

The Evening Times.

FIRST EDITION

THE WEATHER.
Fresh south and southwest winds, showery. Wednesday, westerly winds, mostly fair and cooler.

VOL. IV, NO. 48

ST. JOHN, N. B., TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1907.

ONE CENT

CHICAGO ATHLETES WILL GIVE WELCOME TO WESTON

Age d Pedestrian Due at Windy City This Afternoon.

Sixty-Nine Years of Age, He Has Walked 1230 Miles from Portland, Me., at the Remarkable Speed of Five Miles Per Hour.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Edward Payson Weston, 69 years old, is scheduled to walk into Chicago at 4 p. m. today or thereabouts at the rate of five miles an hour and complete at the steps of the New Illinois Athletic Club a record-breaking walk of 1230 miles from Portland, Maine, begun Oct. 29. If Weston finishes his walk as planned and it is probable he will, he will have done what he sought to do and beaten the record established by himself forty years ago, when in his prime as a pedestrian, he was one of the champion walkers of his world.

His record for the distance made when he was 29 years old, was 26 secular days, for Weston never walks on Sunday. If he finishes his present performance in Chicago this afternoon he will have beaten the record of his young days by several hours. According to despatches sent out from towns which he has touched along the route, Weston has been getting faster rather than slower in his promenade, for several days past. For some time he was troubled with acute indigestion which hampered his speed, of late, however, he has been in good physical condition, and has been reading off the miles at the rate of five per hour with little apparent trouble. The new Illinois Athletic Club has planned to have a reception committee in automobiles greet Weston at South Chicago. There will also be a detachment of the First regiment as a guard of honor and a bugle corps. Not the least interesting part of the throng that is expected to greet Weston will be the old timers who cheered him on when he entered Chicago forty years ago.

Weston left the postoffice at Portland, Maine, Oct. 29th, last, bearing a letter to be delivered at the post office in Chicago to the postmaster or his representative.

Weston's schedule called for his arrival there November 27, but he has consistently kept ahead of it. If he reaches the city this afternoon he will be ahead of the record of 1867, by nearly 24 hours. Weston has met with a good deal of difficulty on the present trip because of muddy roads, but in spite of that handicap he has steadily maintained his advantage over the demands of a guard of honor and a bugle corps. The only advantage he has had in his present attempt in comparison with the walk when he was a young man, is that the roads on the average are much better now than they were then over the route traveled. During the entire trip Weston has been met with much enthusiasm along the route, towns turning out en masse to greet him. It is said that Weston intends to lecture on his experiences during the present trip. He is an enthusiastic believer in the virtues of walking, which he announces a cure-all for the ills of humanity.

LABOR WANTS PROHIBITION

Dr. Shearer Reports Moral Reform Work in West Progressing.

(Toronto World.)
Rev. Dr. Shearer has returned from the west, where he attended the annual meetings of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Synods, at Moosejaw and Winnipeg respectively.

At both enthusiastic interest was taken in the moral reform work, and in the temperance question particularly. Prohibition as the ultimate goal was favored by both synods, but recognizing the fact that this was not immediately possible in the western provinces they were prepared to enter upon an aggressive campaign (1) For the municipal veto or local option; (2) for the abolition of public houses and the treating system, limiting the sale to shops, but not for consumption upon the premises; and (3) for the placing of the residual sale into the hands, either of a public commission, or of some governmental department, thereby removing the element of private gain.

He also attended inter-denominational conferences at Regina and Winnipeg, which pronounced unanimously for the municipal veto, as well as the abolition of the bar and the treating system. But no decision was reached on the question of placing the residue of the traffic in the hands of the public in some form. A new feature consisted in the attitude of the trades and labor council of Regina and of the labor representatives at Winnipeg, who in a body supported the three propositions mentioned.

CLAIM THAT BROWN WAS REGULARLY ORDAINED

Congregational Association Discusses Case of Chinese Missionary in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 25 (Special).—The Congregational Association this morning took up the question "Is the ordination of the Congregational church to stand, and are marriages performed by them to be considered valid?"

