MAJOR GENERAL STOBBART GETS A ROUSING WELCOME

Head of Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias Given Reception and Banquet by Local Companies.

Local members of the order of Knights of Pythias gave Major-General Arthur J. Stobbart, of St. Paul (Minn.), the head of the uniform rank branch of the order, a hearty welcome to St. John last evening. The Pythian hall was well filled with members of the order, both of the uniform rank and subordinate lodges, and the man who controls the army of some 30,000 or 40,000 Pythian soldiers was given a right royal reception.

Following the reception in the hall, the visitor was entertained at a banquet in Scammell's restaurant.

It was about 8.30 when the major-general arrived at the hall, accompanied by Captain F. A. Godsoe, commissary of the First Regiment of the maritime provinces. Lieut.-Colonel Moulson occupied the chair and seated on the platform were Adjutant Alfred Dodge, Lieut.-Colonel Wilson and John Beamish, the father of the order in New Brunswick, who has seen thirty-seven years of service.

On entering the hall the general was received with great applause. He was given a seat at the right of the presiding officer.

Colonel Moulson, in introducing the visitor and welcoming him to the city, referred to the occasion as one of those rare intervals at which a visit was made to Canada by the head of the uniform rank. The previous occupant of the office had been here some years ago, and was fittingly received. The speaker referred to the many good qualities of the distinguished visitor and his valuable services in the interests of the rank and of the order. He spoke also of the fact that the present major-general was an Englishman.

It was often said that the Knights of Pythias was a Yankee order, but the fact that an Englishman was at the head of the uniform branch should dissipate that idea.

After some further remarks he called upon Captain Godsoe, who paid further tribute to the work of General Stobbart in the uniform rank.

Colonel Wilson also added a meed of praise to the good work of major-general.

Adjutant Dodge was called upon, and spoke briefly.

Past Chancellor John Beamish was called upon and his short speech was greatly appreciated and received with hearty applause.

The major-general was then introduced and made a very pleasing address, which elicited frequent applause. He made a point of the fact that any reference to the order of the Knights of Pythias as a Yankee order was all wrong, as the story of Damon and Pythias, on which the order was founded, was the product of the pen of an Irishman, John Dryden.

The order was such that it could embrace the whole world in its membership. It was a brotherhood that should embrace all men. The order had no particular flag; it was growing under many flags.

Referring more especially to the uniform rank, he spoke of its origin, its growth, and some of its good works. The earthquake in San Francisco afforded a great opportunity for members of the uniform rank there to show what organization could do. The Knights of Pythias was complimented by all in authority for the noble and efficient work they did on that occasion.

Major-General Stobbart was in charge of the relief work at that trying time.

In New Orleans, when the supreme encampment was held there last year, the military authorities paid a high tribute to the rank for its efficiency and fine appearance.

The major-general pointed out that the military branch of the order was intended as a reserve force for the militia of the country in the companies formed. In speaking of the maritime provinces, he referred to the new company recently formed in Charlottetown, and said that now having eight companies, the maritime provinces were entitled to a colonel instead of only a lieutenant-colonel, as in the past. He hoped, however, that before the encampment in Boston in 1908 that there would be a brigade from the maritime provinces, instead of a regiment, only thirteen companies being necessary to have a brigade formation.

It would, no doubt, he said, be interesting to the members here to know that the maritime provinces were at the head of the order in point of percentage of membership in the uniform rank from the subordinate lodges. The maritime provinces has a percentage of 15 1-2 per cent. in the uniform rank, whereas the average percentage for the order is only 3 1-2 per cent. It was expected that the Pythian army in Boston next year would number between 8,000 and 10,000 men.

Before the encampment in Boston, he expected that British Columbia would form a regiment and they would go to Boston and march with the companies from here flying the British flag.

In closing, he expressed his appreciation of the many kindnesses shown him on his visit to the maritime provinces. There would only be one greater pleasure and that would be to come back here once more.

Captain Godsoe moved that a hearty and sincere vote of thanks be tendered the major-general for his visit here.

This was seconded by Recorder W. H. Golding, of Victoria company, and unanimously adopted by a standing vote.

Colonel Moulson conveyed the vote of thanks to the visitor, who made a fitting reply. The members then adjourned to Scammell's restaurant, where a very tempting banquet was partaken of.

At the close of the report, Col. Moulson, who presided, proposed the toast of The King, which was heartily received with musical honors.

