THEIR FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Unusual Interest Being Taken in Exmouth Street Church Celebration.

Unusual interest is being manifested in the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Exmouth street Methodist church which begins tomorrow with special services. Rev. Dr. Heartz, president of the Nova Scotia conference will preach at 11 a. m., and the first pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. Stewart, will occupy the pulpit at 7 o'clock in the evening. The Sunday school will hold an open session at 2.30 p. m. when addresses will be given by past and present superintendents.

Charles Ross, brother of L. R. Ross, terminal superintendent of the I. C. R. here, arrived yesterday from India, after 14 years absence. Mr. Ross holds an officer's commission in the British army and went last night to Riverside to visit his parents.

F. M. Sclanders returned yesterday by way of New York and Montreal after a three months' absence in the west. His trip was partly on business for several large syndicates interested in real estate. Mr. Sclanders is very much pleased with the west as a whole.

CORPORATIONS OF THIS DAY COMPARED WITH THE BANDITS OF OLDEN TIME

(Toronto News.)

Miss Marshall Saunders, the well-known Canadian authoress of Halifax, N. S., has just won a prize of three hundred dollars offered for the best delineation of the cause and the best suggestions for the cure of the rapid increase of crime in the United States. While Canadian conditions are not wholly the same as those of the United States, there is so much in Miss Saunder's essay that vitally interests Canadians that no apology is made for giving the following condensation of the essay as it appears in Our Dumb Animals, of Boston. Miss Saunders divides her essay into categorical causes and cures, as follows:

WRONG IMMIGRATION.

First Cause—An unduly stimulated flow into the country of vast numbers of aliens many of whom are defective and criminally inclined.

The Cure.—Move the whole system of immigration inspection from America to Europe. efectives and criminals would thus be easily stopped.

LUXURY.

Second Cause.—Increase of luxury—Our forefathers did not have automobiles, telephones, theatre tickets and European trips. Now we must have them whether we can afford them or not. Respectable fathers of families are driven to questionable methods of increasing their incomes. Failure, disgrace and crime follow. Women have much to answer for on this score.

The Cure.—Preach the simple life. Advocate small houses, less bric-a-brac, fewer servants, life in the open, suburban dwellings, less fashionable society, life with children. Many a restless devotee of fashion could find a happy range of emotions in the joy of service.

TAINTED MONEY

Third Cause—Public indifference to the manner in which money is obtained.

The Cure.—Educate the public conscience. Don't be afraid of the muckrake The heart of the nation is sound. Some of us have special temptations. Baby striking his nurse, because she will not give him the pretty moon shining in the nursery window, is an incipient criminal. Baby's respectable father clamoring revengefully with millions of his fellow-countrymen for the life of an insane murderer of one of our rulers is another criminal. Baby's mother signing for luxuries is criminally inclined. Teach the public that the man to honor is the honest man. There are such men —enough to make the nation over.

THE SLUMS.

Fourth Cause.—Unhygienic surroundings In dark and unsanitary homes, men women and children are crowded together. Decency goes and morality follows. Those whom a more favorable environment would make respectable sink into despair and dissipation. Their children grow up stunted and diseased, and easily drift into the criminal class.

The Cure.—Pull down or renovate unsanitary dwellings. Pour in the three great civilizers—light, air and water. Build model tenements and suburban cottages. A garden will keep a man from the saloon. All poor men are not anarchists, but they are discouraged by the frightful grind of existence.

HEREDITY.

Fifth Cause—Alcoholic parents, malformations at birth, and defective intelligence. It is difficult to rear as exquisitely constructed a creature as a baby in favorable circumstances. Imagine the horrors encompassing an infant of the lowest class.

The Cure. — Let the states maintain farms and inebriate colonies well-policed in country districts. For confirmed topers, honorable detention with farm labor. For semi-topers, sixty days' hard labor, sentence to be suspended if man will promise not to drink for a year.

LACK OF PARENTAL CONTROL.

Sixth Cause. — Lack of parental control. The Puritans made their children mind them. We mind our children. The rich are not all bad, nor yet are the poor, but many a poor man's child runs wild, scorns law and order. The spoiled child of the rich looks shrewdly from his books and his tutors, and studies the book of life as held open to him by his father. He reads in it of the race for wealth, the love of display, a frightful egotism, and a contempt for law that the possession of great wealth often engenders.

