CANADIAN IMMIGRATION WILL REACH HIGH WATER MARK IN SEASON OF 1907

General Belief That the United States Must Soon Be a Wheat Importer---Congestion on Railways So Great that Canadian Northern Has Been Asked to Withhold Immigrant Specials.

WINNIPEG, May 6.—There is no question that the year 1907 will make the high-water mark of immigration into Canada by many thousands. It is estimated that more than 50,000 farmers from the single state of Iowa will cross the border this year. The idea prevailing here is that the United States is soon to become a wheat importing, instead of a wheat exporting country and that the natural source of supply is the Manitoba wheat fields. Of course immigrants are needed by the United States by the hundreds of thousands, if not by the millions. Each immigrant may be counted on to consume a barrel of flour a year and the natural increase of 85,000,000 population means a great many more million barrels of flour. With the backward season for winter wheat in the States, farmers in this vicinity are particularly enthusiastic about the export demands for this year and they are confident that the Pillsbury and other great northwestern mills will be compelled to import wheat in bond, as they did three years ago, in order to keep up the character of their brands abroad.

The congestion at this centre and other points has been so severe that the Canadian Northern Railway has recently been compelled to ask the American roads centering at St. Paul to withhold immigrant specials. The board of railway commissioners has requested the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Railways to lend motive power to the Canadian Northern in order to assist in alleviating the congested traffic conditions. Many trains filled with homeseekers have already reached Winnipeg, the passengers being promptly cared for by the immigration officials. The latter are sending out daily 300 to 400 men to positions on farms.

The growing tendency of some English magistrates to liberate persons charged with minor offences on condition that they emigrate to Canada has been under the consideration of the government, and it has been decided rigidly to enforce the provisions of the immigration law permitting deportation within two years of landing. In order to strengthen the hands of officials of the department both houses have passed an amending act this session.

The rush of emigrants from Scotland is particularly active. Latest mail advices show that since January 1 fully 12,000 passengers have left the Clyde for Canada. This number represents the total carried by Allan and Davidson Line boats to Canadian ports, and also, as nearly as possible, the proportion of Anchor Line passengers who traveled to Canada by way of New York. It is, of course, impossible to obtain absolutely accurate figures, as many of the Anchor Line passengers book by Allan and Davidson Line boats to Canada, while they are really emigrants from Scotland to Canada. There are also a number, comparatively small, who go to the United States by Allan Line boats while there are also a number who take account the emigrants from Scotland who go to Canada by way of Liverpool. The most of another circumstance, the most confusing of all. Very large numbers of Continental emigrants travel to Canada by Glasgow steamers. These arrive at east coast ports, and when they book their passages at Glasgow they become, from the official point of view, emigrants from Scotland. All these things render it practically impossible to arrive at the exact number of people who are leaving Scotland for the far west.

While, however, exact figures cannot be obtained, it is quite evident that the rush from Scotland to Canada is much greater this year than in any previous year. The British Board of Trade returns for the financial year ending June 30, 1906, showed that England sent to Canada within the previous twelve months 77,144 persons, Scotland, 19,509, and Ireland, 3,867.

The different steamship companies, according to mail advices received here, state that the demand for passenger accommodation has broken all records. One company, indeed, report that they could have carried 50 per cent more passengers than last year if they could have provided the accommodation. They received applications from all parts of Scotland. The great majority of these were for steerage berths, although it is being noticed that a fair larger proportion of purely emigrant passengers are traveling second class than did so a few years since.

COLLECTION OF BRIGHT LITTLE BITS CULLED FROM EVERYWHEREMidget Wife Trimmed Him

CHICAGO, May 6.—Tired of life because his 115-pound wife beat him, Frank J. McCuskey, 6 feet 3 inches tall, twice tried to drown himself in the Calumet River. When the second rescue was effected he was taken to the South Chicago police station, where he poured his tale of woe into the ears of the unsympathetic officers.

A Very Ratty Story

LANESDALE, O., May 6.—Abraham Hunsberger, a caretaker of stables and poultry houses on a large estate in this town, almost lost his life Thursday in a fierce battle with rats. He succeeded in killing 28 of the rodents single handed, and as many more escaped, but he had a hard fight for his own life.

Thought She Was the Cook

CHICAGO, May 6.—All doors in Chicago open to a cook. Mrs. Elinora Lipman demonstrated this recently. She is being sued by her landlord, and wishing to have her neighbors testify in her behalf asked them to come to court. They refused, however, so, disguised as a cook, she went to their homes and had no difficulty in getting in and serving the subpoenas which forced them to come to court.

Lightning's Mad Prank

ANNISTON, Ala., May 6.—A bolt of lightning which struck the house of Tom Phurrough, who lives near here, ran down the wall and came in connection with a loaded shotgun which was hanging there. The bolt caused the weapon to be discharged from the wall and to be fired while in midair. An infant child of Phurrough, asleep, received the full contents of the gun, dying instantly.

MORNING LOCALS

A remarkable funeral was that of Bliss Seely, the young man drowned in the head waters of the Oromocto river. The services were held at Central Blissville. Owing to the spring freshet the young man's body had to be carried on a raft for more than half a mile and there were many boats and kites following. Rev. G. W. Foster, of Keswick, conducted the services, and the interment was made in the Baptist cemetery.