The Supreme Lodge brought responses from Supreme Representatives Godsoe and Wilson.

The Grand Lodge was responded to by Past Grand Chancellor H. L. Ganter.

Subordinate Lodges brought replies from R. T. Patchell, J. F. Brown, Capt. J. A. Murray and Robt. Maxwell, M. P. P.

Capt. Mowry, speaking for St. John Lodge, which was recently organized in the North End, said he thought the time was not far distant when a company of the Uniform Rank would be organized there.

Adjutant Alfred Dodge made an able response to the toast to the First Regiment of the maritime provinces.

The Local Companies of the Uniform Rank brought responses from Captain W. E. Hopper, of Victoria Company, No. 1, and Captain L. V. Price, of Cygnet Co., No. 5.

Messrs. Thomas and Grimmer, of St. Stephen, responded to the toast of Our Visiting Brothers.

The toast of the evening, that of the Major General, was drunk amid great enthusiasm. His remarks were witty, reminiscent and instructive. Speaking of the adoption of the new uniform, he said, the cost of the change was infinitesimal. The only additional equipment needed was blouse and cap, which could be made right here. It was assured that there would be no further change in uniform for a period of ten years from May, 1905.

The application from the Massachusetts brigade for permission to wear a stripe in the trousers had been refused.

He spoke also of the uplifting influence of Pythianism, not only to members of the order, but to those outside the order as well. He quoted many instances of the love shown in various ways by Pythian teachings. He made a plea to the members to attend lodge and company meetings and thus show the true Pythian spirit.

On resuming his seat, the major general was applauded and cheered.

The gathering was brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

The major general will leave at noon today to visit the company at Moncton and will then go to Charlottetown, New Glasgow and afterwards to Quebec.

STORY OF FRANCIS MURPHY'S GREAT TEMPERANCE CRUSADE

Spent His Early Life in Portland Me.--Induced Over 16,000 Persons to Sign the Pledge.

PORTLAND, Me., July 4—Francis Murphy, the "Apostle of Temperance," the great promoter of the Blue Ribbon movement, who died in Los Angeles, Cal., Sunday, suffered from a complication of diseases and was nearly blind. Last April he had to be led home from a public hall in Los Angeles where he had lectured. That night he said, with tears streaming down his face: "My eyesight is leaving me; I am done." Born in Wexford county, Ireland, 71 years ago, he came to this country when 16 years old. He had but little money, and it was spent in a debauch. Thereafter he knocked about in all sorts of efforts to make a living, finally landing in Portland, Me., where he had a brother.

There he opened a bar-room, of which he was the best customer, and "Frank Murphy's saloon" became the most popular in town and its proprietor the prince of good fellows. In here on the night of September 3, 1869, came Patrick Murphy, drunk and obstinate, started to go upstairs, and when Murphy and another tried to stop him Patrick fell downstairs, struck on his head and died two days later. Murphy was indicted for murder on complaint of County Attorney Nathan Webb, after United States judge, tried before Judge Charles W. Goddard of the superior court, defended by Gen. George F. Shepley and Col. A. W. Bradbury, and convicted of manslaughter. The defence insisted upon the utter lack of malice, which was admitted by Mr. Webb. A motion for admission to bail was granted, and after some delays Murphy was brought in for sentence Jan. 14, 1871.

When the formal question—if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, he made such an impassioned speech, coupled with the dramatic telling of the story of his life, that the whole audience wept, and Judge Goddard sentenced him to jail for only two months. On his release he began his temperance work, which he had carried on uninterruptedly and so successfully since that time. He served in the Union army during the Civil war and served as chaplain in the Spanish-American war.

The temperance movement started by Mr. Murphy spread rapidly from state to state, and in 1880 he campaigned in the northern part of California, making many converts. In 1881 he went to Europe, at the time of the Ecumenical conference of the Methodist church. So great was the interest in temperance that he campaigned for four years and obtained about five million signatures to his pledge.

When he returned to New York he was given a great reception in Cooper Union, which was followed by a series of receptions in Philadelphia and other cities, ending in Pittsburg, where he lived for 25 years.

When the Spanish-American war began Mr. Murphy offered himself to the governor of Pennsylvania, and was appointed a chaplain of the Fifth Pennsylvania volunteers. He went to Honolulu in 1900 and held a great series of meetings there. He then went to Australia, where he was also very successful. In 1901 he returned to California, and made a tour of that state, and wound up at Los Angeles, where he had since made his home. It is estimated that since he started out on his work Mr. Murphy induced sixten million persons to sign his pledge.

