ORCHARD AGAIN
ON STAND TODAY

He is Expected to Give the Details of the Assassination of Former Governor Steunenberg---His Absolute Nonchalance Causes Wonder.

BOISE, Idaho, June 13.—It now seems probable that Harry Orchard will be allowed to leave the stand and make way for another witness in the Haywood trial by Saturday afternoon. The state will not take up much time with the redirect testimony and this means that the re-cross examination will undoubtedly be disposed of. Today Orchard is expected to give the details of the assassination of former governor Steunenberg.

The harrowing tale made the crowded courtroom shudder once before and today the prisoner must show how cold blooded were the preparations and how the deed itself was carried out. The murdered man's son sits within a few feet of Haywood, facing Orchard. He watches the witness closely and during the narration of the scenes around his home prior to the murder and on the night when his father was killed, he shows evidences of great nervousness.

The defense has not spared Orchard. His character as a criminal has been delved into until almost every crime in the calendar big and little, has been brought home to him. The most remarkable thing about the man is the absolute nonchalance with which he admits the commission of these crimes.

The plot to kidnap the children of Orchard's former partner in the Hercules Mine prospect is looked upon by the defense as a strong proof of the duplicity of the man. The claim of the defense is that Simpkins discovered the plot and warned August Paulson. Paulson has been subpoenaed by the state. It was shown, however, by the defense in cross examination that Paulson lent Orchard $300 just before he left Wallace for Caldwell, shortly before the murder of Steunenberg. The case for the defense in contradiction of the contention of Haywood with the actual murder or arrangements for the murder of Steunenberg is shown by the questions put so as to bring out evidence to show that Orchard reached Wallace planning to kidnap Paulson's children. Failing that he became poverty stricken and committed the burglary. Getting no proceeds from this he robbed a cash register. These funds running out, he borrowed $300 from the man who had been his partner and who had become rich from the proceeds of the mine, a sixteenth share of which Orchard had sold for a song, and envious of the rich man and angered at the thought that Steunenberg had driven him from the state, he planned the enterprise of vengeful assassination. The defense asserts that Simpkins was at Wallace at the time, in line with his duties as a member of the executive board of the Western Federation and that neither there nor at Caldwell had he any direct connection with Orchard's plans.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., June 13.—(Special)—A fatal accident occurred yesterday at Augustine Cove, the victim being Whitefield Laird, aged seventeen, son of Philip Laird, a farmer. The boy started harrowing, but left the team and went off, carrying his gun. The father, who at first felt no uneasiness, finally became alarmed at his prolonged absence and went in search. In the woods, at the edge of the field, he found the dead body of his son, with the head terribly shattered by a load of slugs, which had contained. The slugs entered beneath his chin and came out at the back of his neck. It is believed the discharge was accidental, presumably, when he was attempting to withdraw the load.

ALMOST A DROWNING

A "Near Tragedy" at Fox's Landing on the River Yesterday.

When the steamer Victoria was proceeding down river yesterday afternoon, an accident, which might have been a tragedy, occurred at Fox's Landing. William Fox, an elderly gentleman, rowed his daughter and another passenger out to meet the Victoria. He also had a calf, produce, and two cans of cream on board. Mr. Fox rowed at right angles to the steamer instead of coming alongside of her, and by so doing upset the small boat, precipitating himself, the two passengers, produce, cream and calf into the water. Mr. Fox climbed on top of the boat himself, and a young man named Reid, son of Sheriff Reid, of Gagetown, seeing Miss Fox go under, pulled off his coat and jumped in after her from the second deck. He caught her by the hair, but she went down a second time, and on coming up he put both arms about her. A life buoy had been thrown from the steamer and that was placed about Reid and Miss Fox. A boat was sent out to the Victoria and Mr. Fox and Miss Fox and the other passenger were rowed back to the landing. It is also said that after the boat upset the calf went down and has not been seen since, while the fish have been drinking cream ever since the accident.
