THE MONTH OF JANUARY AND THE MONEY MARKET

If general precedent is to be a guide in forecasting the New York money market, January should be a month of easy money rates. In only three of the past twenty years has call money loaned above 10 per cent. in January. A year ago, following the spasm of the last week of December, call money opened the year at 60 per cent., but this rate gave way to 4 per cent. before the week was through. Although 1900 opened with call money at 12 per cent., such a rate was a distinct ease from the 186 per cent. rate of the week before. The 1890 opening rate of 45 per cent. followed close on the heels of the advance in the Bank of England rate to six per cent. at the close of 1889, which in turn followed the undue speculation in this market at the end of that year.

Regarding the money outlook the London correspondent of the New York Evening Post cables:—The rate charged on our Stock Exchange this week, for "carrying over" American shares to the next settlement, is wholly unprecedented. Never before have charges on Americans been heavier than on South African mines yet at the moment when borrowers on your stocks, last Wednesday, were paying at the rate of 14 per cent. per annum, only 9 per cent. was asked on "Kaffirs" and 7 to 8 on ordinary home stocks.

These abnormally high "contangoes" on Americans were due to concerted action by English banks and financial firms, inspired not only by the really dear money in this market, but by a wish to test the extent of the speculation account in your stocks, and, if possible, to bring about a wholesome reaction in your prices.

The result of the test has been that, while a mcderate amount of securities were reshipped to New York, the balance of the account, which proved to be enormous, was largely arranged here by foreign banks.

Views of your market, as the year closes are highly conflicting; the majority hold, however, that a smash need not be assumed as inevitable. The entire position is admirably summed up today in a Times leading article, which takes the ground that the greates danger is your prosperity itself, occasioning your financiers to lose the sense of proportion. The Times also points out that the immense prosperity of the States is only equalled by the readiness to expend capital ad libitum for productive purposes. It again scouts Secretary Shaw's plea for extension of the powers of the Treasury, and says that such views of the duties and possibilities of the post of the finance minister confirm us in the belief that the sooner the Treasury is taken out of the banking business, the better.

Experts on the money market believe that New York will experience only moderate relief in the coming January. The money outlook here is highly complicated by the fact that the market has probably borrowed from the Bank of England as much as £16,000,000, which must be paid back during the next month. At the same time, the stringency on the German market is the worst on record, and is likely to extend throughout January.

The immediate course of the market here depends entirely on two factors—whether you will take gold and whether France will send it. As regards the first consideration. I believe that New York will not draw gold unless compelled by financial difficulties, which are not expected if a policy of general liquidation is pursued on your speculative markets. France, however, is not likely to send much more gold to us.

Statistics compiled by the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, show that in January a total of $84,461,975 will be paid in dividends by the chief railroad, industrial, traction, bank and trust companies, and that interest payments for the same month will approximate $94,795,000, giving a grand total for the month of $179,256,980, an increase of $38,102,928 over last January, and forming a new high record. The completed tables for 1906 show that the railroad, traction and industrial companies have distributed in dividends alone $537,381,385 during the twelve months in the following proportions: Industrials, $301,815,535; railroads, $206,851,580; tractions, $28,714,270.

INVEST $5,000,000 IN PARRY SOUND

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 1—Five million dollars is to be put into Parry Sound copper properties by J. S. and W. S. Kuhn, the Pittsburg millionaires and business partners of E. C. Converse, of Nipissing fame. Options on 4,000 acres of rich copper mines, including the McGowen, Wilcox and Spider Lake, were taken up on Saturday by Thomas A. Wood, mining prospector, of Parry Sound, on behalf of the capitalists referred to.

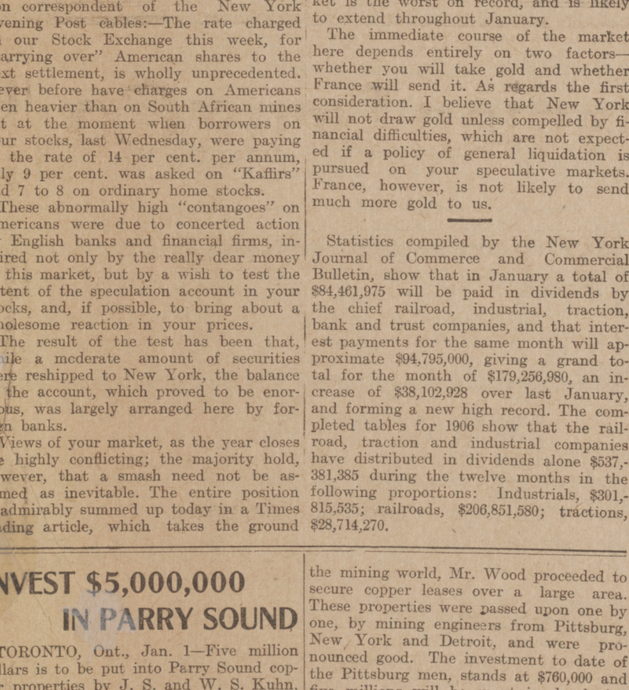

The work of demonstrating began last week. Quietly during the past summer, when Cobalt monopolized the attention of the mining world, Mr. Wood proceeded to secure copper leases over a large area. These properties were passed upon one by one, by mining engineers from Pittsburg, New York and Detroit, and were pronounced good. The investment to date of the Pittsburg men, stands at $760,000 and five millions will be spent in developing the properties.

