CHAPTER I.

Auntie And Her Darling

"Don't eat too much marmalade, Syd. You'll get it on your face."
"Oh no, auntie dear, I'll be careful."
"You have a great deal of butter on your bread, dear?"
"Yes, auntie; that's the beauty of it, Miller says."
"Who is Miller, Syd, dear?"
"Our chemistry chap at Loomborough. He shows us how when you mix acids and alkalis together they form new combinations which go off in gas."
"Indeed, dear? Your studies must be very interesting."
"Oh, they are, auntie—awfully. That's how it is with the marmalade and the fresh butter—this is real fresh butter isn't it?"
"Of course, dear. Whatever did you think it was?"
"Dab, aunt dear, marmalade. That wouldn't do, of course; but the marmalade's nearly all sugar—that's carbonyl and the butter's all carbon, too; and then there's a lot of acid in the oranges, and it all combines and one kills the other and does you good. It never hurts me. Shall I give you some game pie, auntie?"
"Thank you no, my dear, but you may pass me the dry toast. Thanks. Pass your cup, my child."
Sydney Smithers, who, to use his own term, had been "going in" deeply for the marmalade, went backwards in his arrangement of the breakfast comestibles, and helped himself liberally to the game pie, especially the gelatinous portion, glancing at the pale, handsome, sedate-looking lady presiding at the head of the table ready to meet his eyes and bestow a smile upon the dear child, her nephew, who made the Denes his home, when he was not at Loomborough spending his last terms before commencing his college career.

"Such a dear, sweet boy," Lady Lisle often said to herself, as she beamed upon him blandly with thirty-five-year-old eyes, and idolized him, as she had no children of her own, and he was her own special training.

"At it again," said the boy to himself, as he glanced at the lady furiously; "more letters. Lady doctors, lady barristers. Bless if I don't think she means to go in for a lady parson! More meetings to go to, auntie dear," he said, aloud.

"Yes, darling," replied the lady, with a sigh and another affectionate beam upon the plump-looking lad intent upon the game pie. The calls made upon my time are rather heavy, Syd, and when you have grown up, I hope you will be able to help me."

"Why, of course I will, auntie. Didn't I want to write that answer for you yesterday?"

"Um—er—yes, my dear; but we must wait a little first. Your writing is not quite what I would like to see."

"No, auntie; it is a bit shaky yet. We don't go in for writing much at Loomborough; we leave that to the Board School cads."

"And I should like you to be a little more careful over your spelling."

"Oh, Mullins, M. A., says that'll all come right, auntie, when we've quite done with your classics."

"I hope so, my darling, and then you shall be my private secretary. I did hope at one time that I should win over your uncle to a love for my pursuits. But alas!"

"Don't seem in uncle's way much, auntie, but he means right, uncle dear. You wait till he's up in the House—he'll make some of 'em sit up."

"I hope not, my dear child. I rather trust to his brother members leading him into a better way."

"Ah, I don't think you ought to expect that, auntie," said the "dear boy," using his serviette to remove the high-water mark of coffee from an incipient moustache. "They go in for all night sittings, you know."

"Yes, my dear, but only on emergencies, and for their country's good."

"Walker!" said the "dear boy," softly. "I used to think at one time that I should be able to wear him from his bad habit of lying in bed so late. If he would only follow your example of getting up early enough for a long walk or ride before breakfast!"

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are equally essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood elements.

The "Night Cure," as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, easing nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

A SEMI-DRESSY TAILOR-MADE IS A NECESSITY.

Not infrequently the business woman with her limited social life finds use for a dressier costume than that severe tailor-made, which she wears during business hours, and nothing fits in so well for such occasions as the semi-dressy tailor-made of silk, mohair or a fine novelty suiting. Gray and white striped suiting such as Paquin has used extensively this season, is used in the modelling of this coat suit in which the material is used on various ways of the stripe. In the skirt narrow panels cut on the cross are flanked with wider ones on the straight, these in the form of double box pleats. The jacket, which extends four or five inches over the hips, has broad Gibson pleats extending out over the full sleeves, and these are cut on the bias and on the cross. The vest is of black velvet braided with white soutache, and there is a very narrow belt likewise of black velvet braided, set above the natural waistline about an inch. The sleeves are full and pleated into turn-back cuffs trimmed with the braided velvet to match vest, collar and belt. Worn with this suit is a Scotch turban of golden brown milan, trimmed with brown and white heron feathers. The gloves are white, and the footwear is golden brown glossee kid.