Yesterday afternoon the heads of the civil service in St. John met in the post office to consider the proposal to impose income tax on all civil service employees. There was a good attendance and the general opinion of the meeting was decidedly against the imposition of an income tax. A committee was appointed to draw up a plan of procedure to fight any action looking to the imposition of such a tax. The committee will meet in the same place this afternoon.

J. King Kelley leaves tomorrow for Cody's, Queens County, to conduct the prosecution in a serious charge against Frank Griffiths, of that place, who was arrested at Norton and remanded to Gagetown jail. He will be taken from there to Cody's, where hearing will take place before Commissioner Roberts, on Thursday.

W. P. ARCHIBALD'S ADDRESS

"My own experience with convicts has been chiefly with discharged or paroled prisoners. What strikes me most of all is not their resentful and ferocious disposition so much as their infantile helplessness. They seem to be poisoned with the pauper virus, and require tonics and training. It is a grievous social wrong to turn this rudderless derelict loose upon the troubled paths of life's sea, for I find a large number of our discharged prisoners are incapable of using unconditional freedom without an oversight. We must strive for the day when patrons or friends will be on hand to receive the discharged prisoner, having employment and a helpful environment to assist the unfortunate and the erring into a life of good citizenship. What the discharged man needs is a friend providing practical assistance in his hour of need by giving the man an opportunity on the causeway of redemption.

"We realize that in making substantial progress in human affairs we must avoid the gloomy pathway of pessimism, intolerance, uncharity and ignorance on the one hand, and the crude, untutored process of visionary enthusiasm on the other, with an abiding faith in God and a steadfast confidence in man, do with humility, patience and fidelity the work to do. By the doing of duty daily we may indeed kindle fires that will burn for centuries and brighten the skies of time.

"A man is not to be helped because he is a criminal and has been a prisoner, but because he is a man and needs help. I have no sympathy with that thought, that you are to buy a man off from preying upon society as a criminal by making things easy for him, or waiting the gentle breezes of good fortune in his direction. True-bought citizenship is worthless. Children that are controlled by candy and coaxing are subject to the early germs of criminality. Obedience soon comes to be measured by the supply of sweets, obedience at so much per obey. Alas, I have known a number of men so destitute of conscience or principle that they enter the society doing the most for them on their discharge by way of leaves and fishes, while reformation is seldom given a serious thought. For one class of prisoners going out of a prison it is only too true that but little can be done for them. The man who has used his imprisonment to plan another 'job,' as I have known a small percentage of them to do, does not need the helping hand and a suit of clothes to help him on with his 'job,' on the day of his discharge, but, why should this man be given his liberty is a question often asked.

"Our very despair of helping confirmed criminals emphasizes the need of beginning the work of purifying society further up the stream, at the fountain of youth.

"Circumstances are not the cause of crime. Man is the cause of crime. Circumstances are but the occasions of its commission. Men may, and do, commit crime in spite of circumstances, and in the best social surroundings. Adam fell in Eden. Some men are eagles to soar, but some are worms to wind their way through the dust of corruption and vice. There is in every man the possibility of crime. This consideration magnifies and emphasizes the problem.

"Helping discharged prisoners disappears a great many people. Instead of accomplishing reformation they are duped and imposed on. They read some popular novel and take this imaginary estimate of the character of prisoners. They then go forth in their zeal and might to lift up this idealized, down-trodden specimen of the genus homo, who is largely responsible for what he is. They, of course, expect a welcome like the 'flowers of May,' but they meet the chilly iron bars of reserve and the cold critical gaze of one who many times takes their measure, yet just what he can get out of them. Instead of being overwhelmed with gratitude they often meet with suspicion and reproach. The man who is really going to be a help to them must make up his mind to bear suspicion, slander, misunderstanding, reproach, and sometimes cursing, yet withal you will have the joy of meeting some genuinely grateful and appreciative hearts.

"Years ago, when I first began to help men, I used to hand over to others who were willing to lend a hand in this work, a 'bad man' occasionally. Some time ago one of these patrons turned up, he savagely as he is. Why, that fellow was a consummate scoundrel; he got drunk as soon as he got out and pawed the very clothes I gave him. I tried to tell him that pearls and diamonds are not picked up every day, but he departed fully assured that he knew all about convicts; he had tried one and, of course, they were all alike; are they not all dressed alike? So he knew all about it.

"A man who is determined to be of practical help in the rescue of discharged prisoners must practise the perseverance of the saints, and at the same time he will see a great deal to convince him of the persistence of devils. Experience is not a motive power, it is a regulating power, and nothing but a genuine love can overcome the difficulties and sustain the heart in the stress of the evil one comes in contact with in the prison atmosphere.

"It is frequently the case that the best prisoner proves the worst criminal. The confirmed, habitual professional criminal is, as a rule, the 'best prisoner,' under custody. You do not need to help him for he will help himself. Another who may be a first offender has not fallen into the routine of prison habits and discipline, has will and individuality and self-assertion of his own, violates the rules and seldom gets a recommendation for good conduct or industry from the administration of a prison view point.

"There is occasionally glamor and show about a prison case, a great criminal, and sometimes much done. Sympathy and help are spent unthinkingly with little hope of reform, while a better man, far less a criminal, is sometimes allowed to drift unaided. It is an exceedingly perplexing question to determine when a man will turn, and to have the best means at your disposal for assisting him. I speak from experience in dealing with many men on their discharge and I find even some of the most 'hopeless cases' truly reform, while some of the most hopeful ones to my mind, turn not but drift on.
