A ROMANCE OF LOMBARDY.

BY MARJORIE BOWEN.

"He came not, however, so we contented ourselves with the French Prince, who was to marry the Lady Valentine. Graziosa did not care for him; I thought him well-looking enough."

"His air was not a gay one, and he seemed foolish," said Graziosa; "and since he is not marrying for love, I am sorry for the Lady Valentine."

"Thou art always sorrowing for some one," said her father. "A princess never marries for love."

"Then I am glad I am no princess," smiled Graziosa, looking up at her betrothed.

Ambrogio raised her hand to his lips and kissed it in silence. There was one in particular—some weeks ago—we stayed in the back of the house that day. The old Visconti rode to Brescia, the soldiers said, his work behind him! Ah, for that day's work the Duke is a lost soul, Ambrogio."

There was a silence after this; the painter kept his eyes on the darkening sky. Ambrogio dropped his brush and rose with a pale face.

"I can paint no more," he said. "I am weary."

His daughter's lover sometimes puzzled him. His history, as he had told it to them, was a very plain one, his career straightforward, but Ambrogio's manner strangely varied; sometimes authoritative, strangely cold and haughty for a painter; sometimes, sometimes curious and overbearing. But to Graziosa he was always tender, and she saw nothing now but his pale face.

"No wonder thou art weary," she said tenderly. "Tis a long way from St. Joseph, thy home, and thou hast had no food."

Ambrogio stooped and kissed her upturned face.

"And I cannot stay for it even to take it from thy hands," he said with a sigh. "I meant not to stay at all, and only came to give thee thy bracelet, sweet; but soon, soon the altar-piece will be finished, and I come never to return."

"Finished," murmured the girl, her head against his arm. "When?"

"By midsummer, Graziosa. Is the time so long to thee?"

"I am so happy, Ambrogio, it does not seem possible I could be happier; still I think I shall be when thy altar-piece is finished."

Ambrogio looked at his painting long and sadly.

"If I could only stay," he said, and kissed her again.

"Surely it is still early, even for St. Joseph," said Ambrogio.

Ambrogio glanced out into the dusky street, where several gayly attired horsemen were riding.

"The Prior begged my early return," he said. "And so farewell, my father, for a little while, farewell!"

"Well, if it must be, it must," said Valentine cheerfully. "Thou wilt never fail for lack of industry. Still, Graziosa, even if thy lover goes, there is something left to amuse us. This evening the nobles ride in to attend the feast Visconti gives to-night to the French Duke. 'Twill be a noble feast, yet I doubt if the Lady Valentine has as many guests as thou art, Graziosa."

But his daughter returned no answer, for she was not there, but at the top of the dark stairway; she was saying farewell to her betrothed; and when Ambrogio turned from the window, she was leaning on his arm across the courtyard, for a last word at the gate.

MANTLE OF OLD GOLD SATIN AND CHIFFON.

Typical of the voluminousness which characterizes the dressy wraps of 1907 is the maharajah model from Beer. Whether its inspiration was found in the Japanese kimono or the priest's surplice it is difficult to say, for, strange as it seems, these two garments have much in common. But whichever served the purpose, certainly the finished result is all that might be expected of the clever brain and artistic fingers of its Parisian designer. The body of the garment may be described simply as an artistic arrangement of the satin in deep, soft folds, with trimmings of deep tulle fringes in the same color as the satin. Full sleeves of chiffon are set in the open sides, and over the top of these fall the fringes. Loops of silver braid finish the sleeve at the elbow, affording a charming color contrast.

"If ever, my lord," replied the secretary smoothly.

The two had withdrawn into the embrasure of one of the great open windows, and Visconti, glancing through its turn, his gaze there where, clear in the blue summer night, rose the outline of an abutting building, grim and dark and silent: Isotta's prison.

"See the guards he doubled there," he said. The secretary bowed.

"As to the Lady Valentine, my lord," he said hesitatingly, "she is safe and well, and at her prayers with her women. I have kept guard upon her slightest motion."

Visconti drew a ring from his finger. He was in a generous mood tonight, a rare one enough, as Giannotto thought with bitterness.