MR. GOODWIN WINS SUIT

Case of Mrs. McCallum vs E. A. Goodwin Decided for Defendant.

The McCallum-Goodwin case for damages was concluded in the circuit court yesterday afternoon, when several witnesses were examined and his honor directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant. On concluding his charge to the jury, Judge McLeod submitted a series of questions which the jurors answered as follows:—

The circuit court resumed its sitting yesterday, Mr. Justice McLeod presiding. The case of Mary McCallum vs. E. A. Goodwin was taken up. After the selecting of a jury, J. B. M. Baxter, who appeared for Mrs. McCallum, called her to the stand. She said that on June 16, while driving along Mill street, at the corner of Mill and North streets, a team owned by the defendant collided with her team and she was thrown out and sustained injuries to her left arm and shoulder from which she had not recovered. A few seconds before the accident she said she heard a man yell out: "Get out of that." Then came the crash and she remembered nothing further with regard to the accident.

To Mr. Wilson, who appeared for the defendant, witness stated that the clerk in Isaac's cigar store told her it was E. A. Goodwin's team that had collided with her's.

Edward Trecartin, clerk in Isaac's cigar store, said he did not see the collision, but noticed that Mr. Goodwin's team was nearby.

Drs. R. G. Day and M. L. McFarland told of being called at attend Mrs. McCallum.

George Murphy, carriage builder, and Walter London, who is in Murphy's employ, told of having repaired the plaintiff's wagon and said the damage was one that might naturally occur from another team running into it from behind. This closed the plaintiff's case.

Hiram Lake, who was driving the defendant's team in Mill street, was called for the defence. He said that he was about twenty feet away from the plaintiff's team when he saw it collapse. He did not run into the team and was not nearer than twenty feet until after the team broke down.

To Mr. Baxter, he said that he yelled out when about eight feet away from the plaintiff's team as he noticed her backing up her wagon and he was afraid she would back against his horse.

In the afternoon Mr. Wilson called John Bain, teamster for Vassie & Co., and Alex. Watters, who were near when the accident occurred. They were both sure that the plaintiff's carriage was not struck by the defendant's team.

This concluded the case and the counsel addressed the jury. At the conclusion of his charge to the jury Judge McLeod submitted the following questions which the jury answered, as follows:

Q—Where did the accident occur, at Isaac's store or on North street?

A—Nearer O'Neill's than Isaacs'.

Q—Was the defendant's wagon driven into the plaintiff's carriage in attempting to pass it?

A—No.

Q—Was the plaintiff's carriage standing or going ahead at the time of the accident?

A—Moving.

Q—Was the plaintiff's carriage backed up before moving forward?

No answer.

Q—Did the defendant's wagon collide with the plaintiff's wagon and cause the accident?

A—No.

Q—If it did collide, was it through the negligence of the defendant, and if it was, state what that negligence was?

No answer.

Q—Was the accident caused simply by the breaking of the king bolt, and not by collision with the defendant's wagon?

A—Lack of evidence as to king bolt, and cannot answer.

Q—At what do you assess the damages?

A—$1,000.

His honor then directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant, upon which Mr. Baxter applied for a stay of postea.

The court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning, when the case of the King vs. Bentley will be taken up.

NEW PAPER WILL FIGHT AGAINST FREEMASONRY

Said to Be Aim of L'Action Sociale ---Event of Importance in Religious and Political Circles.

MONTREAL, July 4—As the month of September approaches the interest in the proposed publication of L'Action Sociale becomes more and more acute in religious circles throughout French Canada, for that is the name decided upon for the new paper which is to appear in the city of Quebec, and which is announced in advance of possessing the approbation of the head of the archdiocese, Mgr. Begin, Archbishop of Quebec.

One of the best known writers on the French press of the New England states, in the person of J. K. Laflamme, a close relative of Bishop Laflamme of the Seminary of Quebec, has been selected as the leading writer on the new journalistic-venture. This gentleman is noted as having combated in the most energetic manner the policy of Mgr. Walsh, Bishop of Portland, in his attempt to Anglify the French-Canadians of New England and his articles against the English-speaking priests and prelates of Maine have generally been headed "If Rome Only Knew" or "When Rome Learns the Truth."

TO FIGHT FREEMASONRY.

