CHAPTER XI.

No untoward events occurred to mar the harmony of Vivienne Strangeway's wedding. No casual spectator could have guessed that the heart of one at least of those concerned in it was wrung with bitter anguish. Patience, the only bridesmaid, bore herself with quiet dignity, and performed all the duties assigned to her as though she was not conscious of being under a moral ban. She had a part to act, and she performed it to perfection. Those who had been present at the scene in the drawing room of Barrington Lodge when she had openly avowed herself a thief watched her with astonishment, not unminged with admiration.

"She is perfectly marvellous," one of those—a certain barrister friend of the bridegroom's, named Reginald—whispered to the other, who was a journalist, correspondent of a well-known society paper. "Never saw such a thing in my life!"

"You wouldn't think she was playing a part," returned the other. "Yet, poor girl, it must be maddening for her to go through this scene. It is just as if she were talking to people as if nothing had happened, to play the part of a hostess, to smile at this one and exchange banalities with another! And have you noticed Lady Wavenhurst has had the taste to come out wearing the wretched diamond?"

"It is just as if she wished to humiliate and humiliate the unhappy girl more than she has already done. I always disliked that woman, for she is as selfish as they make 'em, and cruel into the bargain. Jove!" he added, reflectively, "what a story I could make of this if I were only able to write it."

"Yes," said the barrister, "but in this case, Sterling, I am afraid you must restrain your journalistic talents. I only hope that nothing will leak out about the whole wretched business. It would ruin the ruin of the poor girl if it did. For my part, I shall breathe a word of yesterday's doings to a single soul."

He spoke a little anxiously, for he did not feel so confident of his friend's discretion. Sterling was a good fellow, but he had the reputation of sacrificing anything for the sake of a sensational paragraph.

"Stirling signed and drew the corners of his lips," "If it's true," he remarked, "that young Jack Braithwaite is in love with Miss Strangeway the story becomes all the more sensational. He looks terribly cut up, poor chap, but as if he meant to stick to her through thick and thin. I admire the man for his pluck. By the way, Vane, do you feel absolutely confident in your mind that Miss Strangeway did steal that jewel?"

Reginald Vane raised his eyebrows questioningly. "She admitted it herself," he replied, "and I don't see what reason she could have had for telling me she hadn't. It's not likely that anyone would acknowledge being a thief before a lot of people unless it were absolutely true. What are you driving at, Sterling?"

"The other man shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know," he observed, slowly. "But I come across strange cases in my line of business. And most certainly Patience Strangeway has not the appearance of a

TO BE DYSPEPTIC IS TO BE MISERABLE

Hopeless, Confused and Depressed in Mind, Forgetful, Irresolute, Drivvy, Languid and Useless.

This disease assumes so many forms that there is scarcely a complaint which it may not resemble in one way or another. Among the most prominent symptoms are constipation, sour stomach, variable appetite, heartburn, water-brash, gas in the stomach and bowels, distress after eating, etc.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

is a positive cure for dyspepsia, and all diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels or blood. It stimulates secretion of the saliva and gastric juices to facilitate digestion, removes acidity, purifies the blood and tones the entire system to full health and vigor.

Mrs. M. A. McNeil, Brook Village, N.S., writes: "I suffered from dyspepsia, loss of appetite and bad blood. I tried everything I could get but to no purpose; then finally started to use Burdock Blood Bitters. From the first day I felt the good effects of the medicine. I can eat anything now without any ill after effects and am strong and well again."

A DRESS FOR THE GARDEN PARTY

For summer hops and garden parties nothing is quite so pretty and, withal, so fashionable, as a simple dress of white net. The spotted and figured nets are used more often than the plain. Quite the most effective dresses of this character are those which are accented with a pleated skirt. The skirt is pleated, and the bodice, too; in fact, every part of the dress, except the full puff sleeves. Groups of tucks half an inch in width are run in the back, long knotted ends hanging to the extreme edge of the skirt.

taste and wearing the Blue Diamond, set now as a brooch prominently in the lace of her dress, occupied a position in one of the first pews. Vivienne's eyes had met hers as she passed down the aisle on Roger's arm, and the two women had exchanged a smile. Lady Erine leaning forward and whispering a few words of congratulation.

And Vivienne had neither paled nor faltered. How was it possible, Patience wondered, that she could gaze with such placid eyes upon the very jewel which she had intended to steal, which had actually been in her possession? Certainly she knew herself unsuspected; she had believed Patience's story. But it seemed incredible that she should remain unmoved in the presence of the woman whom she had meant to wrong. Patience herself, who was following with Jack, cast down her eyes, and the young man felt that she was trembling. He noticed, too, the vindictive smile that curved Lady Erine's lips, she who so rarely smiled, when her eyes fell upon Patience. He pressed the girl's arm close to his side as if to encourage her and lend her strength. Then he muttered something beneath his breath; Patience could not distinguish the words, but she was assured that they were anything but complimentary to Lady Erine.

And so the little procession passed out of the church, and down the smooth gravel path through the churchyard to the spot where the carriages awaited them. The sun was still shining, and the air was crisp and cold. The trees that surrounded the little church were dressed in their richest autumn coloring. The guests were assembled in little groups, talking cheerfully. Jack was whispering in her ear. She knew vaguely that he was praising her for her pluck, but she was not able to make any reply to him. Her task was not yet ended; it would be hours before all these people went away and she was left alone—alone with her misery and her bitter thoughts.

