

CUPID AND THE GREAT GOD BUDD

By BRADFORD K. DANIELS

Henderson turned the soda water into his whisky, and absently watched the bubbles rush to the surface with that peculiar fizzy sound so grateful to the thirsty white man in the tropics. "You asked me about that young missionary, Carr, who came out on the boat with us from Southampton?" he said, turning the glass slowly between his thumb and second finger. "Well, he's dead."

"The devil!" exclaimed his companion, rising to a sitting posture from the bed-like rattan chair upon which he had been reclining after a hard day's ride in the hills.

Henderson sampled his Scotch and soda and looked remorselessly into the far corner of the bungalow. "Yes, six months ago," he added musingly, "it's the queerest story I ever ran up against, Dutton. I'd give a year's pay to know the rights of it."

The man in the easy chair took another cigar from his pocket, lighted it with the butt of the one he had just been smoking, and then settled back expectantly.

"You see," Henderson resumed, "Carr and I happened to be sent to the same station—went up country together, in fact. The fellow wasn't in the town twenty-four hours before he threw down the gauntlet to Buddhism by opening a mission within a stone's throw of the gate of the temple."

"Did he still wear that yellow celluloid collar?" asked his companion, blowing a smoke-ring toward the cotton-covered ceiling.

"I think he did. Well, the sound of those tinkling temple bells and the sight of those lean, white-robed priests, as they went up to do their little turn before the lopsided image of Buddha, stirred up Carr worse than a red rag does a bull. One evening we were having a quiet smoke—or rather, I was doing the quiet smoke—for the both of us, as Carr clasped to him, along with women, wine and the devil—when the priests struck up that mournful howl of theirs which means that some one of high caste is dead. You may imagine my surprise when Carr sprang from his chair, and rushing out into the street, stood shaking his fist at the whole outfit."

"I know it's all nonsense, Henderson, and I should be ashamed of myself," said he, apologetically, when he returned and saw me laughing at him; but they are so bigoted and unreasonable, and go on with their unholy ceremonies just as if a minister of the Gospel were not in their midst. I sometimes think that if I had the power I would call down fire and brimstone upon the accursed place and destroy it."

"I looked closely into his face. In a flash the precipice ahead of the poor devil appeared to me, and for the next few moments I thought harder than I ever did before in my life."

"Look here, Carr," I said at length, "you're in the wrong part of the West Side among the low-caste people, and you'll make ten converts to where you make one here."

"Another wife of the devil!" he exclaimed, flourishing his long, thin arm theatrically, and speaking in that shrill, nasal voice which used to get on our nerves on shipboard. "I'll scourge them from the temple as Christ did the money-changers! I'll—I'll—"

But apparently he could think of no greater chastisement, and dropped panting into his chair.

"It was six weeks before I saw Carr again, although Bataan, my cook, told me that my friend had made into the temple one afternoon, and with a mighty war-whoop, picked up the blessed Budd and started off with it. Of course the infuriated priests caught him and would have done for him if a woman hadn't joined in the mix-up."

"A woman, eh?" remarked the man in the easy chair, leaning back and looking from his cigar with the tip of his little finger.

Through the heavy night air came the vibrating boom of a steamer's whistle, the P. and O. mail was ready for off. A momentary shadow of regret fell upon Henderson's face as this summons to the white man in the Orient to come home reached him; but he turned a deaf ear to it, as he had done many times before in his eventful life, and resumed his story.

"The next time I called round, I'd no sooner set eyes on Carr than I saw that something extraordinary had happened. In place of that death-and-judgment look of his, which always made me feel as though I was going to get cholera and die before morning, was a grin that had done you good to see."

"You are just the man I've been looking for, Henderson," he said, kicking me a chair in an off-hand way that made me forget the ringer on board the Kowchowang. "I want you to marry me—you are a magistrate, I understand."

"Marry you! I exclaimed, dumbfounded. "Why, who in—"

"I am going to marry one of my converts," he broke in; "the young lady who saved my life that afternoon in the temple, when I attempted to carry off the unholy idol before which those godless heathen bow down."