The question arose from Judge Winchester's decision setting aside the authority of Brown, the Chinese missionary, to perform marriages on the ground that he was not a duly ordained minister. The Congregational church maintains Brown was ordained by two Congregational churches, Rev. Chas. Buff, now dead, and Pastor John Salmon, of Bethany chapel, and the association had a perfect right to ordain its ministers according to the constitution. The association ratified the action of Pastor John Salmon in ordaining Brown. The decision of Judge Winchester, they claim, will lead to no end of complications regarding the validity of marriages.

THE LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

Important Meetings Will Be Held in Toronto During This Week.

A series of meetings of more than passing interest in connection with the Lord's Day Alliance, will be held in Toronto during the last week in November.

The annual meeting of Toronto branch will convene on Thursday, November 28, at 8:30 p. m. in St. James Square Presbyterian church, Toronto. Addresses will be delivered by His Grace Archbishop Sweatman, of the Roman Catholic hierarchy, and also by Rev. Ralph Smith, Esq., M. P., of Nanaimo, B. C., a leader in the labor movement in Canada; Rev. L. Norman Tucker, D. C. L., John A. Paterson, K. C., and others.

In the afternoon of the same day the annual meeting of the Ontario Provincial Alliance will convene in the same place. St. James Square Presbyterian church lecture hall, at two o'clock.

The reports will cover the work accomplished during the past year, and outlining an aggressive campaign for the coming months. As this is the first year the new Lord's Day Act is in force much interest will center in this question.

On Friday the session being held at ten a. m. and two p. m. the triennial convention of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada will be held in St. James' Cathedral parish hall, Church street. Delegates are expected from all the provinces. The report of Rev. Dr. Shearer will contain the intensely interesting story of the steps taken to secure the Federal Lord's Day Act; the intense struggle against mighty odds when the bill was before parliament; the account of how the act has been received in the various provinces, and point out how it has brought freedom to tens of thousands of Canadians, who, otherwise, would still be slaves to seven-day-in-the-week toil. There will also be plans made for the future.

The cant of the president (Rev. Dr. Potts) will be filled at the morning session by His Grace Archbishop Sweatman, the honorary president.

Every person who is interested in the preservation of the Lord's Day is assured a hearty welcome to any or all of these meetings.

POPE'S CHOICE OF CARDINALS

English-speaking Catholics Dissatisfied Because They Are Not Represented in New List.

ROME, Nov. 26.—The selection of new cardinals again has caused dissatisfaction among the English speaking Catholics who are represented in the new list. Especially is that the case with those of England, who have been without a cardinal since the death of Cardinal Vaughan. According to statements made at the Vatican, it was found impossible to give another Cardinal to America, as all the Latin-American countries would also claim their right to one, already considering themselves badly treated because a cardinal had been granted to Brazil alone. The French cardinals were named, the Pope wishing to reward the loyalty of the French clergy in the conflict between the French government and the Vatican. Mgr. Cabrières, Bishop of Montpellier, who was preferred by the Pope, was not appointed, however, the Pope fearing that this might be considered a manifestation against French institutions.

QUICK DESPATCH

From Liverpool to Edmonton in Eleven Days.
(London Daily Mail)

To the Editor of the Overseas Daily Mail: Sir,—I attach a cutting from a local paper concerning some birds, which we had shipped out here the other day. Surely this achievement will require some beating?

Yours faithfully,
KNOWLES BROS.

"Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.—To trans fer goods from Liverpool, Eng., to Edmonton, Alberta, in 11 days is the record of the Dominion Express, in connection with a consignment of five Indian game fowls, ordered by Knowles Bros. Edmonton. They were shipped in Liverpool on September 29th, and arrived here on October 1st, beating a letter, posted on the same day, which did not get here till the following day. The express goods came over by the Empress of Ireland, via Montreal, and the letter by the Lusitania, via New York. Both steamers left the same day."—The Gazette, Montreal.

Society at the New York Horse Show.

The second day of the annual horse show in Madison Square Garden, New York, really marked the premiere of this horse fair, which has sounded for years the call of duty and gave emphasis to the fact that the horse is not only a creature of beauty and grace, but also a creature of great utility and intelligence.

