...That... Preposterous ..Will..

BY L. G. MOBERLY.

Mrs. Bedsworth's face grew livid. Mr. Bray's voice held unmitigated astonishment.

"Why do you think Mr. Dayrell will ever give up this marriage on which his soul is set?"

"Because Stella's mother isn't going to let him hang round waiting for her for ever, don't you be afraid. When she sees there's no money in the job, nor likely to be any money, then she'll give him the chuck; that's the sort she is. Oh! it's easy to see through that."

"But—but," the lawyer stammered, whilst the listener by the folding doors breathed quickly, "why then has the engagement been allowed to continue?"

"She's waiting to see if I'll marry somebody else, or hand out some of my money," the answer came with the nonchalance of one stating a simple and obvious fact; "and if Mr. Dayrell isn't going to get any of it till after I'm dead, she'll get a bit impatient, and she'll make Stella give him up."

Mr. Bray gasped, as did the listening woman, but the expression on the face of the latter boded little good to the girl who spoke out her thoughts frankly, with no conception that the words could be overheard.

"So I'll give him the chief part of the money," Molly added, "then he won't bear me a grudge any more." A sigh punctuated the sentence, a sigh whose significance neither the lawyer nor Mrs. Bedsworth could interpret.

There was a long silence in the library, broken only by a rustling of paper and the scratching of a pen.

"Then Mr. Bray's voice spoke again.

"I took the liberty of bringing a draft of a will with me," he said, "and the necessary filling in of details will take a very short time. Then if you can call two persons to witness your signature, the whole matter will be done."

Mrs. Bedsworth very softly and silently rose from her seat, bundled her packets of bills into a drawer, and left the dining-room in the same noiseless manner in which she entered it. Ten minutes later, when Molly Hume came into the drawing-room, she found the lady of the house sitting at her writing table, so deeply immersed in her correspondence, that she gave quite a realistic start when the girl's voice sounded close beside her.

"I didn't hear you come in," she said, looking up into the girl's face with her most bewitching smile. "Well, my dear, and have you and your solicitor finished all your business? You have had quite a long confabulation."

"Yes—quite," Molly answered unhesitatingly. "Mr. Bray has been drawing up my will, and he sent me to fetch some one to witness my signature. Would you come and do it, Mrs. Bedsworth?"

"With pleasure, dear, though it seems like an odd sort of thing to think of your making a will at all."

"It does seem a bit queer, doesn't it, and I don't feel like dying; but there, you never know: that was the way Mr. Bray put it. And he said I was to bring two witnesses," she added, when she and Mrs. Bedsworth were outside the drawing-room.

"Anna will do no doubt; I will call her, and we will both come," and suiting the action to the words, Mrs. Bedsworth

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY
PINE SYRUP

Always Stops the Cough

It combines the potent healing virtues of the pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe.

A cough is caused by the presence of phlegm in the throat and lungs, and continued coughing is liable to distend the bronchial tubes, congest the lungs and produce inflammation or hemorrhage.

A neglected cough can have but one result. It leaves either the throat or lungs, or both, affected.

A single dose of
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine
Syrup

will stop the cough, soothe the throat and heal the lungs.

Read what Miss Nettie A. Seeley, Ashland, N.B., says: "I take much pleasure in recommending Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I have found it a very valuable remedy for coughs. My mother has used it in our family for a long time and whenever any of them got a cough, mother will say: 'I will have to get some Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for I know it is good, and always stops the Cough when nothing else will.'"

Insist on getting Dr. Wood's as it is the genuine, put up in yellow wrapper. Price 25 cents at all dealers. 3 pine trees the trade mark.

CHILD'S DRESS OF CLOTH AND EMBROIDERY.

The little frock depicted in the sketch was in the original model of pink broadcloth, but the design is simple enough to serve for even a school frock of dark colored serge or of linen. Stitched straps and buttons with braid or cord loops were the only trimming beyond a guimpe and undersleeves of fine embroidered washable batiste.

dickered over them for an instant.

"I have owed Godfrey Haines something all my life—perhaps now—the time has come—to pay my debt," she laughed a low laugh that had a cruel ring; "and now I owe Miranda Hume—his tool—something as well. She knows too much—perhaps she even knows that I—that Godfrey—Her thoughts broke off at that point, and she sat gazing in front of her with fixed staring eyes, looking back into a past of which she had no reason to be proud. Then suddenly she seemed to rouse herself with a start, and drew herself up in her low chair.

