Jews were taking the business away from the Christians. In 1790 the Moscow merchants protested to the empress that they were cutting prices.

UNDER ALEXANDER I.

Under Paul I the Jews were not severely treated, and this unhappy monarch was engaged in the problem of framing laws for their protection when death ended his work. Alexander I. was also favorably disposed toward them, and relieved them of some of the disabilities they labored under. It was during the thirty years' reign of his successor, Nicholas, that their greatest sufferings were endured. Nearly one-half of all the Russian laws restricting the occupation and the residence of Jews were made in his reign. It must be added, however, that Nicholas' sole desire was to convert them to Christianity. A baptized Jew had privileges that even an orthodox Russian did not possess. He was exempted from taxation for three years. Criminal Jews, professing Christianity, were lightly dealt with also.

THE PERSECUTION.

But while every inducement was held out to turn them to Christianity, those who remained obdurate were sternly dealt with. They were ruthlessly ordered into the army, in greater proportion than Christians, and more than ever restricted to the Pale. The king's evangelical campaign, was also carried on by means of schools, where it was hoped the young Jews would be converted. Alexander II. did not keep up the persecution, and the Jews benefited by the many reforms that the Crimean War had shown to be necessary. But cross-currents of Panslavism and Nihilism almost nullified the emperor's good intentions, and under Pobiedonostseff and Alexander III. they suffered as under Alexander I. From Moscow and other large cities they were banished, fully 14,000 of them being driven out of the former, and crowded back into the Pale, to add to the poverty and suffering there. No wonder that in the last two decades of the nineteenth century a million of them left Russia. Under the present czar they have been massacred with a determination unequaled before, and now the indications are that they are about to undergo another terrible ordeal.

D. D. MANN TALKS OF PURCHASE

Says the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Road Will Largely Augment Traffic.

(Montreal Star.)

D. D. Mann is in town today in connection with the many interests involved in the Mackenzie, Mann undertakings. In chatting with a Star reporter he confirms the report of the purchase of the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan road from Regina to Prince Albert. The railway passes through Saskatoon and is in good condition.

The Canadian Northern will thus be in a position to handle an immense quantity of grain, largely in excess of last year's figures.

Mr. Mann is as optimistic as ever, and declares his unbounded faith in every proposition which tends to opening up the great Northwest. He leaves town this evening, and it is understood that he will very shortly leave for the Northwest.

The Canadian Pacific Railway have just completed their plans for running into Saskatoon and for the building of a passenger depot and freight shed in the town, and also for the right of way to the sites. In connection with the right of way there were 186 lots of land required, the total price paid being $78,000.

The C. P. R. line east will cross the Saskatchewan river into Saskatoon on a new bridge of concrete and steel at the government road allowance known as 33rd street west, until it crosses the Prince Albert branch, when it turns southwest, straight to the station grounds at 23rd street and Avenue A. From the station ground it will proceed west on the line along which steel has already been laid for some miles.

The passenger depot will be on the west side of their track, and the freight depot on the east side, some distance north.

The main yard, shops, round house and general freight terminals will be on the east side of the river. The yards, the officers of the company assert, will be the most extensive on the C. P. R. system west of Winnipeg.

Two lines from Winnipeg and the east, the Kirkella and Northwestern, will come into Saskatoon. From the west the Lacombe and Wetaskiwin lines will join at a point west of here, and run into the city.

The C. P. R. will extend the Soo line on up to the Elbow, and meet the Lacombe line there. It is also its definite purpose to build a line from Saskatoon to Regina, and also to build to the southwest into and through the rich Goose Lake wheat lands.

Germain Street Baptist Church

The Rev. Merritt L. Gregg, B. A., of Providence (R. I.), the talented young preacher who occupied the pulpit of the Germain street Baptist church last Sunday will preach in the same church tomorrow, Sunday. Mr. Gregg is a forceful speaker; and his voice is deep, full and pleasing. The choir will again be assisted by the Pine Street Male Quartette of Lewiston (Me.), at both services. Their singing last Sunday was very fine and highly enjoyed by the large congregations that heard them. The new pastor of the church, Rev. W. W. McMaster, will arrive in the city on Thursday next, and will commence his pastorate on Sunday, Aug. 5.

General Lord Aylmer, who is inspector-general of the dominion forces, arrived here from St. Andrews yesterday, accompanied by Major Eaton, A. D. C. Today he will inspect the 62nd Fusiliers and he will remain in the city throughout tomorrow.

In an interview yesterday afternoon Lord Aylmer expressed the opinion that St. John should have some fortifications, and suggested redoubts should be built at Partridge Island. He also thought that the new drill hall should be built here as soon as possible.

He paid a compliment to the Canadian soldier by saying that they were not barrack soldiers but were always to be found ready when there is any fighting in prospect.

THINKS MYSTERY OF CANCER IS SOLVED

Official Announcement Made That Experiments on Mice Make Cure Possible.

LONDON, July 27.—As the result of experiments with mice, the superintendent of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund Laboratory announced that the prospects of discovering the mystery of the origin of cancer were more hopeful than ever.

Experts, he added, are now able to reproduce in mice all the features of spontaneous cancer and to protect healthy mice from the consequences by inoculation. Out of a hundred mice inoculated to produce the disease ninety developed tumors, but in the protected animals no tumors occurred. It had also been found that the body fluids of protected mice injected into mice with experimental cancer retarded the growth of well established tumors.

The superintendent pointed out that the experiments must be carried further before it can be ascertained whether they will have a bearing on the treatment of the disease in mankind.

DESIRABLE INVESTMENTS

Just three weeks ago a big land purchase was consummated by the Grand Trunk Pacific for property in Saskatoon. This purchase has been followed this week by another one for 180 acres in the heart of this rapidly growing western city by the C. P. R., which demonstrates conclusively that Saskatoon is to become the principal railway centre and commercial metropolis of Western Canada.

All eyes are now pointing to Saskatoon, and it is important that intending investors in real estate should make early reservations of lots, to be secured from "The Northwestern Land and Investment Co." Canada Life Building, city.