The Cure.—Govern your children. What about the good old rod? Is it not softer than a policeman's club? But you won't need a rod if you have a determined fight with the tiny morsel of humanity only strong enough to crawl and not to stand upright. You master him while he is about your knees, and you won't have any trouble when he overtops you.

VANITY.

Seventh Cause. — Vanity and love of notoriety. We all want to shine—criminal and non-criminals. In confirmed criminals a curious vanity and pride in misdeeds prevails. The man committing high crimes is an aristocrat. The petty thief is a nobody.

The Cure. — To change distorted views of life in adults is a herculean task, yet one must try. Sentences should be indeterminate, and every prison should be a reformatory. Prison officials should be carefully chosen, and the prisoner should be left to them. Gifts and calls from well-meaning but misguided visitors only add fuel to the flame of the criminal's love for notoriety. Let them get the address of the criminal's wife and children. Give them fruit, flowers and sympathy. If the criminal does not reform he should be kept imprisoned; if he does, he should on leaving prison be handed over to the class of men most likely to influence him—parole officers.

PUBLISHED DETAILS OF CRIME.

Eighth Cause. — Revolting details of crime published in the newspapers, influencing especially weak-minded persons and youthful criminals.

The Cure.—When a crime is committed the public clamors for details. Is it the fault of the newspaper that the public gets what it wants? Not altogether—we must create a healthy public sentiment. When a majority of readers protest, details of crime will no longer be printed. However, we must remember also the deterrent effect of the recital that punishment follows crime. The nauseating details only should be suppressed.

LABOR TROUBLES.

Ninth Cause.—Trouble between capital and labor. This often incites to crime men who in normal circumstances are respectable wage-earners.

The Cure.—Recognition of the brotherhood of man. Profit-sharing or some equivalent. Anything by which the employer can gain the co-operation of the employed in saving, and in making the firm popular. New means to bind capital and labor together should be studied. Have women and children kept out of factories. The employment of women breaks up the home, the children run wild and become criminals. Abolish orphan asylums as New Zealand has done, and board occupants with decent working-people.

ONE-SIDED EDUCATION.

Tenth Cause—One-sided erucation. Civilization advances and crime increases. Why? One strong reason is the one-sided education given to rich and poor. In public schools, in colleges, too much intellectual, not enough heart-education is given.

The Cure—Choose teachers far youth with exceeding care. Have kind, sympathetic and reasonable direction of passions. We can make the next generation—let us have a warm-hearted one, and then shall we see the decrease of crime.

IRREVERENCE.

Eleventh Cause—Irreverence.—Flippancy prevails among all classes. There is little respect or reverence for anyone or anything.

The Cure—Teach the young to treat elders with respect, to honor rulers and obey the laws, to have some hope of a future life and thereby avoid falling into the pit of gross selfishness and materialism.

THE WAR SPIRIT.

Twelfth Cause—Expensive and bloody wars and the encouragement of the strenuous fighting spirit, causing dormant cruelty to spring up in the hearts of millions.

The Cure—Show that the dream of military glory is a nightmare. Expose the fallacy that wars are necessary to decrease the population. Stop military drill among children which encourages the war spirit.

JUSTICE LOST IN TECHNICALTIES.

Thirteenth Cause—Misguided lawyers and judges. Criminal law is going wrong in its administration. Lawyers and judges groping their way through a fog of technicalities lose sight of the end that justice should be done though the heavens fall.

The Cure—Let the public take more interest in the judiciary. Elect only such judges as have a single eye for justice, and encourage them to have better control over crimes.

NEGLECT OF CHILDREN.

Fourteenth Cause—Neglect of children. This is the most fertile of the sources of crime. Never until the young are better protected will crime decrease in America. Ten thousand boys work in the coal breakers. Seven thousand five hundred children work in glass factories, hundreds of them work all night. Sixty thousand children toil in southern cotton mills. Little girls eight years old work through a twelve-hour night. These victims of industrial slavery help swell the tide of crime. We hear about men's rights and women's rights—what about children's rights? The child cannot play ball nor have games of any kind without breaking municipal law. The shop-keeper hates him, the policeman urges him on, and the unhappy child skulks into foolish and vicious idling. Forced by circumstances he becomes semi-nocturnal in his habits, playing in the streets when the traffic of the day is over.