"For a moment the old wild-eyed fanatic was before me; but the grin soon reasserted itself. Yes, I am going to marry that girl, God bless her! and she's the dearest and sweetest little woman in the world, Henderson, just the very dearest and sweetest. You see, I never had time at school to think about women, and now God has sent me this one as a reward for unswerving devotion to duty."

"I looked at him closely to make sure that he hadn't gone clean off his rocker; but he seemed sane enough. 'You are sure you won't regret it?' I ventured."

"Look here, Henderson," drawing up his chair and placing a large bonny hand—how I wish now that I could forget it!—upon my knee, "I love her—God alone knows how I love her!—and I'm sure you won't deny a poor fellow like me the only real happiness that has ever come into his life."

"He looked at me with an appeal in his eyes that completely bowled me over. 'All right, old man,' I said, slapping him on the back before I thought, in a way that made him cough; 'I'll back you to a finish, or my name isn't Henderson.' 'Just then a sedan chair came swinging around the corner of the street, and at sight of it Carr sprang to his feet. 'Come, come!' said he in an awestruck whisper."

"Well, sir, I've seen samples of about all the pretty women from Piccadilly to Yokohama, and if that wasn't just the nearest little thing that ever put pearls in her ears and wore silk, then I don't know a Port Said dancing girl from a Straits nigger. When she came in front of the mission, she flashed Carr a smile that gives me a queer feeling yet, whenever I think of it, and you know what a hardened old sinner I am, Dutton. After the little blue-and-gold chair had passed, and Carr had come out of his trance, he told me the whole yarn, from the day when she put her arms about him in the temple to save his life until she joined his mission and was disowned by her people."

"Well, Carr lost no time, and inside of a month I went round to the mission to tie the knot, as he insisted upon being married in the chapel. 'Pon my word, Dutton, it was like lying a princess to a cabby. She was decked out in soft yellow shiny stuff, with a rope of pearls about her wonderful hair, and when she entered the whitewashed room with that royal way of hers it seemed to get dark in there, just in contrast. Carr came in dressed in that old black suit, glared at the elbows and knees, and he preached in on shipboard, and when he had taken one of the dainty little hands I read the marriage ceremony. When they knelt together, and she bowed her shapely head beside his, it seemed a downright sin for such an exquisite creature to be mated to a raw-boned farmer with no finer instincts than a buffalo."

Best Kidney Remedy Known To Science

For pain in the back—scanty urine—highly colored urine—irritated bladder—irregular bowels—bad stomach—there is nothing that will bring such quick relief and so certain a cure as FRUIT-A-TIVES.

These marvelous tablets are nature's natural remedy for irritated or weakened kidneys. They act directly on the kidneys—soothe the inflamed membranes—clean, heal and strengthen the organs—and help them to new vigor with their work.

Often kidney trouble is not due to any organic defect in the kidneys. If the bowels are constipated—if the skin does not throw off the tissue waste of the body—then these impurities are carried to the kidneys. In a vain endeavor to rid the system of impurities, the kidneys are overworked—the blood vessels are dilated—the nerves inflamed. That causes a host of kidney troubles.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are the natural and logical cure for all kidney troubles. They are made of fruit and tonic—are pleasant to take—and a guaranteed cure when faithfully used. See a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price if your druggist does not handle them.

FRUIT-A-TIVES LIMITED - OTTAWA.

THE EXHIBITION

The St. John exhibition will be formally opened in the amusement hall at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening. The speakers will include A. O. Skinner, president of the exhibition association, who will deliver an address of welcome; Premier Tweedie, Attorney-General Pugsley, J. D. Hazen, M. P., and Hon. L. P. Farris, all of whom will speak in behalf of the province.

The speaker on behalf of the city will be Mayor Seely, and the speaker on behalf of the dominion will be Hon. H. R. Emmerson, minister of railways, and Dr. J. W. Daniel, M. P., and Dr. A. A. Stockton, M. P., the city's representatives.