"So—Alan will not get the money till Stella is married to somebody else. That is your idea, young lady, is it? and a very fine idea, too—her thoughts were rushing on now at racing speed—but perhaps—perhaps somebody else may have fine ideas beside yourself. Supposing—for instance, that after all you did die before Stella was married to another man? Other young girls have died before now—and—not you—why not you? I have come sometimes even to the very young; even children die—and if you died—young—Alan would marry Stella—and Godfrey Haines would be paid—would be paid—"

Again her thoughts trailed into vacancy, her eyes seemed this time to be peering into the future rather than the past; then she rose slowly from her chair, and pulled out of a bookshelf above her head a small book bound in black, and bearing the title, Household Medicine: Poisons and their Antidotes, etc.

"I wonder," she whispered, under her breath, "I wonder—whether I—could—if I dare—"

And she moved from the open window and stood under the electric light, attentively reading a page of the book she held.

CHAPTER IX.

"I haven't even given a thought before to what heaven would be like, but now I'm just as I feel like that it's bound to be something like this."

Molly Hume stood upon the terrace of her house at Simley, looking out across the garden, with eyes dancing with gladness.

"I never thought this country would be anything like so beautiful," she exclaimed after a pause, sighing from sheer rapture, and falling silent again whilst her eyes wandered over the fair prospect before her.

The lawn sloping down from the terrace was of that velvet softness only found in very old and very well kept turf, and along its borders were flower beds which to the London girl's eyes seemed to be a mass of flowers. Mr. Haines had objected to the kind of gardening which consists in bedding out orderly rows of geraniums, lobelia and calceolarias, edged with feverfew, and in spite of all the remonstrances of his orthodox gardener had insisted upon filling the beds with herbaceous plants, and with old-fashioned homely treasures, and with roses.

The borders towards which Molly gazed so delightedly held a tangled yet orderly confusion of blossom. Tall larkspurs, dark and light blue, rusy and white, grew side by side with lupines, with Canterbury bells and mallows. Here and there marigolds made golden splashes of yellow, and white lilies stood stately and tall in the background. Below the parapet against which the young owner of it all was leaning, grew a luxuriant row of sweet peas of every hue, sending up wafts of fragrance on the soft June breezes.

Along the stone of the parapet itself roses and clematis and starry jessamine climbed together in riotous confusion, and farther along the lawn great beds of roses basked in the summer sunshine.

The Girl Who Earns Her Living

One of the marvellous developments of modern life is the advent of woman as a co-laborer with man throughout the entire industrial field.

It follows then that woman must adapt herself to new conditions. But this can't be done in one generation, nor in ten. In consequence she lives in an environment of unhygienic conditions, unsuited to her temperament and constitution.

The incessant strain upon her nervous system by reason of the new vocations she has taken up, strikes at the very foundation of her physical stability.

Work becomes worry, and this means destruction to the nervous system. Very complex in her physical relations to life, disease early seizes upon the woman who works, and she must therefore guard jealously anything that would tend to destroy her vitality or health.

Probably nothing is of more service than Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and every girl and woman can employ this grand remedy with gratifying results.

As a system tonic and blood renovator, no treatment gives such results. For maintaining good digestion, healthy appetite and the proper performance of the duties of the liver and kidneys, it is impossible to equal Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Dusky, sallow complexion is changed to a healthy, ruddy glow, which proves that Dr. Hamilton's Pills circulate blood that is rich and nourishing.

Weak organs are filled with new life and vitality; weakness, irregularities and the common ills are prevented, and this means much to those who have lived in that half-sick, half-well condition that seems so hard to overcome.

When you feel poorly, when the head aches, back feels lame, and a drowsy, tired feeling creeps through you—that's what tells of the need of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; try them.

Sold in yellow boxes, 25c., each or five for $1.00 at all dealers, and satisfaction guaranteed.

GOVERNMENT AND THE C.P.R.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson Talks of
C. P. R.'s Application for Running Rights.

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—Hon. H. R. Emmerson, being interviewed in regard to the application of the C. P. R. for running rights over the Intercolonial from St. John to Halifax, said that his department was approached by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy in this direction. Nothing definite was decided upon and the matter had not yet been submitted to the cabinet.