The Cure—Take children out of the factories. Reform the criminal before he is made. For the child's sake have tenements improved. Send him to school. After school have schoolhouses and yards still kept open, or have recreation grounds provided where whole families can go. The school house was built for the child—the yard is his proper playground. The education of the street is worthless—keep the child away from it. Fit up his playground with swings, teeters, sand boxes, games of all kinds. Keep him occupied. Idleness leads to crime. Have good supervision. Don't allow the child to cheat, lie, smoke, steal nor swear. You will thus discipline him in his play, and by and by he will make an honest citizen. Let the city provide meals when necessary. All money spent on the child will be saved in workhouses and prisons. The chief of police in a large city says that since supervised playgrounds were introduced the number of juvenile arrests has fallen off.

Save the child, for in the child is the hope of the nation.

A MESSAGE FROM LOST ALLEN LINER

A Bottle Picked Up Tells of the Wreck of the Ill-fated Huronian---She Sailed from St. John.

In a recent copy the Coleraine, Ireland, Constitution of January 5, which gives information of a bottle recently found on the shore at Castlerock, telling of the ill-fated Allan liner Huronian. The Constitution says:

On Thursday, last week, while a gentleman was strolling along the shore at Castlerock his attention was attracted by a bottle that was being washed in by the breakers. He picked it up, and was surprised to observe that it contained a message written in pencil on an envelope as follows:

"Huronian sinking fast. Top heavy. One side under water. Good-bye, mother and sister.—Charles M'Fall, greaser."

There is every reason to believe that this message is genuine, and that after a lapse of five years it forms, in its brevity and pathos, the first glimmering of intelligence regarding the actual fate of the lost Allan liner, which, it will be remembered, was numbered five years ago with the long list of vessels grouped in the official returns under the significant heading of "Missing."

The gentleman who discovered the bottle immediately set about making inquiries. He communicated with the Liverpool Underwriters' Association, receiving a prompt reply, from which the following is taken: "The Huronian left Glasgow for St. John, N. B., on 11th February, 1902, and has not since been heard of. She was owned by the Allan Line Steamship Company, 25 Bothwell street, Glasgow, and there was on board a fireman of the name of M'Fall." Since the receipt of the letter the gentleman has been engaging himself in endeavors to locate the whereabouts of the relatives of the fireman M'Fall, whose mother and sister are mentioned in the message.

The circumstances of the loss of the Huronian will still be fresh in the public memory. The beginning of February 1902, was remarkable for the severity of the weather, the most terrific storms raging at sea.

It will be interesting to know whether the inquiries for the relatives of the unfortunate firemen will have a successful result, and whether they will be able to identify the handwriting.

SEVERE PAINS IN THE GROIN.

Trying Experience of a Well Known Citizen in St. John, N.B.

The case of Mr. Charles F. Olive, for years foreman in the "Gazette" of St. John, N. B., is a striking evidence of the power of Ferrozone.

No remedy has such a record for restoring sufferers from acute stomach and kidney trouble; it invariably does cure.

"For several years," writes Mr. Olive, "I have had kidney trouble and until quite recently I suffered torture. A few months ago my condition assumed a very serious form. I consulted several city doctors, used different pills, but without the slightest benefit. I suffered from an intense pain in the groin, and the increasing seriousness of my trouble prompted me to try Ferrozone. It gave me quick relief, and a half-a-dozen boxes cured. Ferrozone I can recommend as a specific for disordered kidneys."

Won't you try Ferrozone, too, 50c. per box at all dealers in medicine.

A STRAIGHT TALK FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO THE TRUST MAGNATES

He Tells Them to Their Face That For Them Reform is the Only Alternative to Annihilation---Sensational Speech at Gridiron Club Banquet.

New York, Feb. 1—It does not take a deep student of affairs to realize that this too-quickly grown and somewhat raw big nation is shaking in the pains of great financial and industrial changes. One does not have to accept the view that a tremendous crash is coming to appreciate the serious importance of the situation. That the president of the United States, in the presence of some hundreds of prominent men of the country solemnly warned great financiers, to their faces, that they must accept reforms or be prepared for the deluge, is but an incident, an illustration of the parlousness of the times.