"Say adhere, my child."

"Yes, auntie."

"Always bear in mind what a great future you have before you. Some day—I sincerely hope that day is far distant—your dear grandfather must pass away, and then think of your future and the position you must hold. A title and a princely income."

"Oh, yes; I often think of it all, auntie. I say, though, I wish the chaps wouldn't be quite so fond of chaffing a fellow about the old gov'nor buying his title."

"He did not buy it, Sydney, my dear," said Lady Lisle, with a faint colour coming into her cheeks.

"Didn't he, auntie? They say so."

"The truth of the matter is, my dear, that the party—"

"Good old party!" said the "dear boy" to himself.

"The party was pressed for money to carry on the Parliamentary warfare, and with your dear old grandpa's generosity he placed the purse at the party's disposal."

"Keeps it pretty close when I want a few dubs," said the "dear boy" to himself. "And the baronetcy was the very least return that the retiring Prime Minister could make him."

"You did it up beautifully, auntie."

"Well, I hope I did, my dear child, but I have often regretted the money that was spent over a place situated as it is."

"Situating, auntie? Why, it's lovely."

"Lovely by nature, my dear, but tainted and made ugly by the surroundings of the society which affects the district."

"Is it, auntie?"

"Yes, my dear. I never could understand why it should be selected by those dreadful people for their sports and pastimes."

"You mean the racing, auntie?"

"Yes, my dear—with a shudder. 'Tilborough has become a den of infamy—a place which attracts, so many times a year, all the ruffianism of London, to leave its trail behind. The late Lord Tilborough used to encourage it with his stables and horses, and—yes, it's a great pity; the sweet innocence of the neighborhood is destroyed."

"Yes, auntie."

"Of course, Lady Tilborough calls occasionally, and I am compelled to be civil to her, but I wish you to avoid all communication with her and her friends as much as possible."

"Oh, I never see her, auntie, except when she's driving. I've met her some times when I've been out with uncle."

Lady Lisle winced. "Not lately, Syd, my dear," she said after a pause.

"Not very lately, auntie. Last time it was when Dr. Granton—"

"That person who comes and stays at Tilborough?"

"Yes, auntie; uncle's old friend."

"He's an awfully jolly chap. You like him, auntie?"

"No, my child, I do not. Your uncle's old friends of his bachelor days belong to quite a different world from mine."

"But he's a clever doctor, auntie. Done uncle no end of good. Proper sort of chap to know."

"How can you judge as to that, my dear?" said the lady, sternly.

"Well, you see, auntie, one does get a bit queer sometimes. I had such a headache the other day when he called to see uncle, and he laughed at me and took me over to the hotel and gave me a dose of stuff that cured it in half-an-hour."

"Sydney, my dear, I beg that you will never go to that hotel again. Avoid Tilborough as much as you would any other evil place. The next time you have a headache either go and see Dr. Linnett or come to me, and I will give you something out of the medicine-chest. Dr. Granton cannot be an experienced practitioner."

"Why, they say, auntie, he's wonderfully clever over accidents in the hunting field."

"Yes, in the hunting field," said the lady, sarcastically, "but a medical man's practice should be at home, and in his own neighborhood. A man who attends to racing stables is, to my mind, none of what is, I believe, called a vet."

"That's right, auntie—a vet."

"Than a family practitioner," continued the lady, sternly; "and it is a source of great trouble to me that your uncle does not give up his society. I desire that you avoid him."

"All right, auntie; I will."

"Always bear in mind, my dear, that it is easier to make acquaintances than to end them."

"Yes, auntie; I found that out in Loomborough. Some of the fellows will stick to you."

REVENUE FROM THE WINTER PORT

Report to Treasury Board
Places it at $21,745—Payment in the Collins Case.