As far as the Canadian mail contract was concerned it would have to be carried out at St. John as well as Halifax, as they were now doing.

It is understood that what the C. P. R. desires is to have the mails and passengers for the Orient handled at Halifax instead of St. John. The company thinks that better time would be made in this way and in addition through passengers for Montreal could be taken by their road instead of by the I. C. R.

Mr. Emmerson told your correspondent that the Canadian mail steamers and heavy freight would have to come to St. John as at present, even if the running rights were given. At any rate the I. C. R. would require satisfactory terms from the C. P. R. and this would cost something, most probably more than the company would care to pay.

King Edward Lodge, No. 3, P. A. P. B., have elected F. Lanyon, W. M.; W. Price, D. M.; E. McLeod, Chap.; H. Sellen, R. S.; R. Melvin, Assistant Secretary; W. Smith, F. S.; T. Woodland, Treasurer; C. Sweet, D. of C.; D. Wells, Lect.; R. Peer, Assistant; E. Melvin, I. C.; C. McLeod, O. G.; F. Blizard, J. Gunde, A. Brown, E. Melvin, D. Wells, Fin. Auditors; C. Price, L. Callaghan, C. Nice, A. McLeod, investigating committee; Wm. Davis, I. McLeod, F. Lanyon, Trustees. A new hall was built by the lodge during the year.

AN EVERY DAY CLUB ON A PROPER SCALE

Magnificent Provision Made By Private Beneficence for Working Boys in Chicago—The Most Complete Boys' Building in America.

(Charities and The Commons).

When Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, on Jan. 12, turned over to Miss Jane Addams the keys of the most complete building for boys' work in America, Judge Mack, of the Chicago juvenile court, well said there was no one present who did not envy her in the privilege. Miss Helen Culver gave a sketch of Mr. Hull's interest in the boys' neighbors long ago, and said there was nothing she wished he could come back to see more than the juvenile court and this building for boys which stands on his land.

Captain Bradley, of the Allendale Farm, showed how the country colony and the city clubs for boys supplement each other. Professor Graham Taylor described the building as incarnating the whole boy in brick and mortar, and meeting him at the critical periods of his life, while at the same time adding an extension and equipment to every tenement house home and suggesting the type of what a humanized city could do as its public schools and library, its parks and recreation centres are brought into effective co-operation to solve the big problem of the small boy.

The building is four stories in height, with an English basement; it is constructed of brick and stone and cost $50,000. This, with $15,000 for furnishings and equipment, was given by Mrs. Bowen. The endowment given by Miss Culver amounts to $50,000.

Blacksmith, forging, and moulding shops, and facilities for all sorts of metal and wood working, are at one end of the basement. The rest of the basement is given over to pool and billiard tables and two regulation bowling alleys. The first floor contains a large room that can be used for assembly purposes as occasion arises, but which is ordinarily to be used for small games. Another room on the first floor is called the "athletic room," and is fitted up with light gymnasium apparatus. A library of about 1,000 books and a study room are located on the second floor. There are also on this floor a small but fully equipped room for hand printing, a chemical laboratory, a dark room for camera work, and a room for library classes. These facilities are designed for boys who are at work and wish to make use of their evenings. A portion of this floor is also given over to the flat for the resident in charge.

The Culver Club is to occupy the third and fourth floors. There is room for thirty-two working boys who have no homes. The dormitory rooms contain six, three or two boys each, while there are six single rooms for boys who deserve these quarters. An attractive dining room, a writing room—with easy chairs and a fireplace—and the kitchen arrangements are all to be under the direction of the boys themselves, a co-operative plan to be adopted. Two residents will live with the boys in the Culver Club, and these, together with the residents in charge of the building will have their meals with them.

The whole building will accommodate about 500 boys each night, and it is probable that as many as 800 or 900 boys of the neighborhood will have membership in the club. Volunteer workers are counted upon to help in the evenings.

Pond & Pond are the architects of the building. They have done all the work for Hull House as well as for several other Chicago settlements.

In Brussels street Baptist church last evening five Chinese were baptized by the pastor, Rev. A. B. Chubb. Rev. Mr. Chubb preached a powerful sermon from the text: "I come not to judge the world but to save the world." The church was crowded.