That Jacob Schiff talks optimistically to the bankers of Paris is of no significance except a desire of Mr. Schiff to reassure himself and incidentally the French financiers, upon whom he unloaded large quantities of American securities last year. Mr. Schiff confined his argument to the question of money, but the present impending troubles are of much deeper root. They affect the entire industrial organization of the country.

When financiers of high standing and long experience talk as they do privately, of the fear of impending panic, they are not altogether swayed by inbred hostility to governmental methods or regulation of big corporations. They believe, and believe sincerely that the great impetus which Theodore Roosevelt has given to governmental regulation must work disaster before it works cure. They believe that the whole question has got away from Roosevelt and the administration and they compare him to the small boy who started the snowball on the top of the hill.

One of them said recently: "I firmly believe that we are in for a period of great depression, if not absolute crash and panic. I don't mean by this simply a decrease in the value of stocks, a mere Wall street scare, I mean a national calamity. We have had a period of prosperity unexampled in the world history. Conditions have shaped themselves so that there must be changes and great changes in our financial and industrial organization. The president has recognized this, and tried to deal with it. All I hope is that he won't be in the position of Samson, who pulled down the pillars of the temple. For example, the policy of twisting the railroad's tail has reveloped so strongly that the value is being rapidly taken away from these hundreds of millions of dollars of securities. It is all very well to speak of a 'Wall street flurry,' but it must be remembered that Wall street is the heart of the financial action of the nation, and if the credit of the banks is attacked, as is likely to follow, the disastrous results will be spread over the entire United States."

The most graphic and sensational illustration of the signs of the times occurred a week ago tonight. There has been some reference to it in a few of the American papers, but owing to the peculiar circumstances surrounding it, the matter has been but lightly touched upon. It occurred at the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington.

The Gridiron Club is a close organization of newspaper correspondents. Once a year it gives a dinner and the guests are invariably culled from the most distinguished men of the country. It is an inviolate rule, so far as the correspondents go, that the proceedings at the banquet shall be held secret, except for a routine account which is edited severely by a committee appointed for that purpose. On the morning after the dinner this routine account was printed. It wasn't until a day or two later, and the news was not heralded by the correspondent-hosts, that it began to be rumored about that the club had had by far the most sensational banquet in its history.

There were present 250 men, many of them prominent in politics, diplomacy, the law, literature and the newspaper world. Samuel G. Blythe, Washington correspondent of the New York World and president of the club, presided. Next him on the right sat President Roosevelt, while on the left was Vice-President Fairbanks. Three members of the United States supreme court, several cabinet officers, scores of senators and representatives, foreign diplomats, army and navy officers, clergymen, capitalists, railroad men, government officials and an unusually large representation of newspaper editors, magazine writers and authors were included among the guests. J. Pierpont Morgan, H. H. Rogers and Senator Foraker had prominent places.

At all previous dinners the notable guests took everything in a spirit of fun. There has been license to a degree and much good-humored raillery, always under the protection of secrecy. This time the unlooked for sensation came from the president of the United States. Senator Foraker had spoken, more or less in a bantering way, and touched upon the president's dismissal of the negro soldiers at Brownsville. The president fidgeted, and when Foraker sat down, jumped to his feet and replied most earnestly. Soon there developed a most animated controversy between Foraker and Roosevelt. It became so earnest that the other guests were amazed, but the president went right on. It was seen that he was most tremendously in earnest, and soon he launched into an impassioned speech about the general condition of the country.

The guests who heard the president sat dumb, and no two accounts agree as to exactly what he said. The president spoke for over three-quarters of an hour, and there was no fun at all in anything he said. At one stage he addressed himself directly to J. P. Morgan and H. H. Rogers, and shaking his finger in their faces, as one man put it, "practically warned them that they would get assassinated if they and their class did not behave."

He warned them most impressively that the temper of the people of the country had undergone a great change. The nearest to a direct quotation of the president's words that has been made is: "If you gentlemen are not willing to accept the action of the conservative class, which is ready to afford protection alike to the rich and the poor, I will say to you now that when you have disposed of us by your machinations, you will find yourselves face to face with a people which believes it has been deprived of its rights and a mob which does not have the least respect for riches. You can take your choice."

While not one word about this extraordinary scene was published until the middle of the week, Wall street on Monday was buzzing with the story.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 71, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night