With a moon of silver beaming lazily down from the November skies, which on the previous night had been overcast with leaden clouds that poured their dreary, unrelenting rain, society responded to the call of duty and gave emphasis to the fact that the horse is not only a creature of beauty and grace, but also a creature of great utility and intelligence.

The public generally proclaimed, too, its interest in the ruler of the week by greatly increased attendance. The tiered seats rearing their heights behind the circle of boxes, practically all filled with persons prominent in society and fashion, were crowded in nearly every section.

The promenade took on the appearance of the gala nights of other years. Every factor was present, despite numbers of vacant seats, to prove the truth of the first night's prediction that the Horse Show of 1907 will write for itself a record of success most gratifying.

Enthusiasm was vigorously evident from the first blast from the ring leader, which brought into the tank ellipses a galloping, dashing squad of polo ponies. Applause reached greatest volume with the central event of the night—the contest for the National Horse Show Gold Challenge Cup.

As the horse had thrown down the gauntlet to his rival, the automobile, and made the car acknowledge itself conquered, so woman tested her skill as driver and equestrienne against man. And the woman carried off the applauding honors of the second day of the horse fair.

It was a woman—Mrs. C. W. Watson, wife of the owner of Fairmont Farms, at Fairmont, W. Va.—who handled the ribbons over the pair of thoroughbreds which carried off the gold challenge cup for the year. And proud indeed was Mrs. Watson when the blue rosette was awarded to her two charges, Lord Baltimore and My Maryland II, after one of the most spirited and closest contests that ever had taken place in the great garden.

The event offered one of the most trying problems yet presented to the judges. Reginald G. Vanderbilt sat behind two thoroughbreds which on Monday had carried off the blue ribbon in another harness class. Alfred G. Vanderbilt was at the 'Tonsylvania' from his Oakland Farm, William H. Moore, brother of James H. Moore, whose entries carried off the same coveted prize in 1905, drove 'Pride of Prides' and 'King of Kings' two thoroughbreds that have many victories to their credit. And besides these was the entry of Mrs. William Orr Barclay, driven with expert generalship by George C. Clausen, and Harry D. Holloway's spirited pair.

RECEPTION TO MR. R. L. BORDEN

Borden Club of Ottawa Will Give Conservative Leader Big Time Tomorrow Evening

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—(Special).—The Borden club is actively engaged in its preparations for the big reception which the organization has planned on the occasion of the arrival of Mr. R. L. Borden in the Russell theatre on Wednesday evening, Nov. 27th.

The club will escort the leader to the theatre with a torchlight procession and several bands will take part in the demonstration. Already acceptances to the demonstration have been received from the executives of Carleton, Prescott and Russell, while delegations from Toronto, Montreal, Hull and Aylmer will also be present. Mr. Whitney will in all likelihood come to the meeting but his reply is not yet to hand.

THE WRECK OF THE ST. JOHN SCHR. CORA B.

Capt. Johnson, Fearing Gale Drove His Little Vessel Ashore.

GLoucester, Mass., Nov. 25.—Fearing that his vessel would be driven to sea by the northeast gale, Capt. Johnson, of the little British schooner Cora B, cut away his anchor chains early Monday and hoisting a jib drove his vessel ashore on the rocks at Fresh Water cove. The crew reached shore over a plank for the vessel was close to land when she struck the ledge. The Cora B was breaking apart at noon Monday.

The schooner left Boston for St. John last Thursday with a cargo of provisions and furniture. She anchored here Saturday first when the gale came on Sunday another anchor was sent over. The vessel was well out from the harbor and late Sunday night the storm was so heavy that she began to drag. The gale blew directly out of the Gloucester harbor and Capt. Johnson found that the vessel was in danger of being carried out into the open sea, and then getting a plank, assisted his crew to the shore. One of his men, who was sick in his bunk, had to be carried over the plank. Everyone on board was able to bring his personal effects with him as he left the vessel.