"Take this for thy pains," he said. "And now I will relieve thee of thy watch and with her bridegroom, waiting. Let the guests know I bring the bride, Giannotto."

Visconti withdrew the length of one of the corridors, and paused there at a door before which stood two soldiers, the guard of his sister's apartments. At his soft approach they stood back, and opening the folding doors, Visconti passed through, and quickly threaded the deserted ante-rooms until he reached the chapel that the lady used.

The place was dim, lit by red lamps that cast more shadow than gave light, and with high, stained windows, now scarcely showing color, and the grand floor under one of them, her head against a carved wall, her hands listless in her lap, was Valentine.

GET MY REMEDY

Is Dr. Hamilton's Advice to All Tired Women.

You are pale because your blood is weak and thin.

You can't have color and health till you get more blood, and better blood.

Health isn't possible so long as your liver and kidneys are inactive, and this is the trouble with the majority of anemic, pallid women.

My remedy overcomes your difficulty. It is purely vegetable, composed of health-giving extracts, like Mandrake, Butternut and Dandelion in combination with other agents that I have proved to be necessary in restoring the blood.

This wonderful remedy I call Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. I guarantee they will restore health and color to all women who suffer from anemia and lack of blood tone.

It's safe for me to guarantee my pills because I know by experience just what they will do.

If you haven't used my pills, now is the time to do so. They are in every drug store and are easily procured. Sold only in yellow boxes.

Remember the name—Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut—25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, and refuse a substitute.

SWEEP AWAY BY LAND SLIDE

Caving Bank of Earth on Canadian Northern Road Carries Away a Freight Train.

TORONTO, March 30 (Special).—A bad landslide occurred on the Canadian Northern Railway at Barnsley yesterday. A bank slid down just as a freight train was passing. The train and tracks were carried away by the force of the earth's avalanche, the tracks being shifted for some distance. No serious damage was done and nobody was injured, but it took several hours to get the track in shape again.

A pleasant little meeting was held on the R. M. S. Empress of Britain Saturday afternoon, the occasion being to present to Wm. Pollard, saloon steward, a silver souvenir as a token of the high esteem in which he was held by the victualling staff. Mr. Pollard, in a neat little speech, congratulated Mr. Pollard on his appointment to one of the C. P. R. hotels. He dwelt at some length upon the sterling qualities of Mr. Pollard, and wished him every success in his new sphere. Mr. Pollard replied in a short and suitable speech, and left in order to catch the 6.05 train for Montreal. Mr. Pollard was accompanied by his wife.

FOUND DEAD ON THE TRACK

English Laborer Was Probably Murdered For Few Dollars He Had.

TORONTO, Ont., March 30 (Special).—With his neck on one rail and four ghastly wounds in his head and with his clothing partly torn off, Edward Elliott, an English laborer, was picked up unconscious at midnight on Thursday on the G. T. R. main line between Port Credit and Lorne Park, and died shortly after. There are grave suspicions of foul play, robbery apparently being the motive. Elliott had been working with a section gang laying rails in the vicinity of Port Credit. On Thursday evening he called upon the station master there with a discharge ticket for his two weeks' pay. He received a few dollars. No money was found on the body on examination.

April Dividend Disbursements

Record breaking dividend disbursements for April will be made this year by all classes of corporations—industries, steam railroads and street railroads. The grand total will be in excess of $80,000,000.

April a year ago it was $36,483,960. Steam railroads led off with $36,483,960, against $29,177,020 for April last year. Industrials come next with $36,447,393 against $30,938,782 in 1906, and street railroads bring up the rear with $6,729,008, against $5,791,840 last year. Underlying the increase in dividend payments, of course, is the fact that a number of companies have raised the rate paid to stockholders. This has really one of the great features, particularly in railroad stocks, the percentage between April last year and this. Then, convertible bonds have been turned into stock in some cases, and this operation naturally increases the amount paid out on shares, while reducing that in the form of interest on bonds. Additions to the dividend list have also been made, which must likewise be reckoned with. This is the natural sequence of the great prosperity enjoyed by the country.

