ARCHBISHOP BRUCHESI SPEAKS ON TEMPERANCE

Distinguished Prelate Talks at Young Women's Christian Temperance Union Meeting in Montreal --- A forcible Address---Protestant Clergyman Express Appreciation.

(Montreal Witness)
Archbishop Bruchesi was the chief speaker at the annual rally of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union in Montreal last Saturday evening. The Archbishop touched only lightly on the actual fact of temperance and its attendant evils, but devoted the greater part of his time to the emphasizing of the best ways of stopping the growth of the evil until it should die out altogether.

HOW TO STOP THE TRAFFIC

The best way, he declared, to cause a sober and upright nation to spring up in the next generation was to teach the effects of alcohol in the schools and the homes of the present day. It was a common custom among some classes of people, His Grace went on, to take liquor in small quantities such as on New Year's Day, when visiting, before or after meals or the sipping of a little wine as merely part of the social life. Children, at all times, most observant watched this handing round of the sparkling liquor and noticed that after taking it their friends and relations grew gay, were jolly, and less restrained in their conversation. Noting these effects the child began to feel for me! and in a short time asked for it. The parent in whose home liquor was habitually kept could not have any sustaining force to back his statements to the child that the liquor was not good for him, and later the child would find out for himself just what this thing was.

HOW TO GIVE INSTRUCTION

Continuing along these lines the Archbishop made an earnest appeal for scientific instruction in schools on the effects of alcohol. By scientific teaching he did not mean the display on the walls of a number of charts, which were merely an using to the child, but the constant warning of the child against these evils which are daily apparent to him on the streets of the city. "If your child is disobedient," said His Grace, "you will say to him, 'be obedient.' If he shows an inclination to tell untruths you point out to him that he must be truthful. If he is inclined to be careless, if he does not wish to pray, or if he is neglectful of his religious duties, you tell him that he is a child of God, and as such he must be careful he must pray and he must attend church, and practice his religious duties. And so, if he speaks of liquor, or sees it, on any occasion, you should warn him of its evil effects and you should never, never let him see it in his own home. Then, indeed, could you say: 'Do as I do'."

Archbishop Bruchesi spoke also of the campaign against intemperance which was begun in his pastoral letter of two years ago, and told of the great amount of good towns and villages of the Province of Quebec, and also of several evils which had come within his personal experience, more particularly of the custom in some villages of opening the bars on Sunday but keeping them "en cache." If the saloons were to be opened, then let them be opened boldly, pull up their blinds and let people see who passes through their doors. His Grace felt sure that many young men who go in when they do not think they are seen would stay away if they had to go through the front door and stand in the full view of their friends outside, to drink.

CALLS A SPADE A SPADE.

His Grace entered a protest against the calling of certain places "hotels" which were not hotels at all, but simply places "where a man who cannot make money with his hands or by the use of his brains, makes it by standing behind a bar and selling liquor. It is not hard work and they do make money. They make too much money, my friends."

Nevertheless, His Grace said there was no need for discouragement on the part of temperance workers, for the amount of money made in the liquor traffic was decreasing and the losses that had been accustomed to sell $50 a worth of liquor for New Year's Day, only $50 had been taken on the last day of 1906.

In closing his address the Archbishop referred to the splendid work for temperance which the Franciscan Fathers had been already evident throughout the province.

The Rev. Dr. Symonds, vicar of Christ Church Cathedral, and the Rev. Hugh Pedley, of Emmanuel Congregational Church, who were on the platform with His Grace, also spoke for a few minutes at the close of the Archbishop's address, expressing their warm appreciation of His Grace's address. Mr. Pedley declared that for his part he wished to work hand in hand with his brethren of the French community on the platform of temperance, which was broad enough to bridge any chasm that might be between the different branches of the Christian church.