After the speeches, the exhibition will be declared open by Lieut.-Governor Snowball.

The following are the judges:—Horses—Dr. J. Standish, Walkerton (Ont.). Beef cattle and sheep—C. M. MacRae, Ottawa. Swine—T. H. Mason, Stratfordville (Ont.). Dairy cattle—W. F. Stephens, Huntingdon (Que.). Poultry—S. Butterfield, Windsor (Ont.). Butter and cheese—H. A. Olive, Montreal.

Mr. Mitchell is also in charge of the butter making competition.

His Life Threatened

Moncton, Aug. 28.—Percy Myers, committed for trial yesterday on a charge of grievously assaulting W. P. Jones, was today released on bail, himself in $1,000 and two sureties of $500 each. The order for bail was granted by Judge Hanington.

Provincial Constable Belyea, of Shediac, who has been making war against Scott act violators in Moncton and different parts of the country, has received an anonymous letter, warning him unless he stops prosecuting certain parties he will meet an untimely end. The constable claims he knows the source of the letter, and will be on guard.

BANK FAILS FOR $10,000,000

Reports Falsified by President

---Thought to be a Suicide---
Loaned More Than $5,000,000 to One Individual.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—The Real Estate Trust Company, organized in 1888, the depository for nearly $10,000,000 of the funds of the Presbyterian church, and holding $300,000 of the money of the city of Philadelphia and $175,000 of state deposits, today closed its doors. The failure was caused by heavy loans made by the late president, Frank K. Hipple, to Adolf Segal, a promoter, on insufficient security. A desperate effort was made to save the institution by the board of directors through an appeal to the Clearing House Association, but that body declined to subscribe a guarantee fund of $7,000,000 because of insufficient security. The liabilities are placed at $10,000,000, with quick assets of $3,500,000, and doubtful collateral amounting to $8,000,000.

George H. Earle, jr., president of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, was appointed receiver, and in a statement to the public expressed the hope that he may soon be able to recommend a plan to the depositors that will better serve their interests and terminate his services.

President Hipple was always regarded as a conservative financier, but following his sudden death last Friday, an investigation by the directors developed the fact that his loans to Segal had been made regardless of proper security, and that he had made false statements to the directors of the bank's condition. Friends of the president expressed the belief that Segal exercised a hypnotic influence over Mr. Hipple.

Although the cause of Mr. Hipple's death was by his physician and the coroner a cerebral hemorrhage, it is intimated that he may have committed suicide. When the directors met the Clearing House Association today, the only absentee was Dr. S. Weier Mitchell, who is away from the city for the summer.

Unable to meet its obligations because of the large amount of money loaned on insufficient security by its president, now dead, the Real Estate Trust Company of Philadelphia, which, up to last Saturday, was considered one of the strongest financial institutions in the city, closed its doors today. Soon after the closing, George H. Earle, jr., a prominent financier, was appointed receiver. The liabilities of the company are placed at $10,000,000, against which there are quick assets of about $3,500,000 and collateral of about $8,000,000, which is not negotiable or ready convertible. This doubtful collateral is held mostly by the city of Philadelphia, which made to Adolf Segal, a promoter, of this city.

The man responsible for the failure was Frank K. Hipple, one of Philadelphia's best known citizens, who died suddenly last Friday morning in his country home at Bryn Mawr, near here, under circumstances which have led to the suspicion that he may have committed suicide.

Dr. W. H. Roberts, stated clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, who is at Mount Pocono, said that in addition to the deposits of the general assembly, he had received $25,000 of funds placed there by Dr. Roberts as stated clerk. The Presbyterian Hospital of Philadelphia and the Presbyterian board of Relief, he said, also had sums of money in the failed institution. Dr. Roberts was asked if he could give the total of the money in the failed institution, amounting to $893,896, in Hipple's custody, were intact. He replied: "I have no reason to believe otherwise, but cannot say positively."