The large April disbursements will call for considerable preparation on the part of corporations and there will undoubtedly be considerable calling in of loans. This temporary withdrawal of money from the market in connection with arrangements that have to be made for settlements in the interior may lead to a higher range for all money for a spell.

A summary of the April dividend disbursements, with comparisons with the same month a year ago, follows:

	1907	1906	Increase
Industrial	$36,447,393	$30,938,782	$5,508,611
Railroads	$67,290,008	$5,791,840	$61,498,168
Street Railway	$6,729,008	$5,791,840	$937,168

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure—and have been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package.

For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label, and it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare others and see. No poison-marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by Druggists.

Two impressive addresses on temperance were delivered at the Every Day Club yesterday. The speaker in the afternoon was Bruce Addison, and in the evening S. P. McCavour. Each set forth clearly the effects of intemperance upon the individual, the home and the community, and made an earnest plea for total abstinence. At the evening meeting Mr. Dixon and Miss Morrison each sang a sacred solo. The active members of the Every Day Club will meet this evening at 7.30 sharp, and all are urged to attend at that hour.

At the morning service in St. George's church, Carleton Place, a large brass altar desk was presented to the church by the ladies' Bible class. The presentation was made by S. N. Sewell, superintendent of the Sunday school.

April Fool—or A Good One on Mike

ONE.

TWO.

THREE.

NEVER BUT ONCE

"Speaking of April fool," said the man with a look of permanent sorrow on his face, "I paid some little attention to it when I was a boy, but only once after arriving at the age of manhood. I was about 25 and in the dry goods business and hustling for all I was worth. When April fool came along I felt kiddy for some reason. In an old wallet in the store I had a counterfeit $50 bill, given me by the sheriff as a souvenir. I got it out, enclosed it in an envelope and dropped it on the street. Pinned to it was a bit of paper bearing the words 'April Fool!'"

"And it worked, did it?" was asked.

"Alas! it did. It was picked up by a stranger temporarily stopping at the village hotel. I stood in my store door and giggled and giggled and grinned as he tore open the envelope and carefully pocketed the contents after looking all around to see if he was observed."

"Well, where did the 'alas' come in?"

"It came into the store in the shape of the stranger while I was at dinner. He asked my clerk, who had white eyebrows and a guileless soul, to please change the bill and do him a great favor, and he had been gone on the train 15 minutes when I got back to the store. I was just 50 cold plunks out of pocket, and though that was 30 years ago, there are nights when I dream of the affair and wake up with tears in my eyes. Gentlemen, April fool may come and April fool may go, but I am not in it! I can't be in it. If I should set out to put an old hat in the road and a stone under it memories of that day would be there."

ONLY $240 IS NEEDED FOR CHAMPLAIN FUND

Mayor Sears Has Promises of Citizens so There is Little Doubt the Sum Will Soon be Raised.

THE CHAMPLAIN FUND

Dominion Government	$5,000
N. B. Government	1,500
St. John City Council	1,000
Daily Telegraph	250
Evening Times	250
Individual subscriptions	1,760
Balance Needed	240

With the vote of $1,000 passed by the common council for the Champlain monument fund, as told on another page of this issue, there remains $240 to be raised by subscriptions.

It is thought that there should be little difficulty in raising this sum within the next day or two, as there must be many citizens who have not yet contributed who would be willing to assist in erecting a monument worthy of such an important event as was the visit of the great explorer.

Mayor Sears, speaking to a Telegraph reporter, said he had received promises from several well known citizens to subscribe to the fund if their contributions were needed, and he thought a generous response from these gentlemen and a little help from others who had previously held back, the sum required should be quickly realized.

It is unlikely that for the present any decision as to the site of the monument will be come to. A number of suggestions have been put forward, and will each have to be carefully weighed before action is finally taken.

and pointed her out to Power. The couple were arrested and kept under surveillance till tonight, when the girl and her relative left by rail for New York.

Key is still detained in the immigration building. In his pocket he had an express order for £400. Key is said to have a wife and children in England. The girl's father is now on his way out by a steamer direct from London to New York to take her back to England.