"I am not going back to London till tomorrow," This she heard Jack say. "Roger has told me that I may stay on at Radham as long as I like. But I can't speak to you before all these people. I shall come over tomorrow. May I—may I?"

She made no answer, but he took her silence for consent.

PALE AS A CORPSE.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Brought Back the Ruddy Glow of Health

Thousands of young growing girls have pale, nervous complexions; distressing headaches, backaches and dizziness. Sometimes they are unable to sleep; their nerves are unstrung; they are languid; breathless and the heart palpitates violently at the least exertion—that's anæmia—and it may develop into consumption unless promptly attended to. Anæmia means bloodlessness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make pure, red blood—that's the secret of their success. Miss Winnie Allen, Montreal, Que., says:—"I was so weak and run down that my friends thought I was going into consumption. I was as pale as a corpse, had no appetite and did not sleep well. The last exertion tired me out and if I walked a few blocks I was almost breathless. My sister advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using them for a few weeks I am again enjoying good health and have a good color. I think every weak, sickly girl should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood and in this way strike right at the root of such troubles as anæmia, indigestion, rheumatism, St. Vitus dance, the secret ills of girlhood and womanhood and a host of other every day troubles and cure them. But you must get the genuine with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box—imitations never cured any one and sometimes they do much harm. If your dealer does not keep the genuine Pills they will be sent at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TIREDNESS COMES IN THE SPRING

What Are You Doing to Overcome It?

The cold of winter exhausts vitality and exposes everyone to disease. Spring is sure to bring tiredness and languor that will not go.

Spring sickness doesn't cure itself—the cause is in the blood, and that cause must be remedied. It is easily done with Ferrozone, a marvelous remedy that purifies the blood and expels those humors and poisons that depress and weaken.

Just think of it—Ferrozone uplifts the entire nervous system, renews the blood, makes it rich and red—gives the sort of aid that's needed in throwing off weakness, and spring languor.

Tens of thousands enjoy the advantages of renewed health through Ferrozone;—if you'll only use it, you'll surely grow strong too; its beneficial action is noticed even in a week—you see it goes right to work, removes the causes of the trouble and then quickly makes a cure.

For those who sleep poorly and have nervous apprehensions, Ferrozone is a boon; it is a specialist in such cases.

Where there is paleness, poor appetite and languor, Ferrozone makes the patient feel like new in a few days.

In tiredness, nerve exhaustion, spring fever and debility, the power of Ferrozone is known from coast to coast and universally used with grand results.

Let Ferrozone build you up, let it win you back to robust health—it will do so quickly if you give it the chance. Sold by all dealers, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50. Remember the name Ferrozone.

OBITUARY

Edmund L. Muhlolland

The death of Edmund L. Muhlolland took place yesterday in the Mater Misericordie Home, where he had been for the past six months. Mr. Muhlolland was employed by the late B. McCrossin, Sydney street, for a long time. He was sixty years of age, and unmarried.

Mrs. Jeremiah Quinlan, Skagway

Sad news reached the home of Mrs. William Kane, Bay Shore, yesterday when a despatch from Skagway, Alaska, arrived telling of the death of Mrs. Kane's daughter, Minnie, wife of Jeremiah Quinlan. Mr. Quinlan established himself in Alaska a number of years ago and, returning in 1903, he and Miss Kane were married and journeyed to Skagway, where they made their home. Mrs. Quinlan had not been in good health for some little time, but the news of her death came as a great shock to her family here. She is survived by her mother, two sisters—one Mrs. Edward E. Kane, of Bay Shore and one brother, John J. Kane, now of Dorchester (Mass.). Mrs. Quinlan was a young woman of fine qualities and numbered very many friends, who will be grieved to hear of her death and who will sympathize keenly with the bereaved family in their affliction.

Mrs. Agnes Cogle

Charles H. Ramsey, 91 Moore street, yesterday received from Victoria (B. C.) word of the death of his aunt, Mrs. Agnes Cogle. She died on May 23 at the residence of her son-in-law, Frank I. Clarke, No. 2 Niagara street, Victoria. Mrs. Cogle was in her 81st year; was a former resident of Carleton and will be remembered by many here.

John Joseph Keleher

Twice this week, and three times in three months, death has invaded the home of Mrs. Timothy Keleher, Market Place, Carleton, and claimed one of her sons. On Tuesday Patrick Keleher, aged 48 years, died and yesterday his elder brother, John Joseph Keleher, died, aged 51 years.

The deceased was a widower, but had no family. His aged mother, seven brothers and three sisters survive. The sisters are Mrs. Luke Foley, Mrs. James Lynch and Mrs. C. G. Mason, all resident in Carleton. The deceased was a well known and popular man, with many friends, who will regret to hear of his death. He had worked in several of the mills, holding responsible positions. His death, as was that of his brother Patrick, was due to dropsy.

William Scott

The death of William Scott, aged 70 years, took place last night about 12 o'clock in the General Public Hospital. Mr. Scott had been a resident of Milkish all his life. About five months ago he was

WHERE DOES THE PAPER GO?

The first question asked by a general advertiser. The Telegraph and Times reach that class of people who subscribe and agree to pay for the reading privilege. These papers go first hand from the publishers by carrier and not through street boys to be left in office or store by purchaser after reading. Common sense teaches that every paper passed into homes direct will be read. The Telegraph and Times are home papers. Do they contain your advertisement?