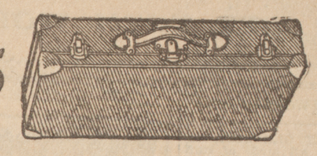

It is, however, the mission which the Archbishop of Quebec and the clergy of this province have called upon Mr. Laflamme to carry out in old Quebec, that makes the publication of L'Action Sociale an event of prime importance in political and social circles. The statement is made on the authority of a distinguished French-Canadian ecclesiastic, and supported by a well known member of parliament, that this new newspaper movement is about to be entered upon for the purpose of combating Freemasonry, which they allege has taken a very deep hold upon the French-Canadian youth.

"It is not English Freemasonry that we fear," said a leading church layman to the writer yesterday, "but you would be really surprised," he added, "if you knew the number of French-Canadian young men who have become allied to French Freemasonry. This is the great danger in front of us, and this is why L'Action Sociale has been called into being."

J. D. Hazen, M. P. P., returned to the city last evening on the Boston train.

Frank B. Carvell, M. P., of Woodstock, was in the city yesterday and left on the C. P. R. last evening.

ST. JOHN MAN RESIGNS IMPORTANT POSITION

Winnipeg, July 4—W. Brown, general superintendent of the Canadian Northern, admitted last night that he had resigned his position. He will step out as soon as D. B. Hamm, third vice-president and general manager, returns to the city.

Mr. Brown is a St. John boy, and a former employe of the C. P. R., who has risen to the top in his profession. The announcement of his resignation will be a surprise to his St. John friends, but it was no surprise to his relatives here. His brother, Walter R. Brown, trainmaster with the C. P. R., said he had understood some time ago that his brother was going to take a needed rest. He was not informed as to his future plans, but thought it likely he would come home for a time.

THE SECRET OF CRISP PASTRY

Keep three things in view, if you want unvarying success with your pastry—cold water, good shortening, and Blended Flour.

Ice Water and butter are preferable, but it may be more convenient to use cold water and some other good shortening. But stick to the Blended Flour. It will never fail to give a light, flaky crust—so tender, it will break with a breath, and as easy to digest as it is delicious.

The wholesomeness of pie crust depends on the lightness of the flour—that is the crispy flakiness that you look for in pie crust must be made of flour having a large percentage of starch. Ontario fall wheat contains all the requisites for light pastry, cake and biscuits, while Manitoba wheat has the heavier properties required in a strictly bread flour.

Combine the two, and you will get a perfect flour, that has the full rich flavor and delicacy of Ontario fall wheat, and the strength of Manitoba spring wheat—an ideal combination.

With ordinary care in mixing and rolling the dough, Blended Flour will give you the most delicious pastry you ever ate. Many millers are now blending these two grades of flour scientifically, so do not attempt to do the blending yourself—it is no easy thing to get just the right proportions. 23.

WAY ONE FEELS.

Assistant—I wonder why more poetry is written in the spring than at any other time of the year?

Editor—Oh, I suppose it's because nearly everybody feels sort of good for nothing then.

RUBBER MERGER IS NOT COMPLETE

More Canadian Companies Outside Than In It---No Ground for Fears.

(Toronto Globe.)

Much concern has been caused in business circles in Canada interested in rubber by the statement that the new merger formed by the amalgamation of the United States Rubber Company with the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company would secure a monopoly of the manufacturing industry not only in the United States but also in Canada, and the impression has got abroad that this step is but a preliminary to a marked enhancement of prices and to other undesirable developments which usually follow the elimination of competition. It has even been assumed on the strength of the statements emanating from New York and Montreal that matters in the rubber manufacturing trade were drifting in the direction of a world monopoly. The truth appears to be that while the new merger is undoubtedly an attempt to secure control of the manufacturing industry in both countries the result will not be anything like the monopoly which in some quarters has been feared.

"The fact is," said a Canadian authority to The Globe yesterday, "that there are more Canadian rubber companies outside of the merger than in it."

Dr. James Venables

Halifax, N. S., July 4—(Special)—Dr. James Venables died today. The deceased, who was 68 years of age, has been more than thirty years practicing in Halifax. He was a graduate of Harvard University in 1867, and is survived by two sons and two daughters. He was a son of the late James Venables for many years provincial librarian.

Many will extend sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Regan in the death of their infant son, Henry J., which occurred last night.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Walker left England on July 3 on their return home.

S. B. Smith, of Hoyt Station, who has been in the city for a few days, returned home last evening.