For the loans to Adolf Segal, Hipple accepted as collateral security the Majestic hotel, a big hotel apartment complex, also owned by Segal, the Swedish Steel Company of Lancaster (Pa.), and the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company of this city.

The steel company and the sugar refining concern have never been placed in liquidation. Segal claims the collateral is good and that he will meet all his obligations.

There are others to whom Hipple loaned money on alleged insufficient securities, but their names have not been made public, and the sums are not believed to be large. How far Hipple benefited from the loans made to whom he was merely the tool of others, is not yet to be determined.

As soon as the directors learned of the sudden death of President Hipple they began an investigation of his affairs and were shocked when they learned the true condition of the company. The first meeting of the board of directors was held on the day of the failure of Friday. A meeting of the board was hurriedly called and it was decided to instruct the officers of the bank that all deposits received after the opening of business Saturday morning should be set aside and deposited with the Franklin National Bank in the name of the individuals presenting the money. This was done to absolve the directors from criminal proceedings for receiving money after they knew the trust company was insolvent.

On Monday morning more than $100,000 was deposited by patrons of the bank which was practically offset by withdrawals by persons who had heard rumors of the company's condition. The money deposited since Saturday will, however, not be returned to the depositors until the courts have decided whether it should be paid back.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—The late Frank K. Hipple was one of the best known financiers of this city and was also prominent in the Presbyterian church. He was born in this city in 1839, and was admitted to the bar in 1863. At the incorporation of the Real Estate Company in 1888 he was elected its president, retaining this office until his death. Mr. Hipple was also a director of the Franklin National Bank, treasurer of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States; treasurer of the Sustentation committee of the Synod of Pennsylvania; treasurer of the Presbyterian hospital here; and American treasurer of the western section of the Alliance of the Reformed church, holding the Presbyterian system. In the financial world he was regarded as decidedly conservative.

Mr. Hipple's death occurred suddenly last Friday morning at his summer home in Bryn Mawr, Montgomery county. The cause of death was given as cerebral hemorrhage by his physician, Dr. William C. Powell, whose statement was confirmed by Coroner King. The latter said today that he did not perform an autopsy, but accepted the statement of Dr. Powell.

Dr. Alfred H. Reed, of Norristown, the coroner's physician, stated today that after viewing the body in the presence of Mr. Powell, he had agreed that death was due to natural causes. Had he been aware that there was any mystery about Mr.

MASONIC GRAND LODGE

Hipple's death, he said, he would have made a postmortem examination.

The first intimation that the Real Estate Trust was in financial difficulties was given last Sunday when at midnight a hastily called meeting of the directors of the institution was held. Among those who attended were R. Dale Benson, John H. Converse, former Judge W. W. Porter, Bayard Henry, John F. Betz, and J. De F. Junkin. At the conclusion of the meeting the following statement was issued:

"In view of the sudden death of the president, Mr. Frank K. Hipple, the directors of the Real Estate Trust Co. were called together last evening to consider the election of a successor and to make other necessary arrangements. As soon as a decision is reached, announcement will be made."

"The meeting was held on Sunday evening at the fact that several of the directors could not sooner reach the city."

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Persistent rumors that President Hipple committed suicide were borne out tonight when it was authoritatively stated that he took his life at his home Friday morning. Mr. Hipple is said to have taken a dose of laudanum with suicidal intent. While still conscious he filled his bath tub with water and after he was found apparently drowned.

Mr. Hipple's family decline to make any statement on the subject and the physicians interested in the case decline to be interviewed regarding the suicide theory.

A. O. H. CONVENTION

Halifax, Aug. 28.—The provincial convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians opened this forenoon with a large attendance. The special train from St. John, bringing most of the New Brunswick delegates and a party of excursionists, in all numbering about 400, arrived in the city at midnight, and a number of the delegates came in on the regular train some hours earlier.