The Cora B was built at Canning, Queens County, N. B., in the year 1890, and was sold to Nova Scotia parties about five or six years ago. She registered 90 tons. The following are the names of her crew: Captain George Johnson, Avon Johnson, Harvey Currey and John Jackson.

THE ATHENIA ARRIVES

Donaldson Liner Was Off the Island This Morning and Will Dock This Afternoon—She Had a Quick Passage.

The third Donaldson line steamship, the Athenia, Captain McNeill, arrived off Partridge Island this morning from Glasgow. This steamer made the passage across the Atlantic in nine and one half days, which is considered a quick run. She has on board about 300 passengers, and will come up to No. 4 berth this afternoon. The Athenia has a large general cargo for this port, and the west, including 5,000 bags Scotch hard coal; also 20 Clydesdale colts and fillies for A. & J. Mutch, and one Clydesdale colt for T. B. Macanlay of Montreal.

At the annual meeting of the New Brunswick Historical Society which is to be held this evening, Clarence Ward who has been the secretary for 26 years will resign that position. Mr. Ward feels that he has looked after the duties long enough and now some one younger should take a hand. During his term of office Mr. Ward has only missed about half a dozen meetings.

A meeting of the new Liberal patronage committee was held this morning at the office of Heber S. Keith. Members of the committee when asked what was done said the meeting was private and there was nothing to be made public.

The circuit court held session this morning at 10 o'clock, Judge Hanington presiding. No cases were taken up and adjournment was made until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

J. A. Pugsley returned from Montreal on the noon train today.

R. A. Estey, of Fredericton, is in the city.

FREDERICTON JUNCTION PEOPLE WERE FRIGHTENED

ULTIMATUM TO THE M... Steamship People... To Return To Work or Montreal Men Will Come.

an With a Gun "Shot Up" the American Hotel.

The situation between the longshoremen and the steamship people remains unchanged, although it is believed that a settlement may be reached before tomorrow.

This morning there was a conference in the office of the Robert Reford Company at which the longshoremen were represented by President Sullivan, Business Agent O'Neil and Secretary Daley and the steamship interests by Captain Walsh of the C. P. R. and H. C. Schofield of the Donaldson line.

The matter of wages was discussed at length and the longshoremen were informed that if a settlement was not reached by tomorrow, men would be brought from Montreal to do the work.

The delegation from the longshoremen will appear to the assessors and a decision will be reached probably tonight.

He Discharged Three Shots At the House and Threatened To Blow the Landlord's Brains Out—Incident Caused Much Excitement.

FREDERICTON N. B., Nov. 26.—(Special).—A man with a revolver gave the occupants of the American Hotel at Fredericton Junction a bad scare at eleven o'clock last night. He discharged three shots at the house, one of the bullets entering a window and embedding itself in the wall, after passing dangerously close to Miss Sheehan, the house-keeper, who was sitting in the room. When landlord Sheehan opened the door to investigate a voice from the darkness called out to him to close the door and get out of sight or he would blow his brains out. The revolver shots and the murderous threat naturally threw the occupants of the hotel into a state of terror and they telephoned to this city for the police. Owing to lack of communication with the junction at that hour, however, no response was made to the message. The proprietor of the hotel and some commercial travellers and railway men who were his guests armed themselves and kept a close watch all night for renewal of attack but it was not made. It was thought at first that the shooting was done by tramps whose motive was robbery but the impression prevails today that it was the work of a well known local character who was bent on getting even with the proprietor for refusing him liquor. The incident naturally created great excitement in the village.

JUVENILE CRIME IN CITY OF WINNIPEG

Sixty or Seventy Lads Out on Suspended Sentence—The Crime of Parents.

(Winnipeg Free Press.)

Almost daily there appear before the city magistrate at Winnipeg, juveniles charged with very grave offences against the law. Boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for the purpose of house-breaking and burglary, have fallen into the hands of the police. But singly there are many young law-breakers that fall into the clutches of the law. These boys are not transgressors entirely of their own accord. In too many cases the cause of their fall into the paths that lead to vice and crime lies with the parents. Whether this is the cause of the existing prevalence of the law, boys varying in age from eight to twelve years, organized into gangs for