Naughty Little Silly

Little Sally plays in school,
And never learns a lesson.
She whispers, too, against the rule.
Oh! it is most distressin'!

At home she pouts and stubborn is!
And her mother she annoys.
Not one thing does she do to please,
She spoils and breaks her toys.

She cries for sweet cake every day;
And frowns on bread and milk,
She says she hates her cotton frocks,
And wishes they were silk.

Oh, she is a most trying child!
As naughty as can be.
'Tis hoped the girls who read this tale
Are not so bad as she.

MAUD WALKER.

Sammy Tankee

He was a queer little Chin-ee,
He wore a long cueue down his back.
His name was Sammy Tan-kee;
And his shirt hung loose like a sack.

His papa did wash-ee, wash
All day at a very big tub.
The suds would splutter and foam,
As the elder Tan-kee would rub-rub.

And little Tan-kee said each day;
"I shall grow up as fast as I can,
And soon will be big like pa-pa,
And become a rich wash-ee-wash man."

The rigid observance of English rules in South Carolina courts and a neglect of the same on the part of Mr. Petigru, a barrister well known in his day, gave rise to the following passage:

"Mr. Petigru," said the judge, "you have on a light coat. You can't speak."

"May it please the bench," said the barrister, "I conform strictly to the law. Let me illustrate. The law says the barrister shall wear a black gown and coat, and your honor thinks that means a black coat?"

"Yes," said the judge.

"Well, the law also says the sheriff shall wear a cocked hat and sword. Does your honor hold that the sword must be cocked as well as the hat?"

He was permitted to proceed.—Tit-Bits.

Halifax merchants interested in coasting steamers running to eastern shore ports and captains of the steamers are urging that certain buoys along the eastern shore be left out the coming winter and not taken in as heretofore.

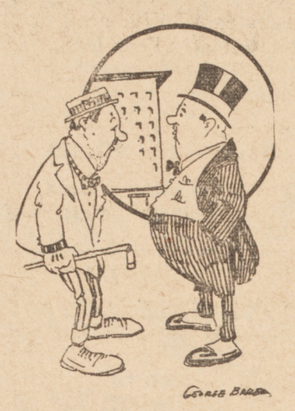

Mere Men.
By GEORGE O. BAKER.

NATURALLY.

First Rooter—That umpire, they say, is a good judge of strikes.

Second Rooter—He used to be a "walking delegate."

NOT FROM HIM

I. M. P. Cunius—Say old man, can I borrow ten dollars today?

Cutting Hintz—That's according to how many friends you haven't asked yet.

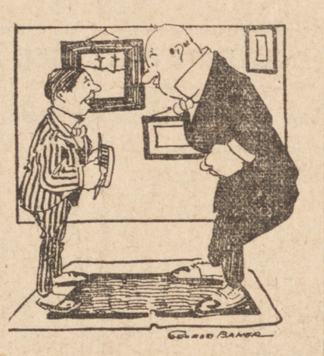

Jigson—Fortune knocks at every man's door.

Jagson—Yes, but its knock sounds so much like the instalment man's and gas collector's knock that I'm afraid to take a chance and open the door.

TWO THINGS

Hixon—What were your heaviest expenses last winter?

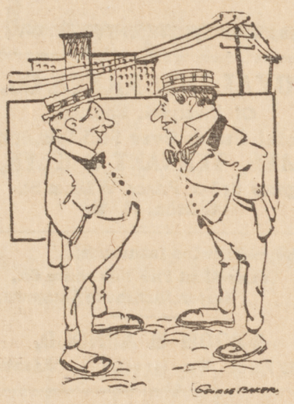

Dixon—Coal and cought medicine.

HAD JUST PAID HIS WIFE'S BILLS.

The Young Man—Do you think a man could marry when he's getting 25?

The Older Man—If it's twenty-five million, yes.

The Cynic—Women are like chicken salad.

The Listener—How so?

The Cynic—They both depend upon the dressing.

BASEBALL, AN ANCIENT GAME.

Noah—Where's Shem, Ham and Japh et, ma?

Mrs. Noah—They're up at the ark taking in the game!

It Got Through.

It was during the height of the telegrapher operators' strike. Out of the sixty-five regular wires between New York and Chicago only one was working, and that was devoted to the sending of cuss-words between the officials of the Company.

No operators. No click-clack. No quotations.

Then a young lady suddenly appeared at the New York office. She was handsome and stylish and anxious. She sat down at a table and hurriedly pulled off her gloves and drew a blank telegram towards her. The office manager saw her and approached and said:

"No messages sent, lady."

"But I must telegraph to Chicago," she replied.

"Utterly impossible. Have you not heard of the strike?"

"No, but that makes no difference. This is a case of—this is a case of—"

"Of life and death, probably, but we can't send your message. We just refused to send one for a millionaire whose whole family has been killed in an auto. Sorry, but you will have to write and send by mail."

"But there is no time. He must have his answer this forenoon. You see, he has written me, and the answer is to go at once, and if it doesn't go, and if he doesn't get it——"

Tears came to her eyes and she choked up and could say no more. In place of further talk she hesitatingly handed over a letter. The manager drew it from its envelope and read it. One sentence in it was enough. It read:

"Yes or no, and that by telegraph."

"And you love him?" was asked as the letter was restored.

"Oh, so fondly'!'

"Then your 'yes' shall go by telegraph if it burns out the last and only wire we have left."

And it did. JOE KERR.

BOTH WOODEN.

Trainer—Now, in a sculling match, what would you do if you should lose an oar?

Freshman—Probably if I lost my skull I'd lose my head!