TWO CITIES IN GERMANY

TWO GERMAN RIVERS

Berlin, Germany.

Dear Cousin Charley:

We spent New Year's Day in Berlin, the capital of Germany. We sat up and watched the old year out; that is, the old folks did. We kids went to sleep long before 12. I played a joke on the folks by pushing the regulator of the clock over, so that it would run fast, and they began yelling 'Happy New Year' 'about eleven o'clock and didn't find out differently until papa looked at his watch and then they knew that the joke was on them. We all made some resolutions that we won't keep. Mamma wanted papa to swear off smoking and make a lot of resolutions. Papa said he might as well get used to smoking now, and he had a lot of good ones left from last year that he hadn't used at all, and there wasn't much use for him to make any more. Well, we didn't sit up long enough to get acquainted with the New Year, but as soon as we saw that it arrived on schedule time we hit the hay; you know what that means, and "it" ain't Dutch either.

We went to New Year's services in a big cathedral, and although we couldn't understand anything that was said we liked the music. Gee! They had an organ that sounded like a whole brass band and orchestra put together, and the organist had long, bushy hair, and played with his hands and feet, too. That's no joke. We went up and saw the organ, and where he played after the preachin' was over, and saw the great big wooden keys he plays on with his feet. In the afternoon we went out to the parade grounds and saw a big military parade and review before the German Emperor I bet a dollar the United States could lick Germany; just look how easy we whipped Spain, and the Spaniards were heaps fiercer looking than the Germans.

In Germany they make every able-bodied man serve one year in the army, but in America they don't have to make them; they come when they are needed and they already know how to fight.

You know the Germans are great for Weiner Wursts, and we told Spots that they made them out of dogs. He understood all right, and he's scared green of butcher shops ever since and won't go near them.

The Germans are great people for drinking beer, and it makes them fat. That's why they wear wooden shoes, because they are so fat they can't stoop over to lace up the other kind.

Well, we go to Vienna next week and I will write you from there.

Yours,
HARRY.

MACBETH IN A MODERN VERSION

(CONTRIBUTED.)

(With sincere apologies to the original.)

Act III. Scene IV. The two dining halls in the Union Club. A Banquet prepared in each.

(Enter McL., some members of banquet committee, and a few attendant Prince William St. politicians.)

McL.—"You know your own degrees; grab all the vice-chairs and propose the several toasts. Myself will mingle with the magnates and millionaires, and even for a time I'll play the humble host in the lesser, graceless dining room."

(Enter 1st Pr. Wm. street politician to the door.)

McL.—"Here I'll sit i' the midst. Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure the table round. There's blood upon thy face."

1st Pr. Wm. St. Politician—"'Tis Banquo Blair's then."

McL.—"'Tis better thee without, than he within. Is he dispatch'd?"

1st Pr. Wm. St. Pol—"Dear Colonel, his character is quite gone; that my tales did for him."

McL.—"Thou art the best o' the cutthroats. Yet he's good, that did the like for Sears; if thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil."

1st Pr. Wm. St. Pol.—"Most royal sir, Sears is 'scaped."

McL.—"Then comes my fit again. I had else been perfect. Whole as the Bank, founded as the C. P. R.; as broad, and general, as the casing Gas. But now I'm Seared, and Tuckered out; a prey to doubts and fears. But Banquo Blair's safe?"

1st Pr. Wm. St. Pol.—"Ay, my proud-busted Colonel; safe in inglorious discomfited old age he bides, with mine and yours and Ontario's twenty trenched jealous gashes on his head; the least a death to new ambition."

McL—"Thanks for that.—Now, good boodling wait on opportunity, and I on both."

Colonel E—(Colonel in waiting to the real thing)—"May it please your highness now to enter the larger chamber and propose the city's health? 'Tis the toast you took upon yourself when the committee grudgingly divided up the rest among their baser selves."

An M. P. P. —(Not too closely acquainted with the committee's arrangements)—"I'd like to hear from Blair."

(The ghost of Banquo Blair rises and sits in McL's place).

McL. (Advances to take his seat and make his speech)—"The table's full."