At a treasury board meeting last evening the revenue of the winter port last season was reported to have amounted to $21,745. The chairman was instructed to appoint a special committee to consider the question of increasing the scale of charges, it having been learned that the Shipping Federation wish the rates to be fixed by the end of July. The contract for printing the chamberlain's report was awarded to John A. Bowes. As the meeting was breaking up, a remark by Ald. Kelley that, in his view, the city would be better off if the whole winter port business were cut adrift, roused considerable argument, the other members present holding a different view.

A communication which caused some surprise was from Col. J. R. Armstrong to the effect that in his capacity as solicitor to the Canadian Bank of Commerce he had rendered a bill amounting to $138 for services in connection with the legal formalities necessary before completion of the recent loan of $721,000, and had been informed by the bank that the understanding was the city would pay it.

The chairman and chamberlain disclaimed any knowledge of such an agreement and the matter was left to the chairman.

The recent decision in the Collins case, in which the Supreme Court of Canada, on appeal, gave judgment against the city, was mentioned. The damages claimed were $1,000, and the costs amounted to $379.74.

It was left to the chairman to arrange for payment to John Collins of Le-preaux.

Several minor matters were dealt with and the board adjourned.

W. A. Lynch, of Buteauche, was registered at the Victoria yesterday.

FERRY EMPLOYES WILL LOOK NATTY

Reefers and Caps to be Provided for Deck Hands and Gate-men.

At the regular meeting of the ferry committee yesterday afternoon it was decided to call for tenders for painting the Ludlow. Reefers and caps were recommended for the deck hands and gate-men. An electric bell service from the east side toll house to the Water street lock-up was also recommended so that the police could be summoned in the event of a disturbance. Employees in the service were granted ten days' holidays, including those on the temporary pay roll. An award was recommended placed at the foot of the steps outside the east side toll house. Ald. Baskin occupied the chair, and Ald. Bullock, Frink, Baskin and McGowan were present with the superintendent and common clerk.

A communication from Weldon & McLean, acting for the Dominion Coal Company, referred to the Ludlow running down the scow Sarah M. last April and doing damage to the extent of $300. A request was made for a settlement or the matter would be placed in the admiralty court.

The matter was referred to the recorder.

Ald. Frink asked if anything was being done to hold the Ludlow to the floats by some mechanical means. He had been informed that the present necessity of re-rolling the engines at slow speed to keep the boat in cost a ton of coal a day which, allowing for 200 days a year, amounted to about $200. He moved that the superintendent be authorized to obtain specifications of suitable apparatus.

The motion was carried.

Several minor matters were dealt with and the board adjourned.

NICARAGUA IS READY

She is Fitting Out Three Gunboats to Attack Salvador on the Pacific Side.

MEXICO CITY, June 27—Minister Delmado, representing the republic of San Salvador, in Mexico, received a telegram last night from President Figueroa of that country, saying that the republic of Nicaragua was fitting out a fleet of three gunboats on the Pacific side and that an attack was expected at any time. The message added that Salvador was fortifying its ports.

THE QUESTION OF FLOUR

Not the least of the many problems which puzzle the young housekeeper, is the selection of the flour. Cook books are often indefinite; one recommending a brand you cannot conveniently obtain, another, neglecting the point or insisting on some flour you have found unsatisfactory.

Have you ever tried blended flour? If not, use it next baking day. The leading Ontario millers are now making a blend of Ontario fall wheat with Manitoba spring wheat in such a way that the best qualities of both are combined scientifically to make a perfect flour.

Ontario fall wheat has the flavor and delicate, but not sufficient strength. Manitoba spring wheat flour rises well, but absorbs much water and requires much kneading, the bugbear of all bread-makers. Blended flour, as milled by the Ontario millers, combines the strength of Manitoba wheat, and the delicate flavor of Ontario wheat, and is a superior flour to either one alone. It gives the food value with the lightness and deliciousness.

Housekeepers everywhere are using blended flour for bread, cake and pastry. Blended flour solves the flour troubles of all home cooks who have the discernment to use them.

REMARKABLE INVENTION FOR THE CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP

is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored through-out the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots; the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

The Company's Guarantee.

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. I. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia (loss of hair) stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles (hair roots), without resorting to any irritant process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him or inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfil and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable. An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.