This morning the delegates and the local division marched in procession to St. Patrick's church, and made a fine display. The procession was a very neat one, and the afternoon session was interesting. The greater part of the session was occupied with the report of Provincial President John Morrissey. Seated on the platform with the provincial president were Rev. Father Crumley, Rev. Father MacLaughlin, Rev. Father McManus, and Rev. Father Sweet.

President Morrissey, in his report, spoke of the loss sustained by the order owing to the death of such men as Michael Davitt, the wise patriot, and James O'Donnell, of this city.

He also spoke of the grand work done by the order in relieving suffering humanity in connection with the French famine calamity, and of the splendid results accomplished throughout Canada.

Two important matters that came up in connection with the report were the proposition to create a life insurance scheme in connection with the order, and that Prince Edward Island be approached with a view to having the order there amalgamated with that of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The financial report was satisfactory in every detail, and showed the order to be in a most flourishing condition in that respect.

During the afternoon the following dispatch was sent to His Holiness Pope Pius: "The Ancient Order of Hibernians of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, in annual session at Halifax (N. S.), express to your holiness sincere love and devotion."

(Sgd.) "MORRISSEY."

The following dispatch was also sent: "Michael Cummins, national president, A. O. H., Fall River (Mass.): Officers and members of the A. O. H. of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, in convention, send fraternal greetings to Massachusetts state convention."

This evening's session was largely taken up with resolutions. A resolution was passed congratulating the Right Rev. Dr. McCarthy on his elevation to the archiepiscopal seat at Halifax, and heartily thanking his grace for the kindly interest shown in the affairs of the order and the warm words of encouragement which marked his grace's short address of welcome at the opening of the convention. One of thanks to Mayor Macleith for kindly words of welcome and good wishes for the welfare of the organization. Expressions of gratefulness to J. C. O'Mullin, F. J. Cragg, P. P. Hayes, and Joseph A. Chisholm, representing the Knights of Columbus and C. M. B. A., for their kindly fraternal greetings. Also a resolution in which was feelingly expressed the profound regret of the loss to the church and country by the death of Archbishop O'Brien. The convention will resume tomorrow morning.

The New Brunswick Press Association's annual meeting will be held here at 2 o'clock Sept. 6. A meeting of the executive will be held on the evening of Sept. 5. Several papers will be prepared by members for discussion.

A. H. Sewell, of Gibson, was registered at the Victoria yesterday.

Edwin J. Everett, of St. John, was yesterday re-elected grand master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of New Brunswick. There were two sessions held here—in the afternoon and evening. Both were occupied by the reading of the annual address of the grand master and hearing of reports, etc., all of which will be found elsewhere. The election of officers took place at the evening session and resulted as follows:

Edwin J. Everett, St. John, Grand Master.

George Coggin, Sussex, Deputy Grand Master.

Geo. W. Rothwell, McAdam, Senior Grand Warden.

John McKenzie, Woodstock, Junior Grand Warden.

Rev. G. F. Scovill, St. John, Grand Chaplain.

F. J. G. Knowlton, St. John, Grand Treasurer.

Robt. Clarke, St. John, Grand Tyler.

The report of F. J. G. Knowlton, grand treasurer, showed that he began the year with a balance of $2,428.24 and had received $2,871.95 (of which $470.87 was a loan) making in all $5,300.19. He had paid off $3,043.00 of standing debt and interest, the loan of $470.87, and various expense items amounting to $859.10, and closed the year with a balance of $926.32. The fund of benevolence is in a special account and amounts to $3,630.08. Of this $3,000 is in bonds, and the remainder on deposit in the Bank of New Brunswick.

The report of the grand secretary showed receipts of $2,355.64, all of which has been paid to the grand treasurer. The total number who became master Masons in the year was 189, forty had rejoined, and fourteen were reinstated, making in all 243. This number was reduced by deaths, withdrawals and the like to 130, the actual gain. The total membership on the rolls on Dec. 27 last was 2,330, the highest figure reached in this jurisdiction.