North Wharf Politician: "Here's a place reserved, sir."

McL.—"Where?"

North Wharf Pol. —"Here, my colonel. What is 't that moves your highness?"

Some members of Committee: "What, our good colonel?"

McL.—"Pr'ythee, see there! Behold! look! O! how say you? Why, what care I? Thou art no Liberal as myself; a Liberal's he who follows whatso'er Sir Wilfrid craves."

(A loud rumbling inside the Globe, which ceases on recollection of the dog biscuit vote).

"The nomination's mine, against all odds; in spite of Tucker, or thyself and Sears."

(Ghost disappears).

1st Prince Wm. St. Pol.—"What! quite unmanned in folly?"

McL.—"If I stand here, I saw him."

North Wharf Pol.—"Fie, for shame!"

McL.—"Politicians have been deposed for once and all ere now, a few years back Tucker blocked my way; and likewise McKeown, too. Now that they are gone, Blair comes again with twenty mortal mistakes on his head and pushes me from my stool. This is more than strange than even both his resignations were."

(Exeunt).

NEW YORK A JEWISH TOWN?

There Are Now 800,000 Jews in That City---A Remarkable Story.

"Unquestionably we are thus face to face with one of the most remarkable phenomena of the time. New York, the headquarters of American wealth, intelligence, and enterprise — the most complete physical expression, we have been told, of the American idea — seems destined to become overwhelmingly a Jewish town," says Burton J. Hendrick, in "The Great Jewish Invasion" in the January McClure's, from which we quote further:

"More remarkable still, the great mass of its Jews are not what are commonly regarded as the most enlightened of their race. They are not drawn from Germany, from France, from Austria and England—countries in which the Jew has been practically Europeanized; but from Hungary, from Poland, from Roumania, from Galicia, above all from the Russian Empire." . . .

"Between the German and the Russian or Polish Jew there is almost as much difference as between the German and Russian Christian. . . The one is the product of free institutions and a tolerant civilization; the other is the victim of religious and economic persecution. In New York the German and Russian Jewish populations have always kept distinct. Intermarriages have been about as infrequent and as much frowned upon as between Protestants and Catholics. Nevertheless, the German element is probably not one-sixth of the whole Jewish population. In a word, New York is probably destined to be overwhelmingly a city of Hebrews."

There are now 800,000 Jews in New York City—the greatest Jewish community ever assembled in one place. Not only that—they have become a dominant factor of the society in which they live. Mr. Hendrick describes the picturesque ascent of the newly-landed Russian immigrant, with his poverty, his ignorance, his suspicious hatred of government authority, and his relentless ambition, to the station of a landowner, a manufacturer, or a merchant of standing and wealth. His analysis of the causes and conditions which are lending themselves to the advancement of the restless Hebrew in this country, and of the material symbols which mark the path of his triumphant march, is one of the most interesting pieces of sociological observation lately published.

"No people have had a more inadequate preparation, educational, and economic for American citizenship. "Out of the four or five million Jews," said a leading St. Petersburg newspaper in 1893, "only from ten to fifteen thousand have a stable means of subsistence." "What did you do in Russia?" the East-Side Jew is frequently asked today; a shrug of the shoulder is the invariable reply;" says Burton J. Hendrick.

Mr. Hendrick tells how in Russia all manner of restrictions have been heaped upon them:—"They are kept out of all the learned professions, virtually forbidden the primary schools, the technical institutions, and the universities,—even those which they have founded themselves,—and prevented from owning or leasing agricultural land. . . . .

"They are shut up in a few cities, forbidden to live in the country, or in the Russian towns. By the state they are treated as outcasts. They are not Russians and never become such; in the caste system of Russian society they are reckoned in the same class with the Kirghiz of Siberia, the Kalmucks of Astrakhan, and other semi-civilized tribes. Thus, when they land at Ellis Island, they are to a large extent ignorant, unable to read or write; personally uncleanly; without professions or skilled trades; inevitably with a suspicious hatred of governmental authority. Their only capital stock is an intellect which has not been stunted by centuries of privation, and an industry that falters at no task, however poorly paid."

INCREASE OF OVER $200,000,000

The total volume of business done through all the Montreal banks during the year 1906, as officially reported by the clearing house showed an increase of over two hundred millions as compared with last year.

The total clearings for 1906 were $1,533,597,000, compared with $1,324,313,000 in 1905, an increase of $200,284,000.

The big increase is especially remarkable because the year was a quiet one on the exchange of the Montreal Stock Exchange indicating it was due almost entirely to commercial expansion.

John T. Knight, the manager of the Montreal Clearing House, in commenting on the big business done, stated he considered the increase a very satisfactory one, especially as last year the clearings had been beyond those of the previous year.
