THE STORY OF THE YEAR'S WORK TOLD AT MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

At the Annual Meeting Last Evening the Reports Were Presented---J. B. Cudlip Was Re-elected President.

The annual meeting of the Associated Charities was held last night in the board of trade rooms, with a good number present. The president, J. B. Cudlip, was in the chair. The treasurer's report showed besides a small balance, that $250 had been received from the city council. The opinion of the meeting seemed to be that this amount should not be used towards current expenses, but altogether for distribution.

During the evening addresses were delivered by Mayor Sears, Rev. G. A. Kuhring, Hon .R. J. Ritchie, Dr. T. D. Walker, W. S. Fisher and J. D. Hazen, M. P. P.

The question of immigration as affecting the conditions of the people formed the subject of some of the speakers, and a letter on sanitation from Dr. Roberts caused some little discussion.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. Hall, told that applications for assistance in the year numbered 1,849, as against 1,455 in 1906. These included—seeking relief, 120; employment, 105; advice given, 178; ladies requiring maids, 176; employers wanting men, 50; recommended to employers, 139; requests for night's lodgings, 37; sent elsewhere for aid, 21; found to be receiving sufficient aid, eight; not to be found at given addresses, eight; frauds, 16; four new ones. Each year they are found under assumed names. Eleven were tramps, fifteen came under the influence of liquor and were refused assistance; requests for children for adoption, four; all supplied; requests for boys from 12 to 14 years of age in rural districts, 34; of girls of like age, 25; only four were sent and these have proved quite satisfactory so far.

Requests were received for 29 working housekeepers in the city and of these eight secured permanent employment; 15 experienced nurses were required and four only could be found; several requested a male nurse, but one could not be found outside of institutions; requests for men for odd jobs, 33; difficulty was experienced in this class as the complaint was made that the work was indifferently performed while large pay was exacted.

Employment was found for 387; much of it was only temporary. Of this number eighty-one were men, forty-five boys, forty-four young girls, and 217 women; not responding when work was secured, twelve, of whom ten were women.

At Christmas the names and addresses of forty families were given to churches, societies and individuals, when dinners, fuel, clothing, flour and in some cases cash were given for the children. One of the city churches had provided a Christmas supper and tree for the children.

During the year 105 cases were investigated; records were given to 100; these are given in confidence to church or societies or individuals interested. The society united with one of the city churches to send a family of four to England. Transportation was procured for eight persons through kindness of individuals; four sick were sent to their friends. Three were provided with transportation, where they secured employment, and two returned the amount given.

Nationalities represented were: English, 22; Scotch, 12; Germans, 8; Irish, 5; the rest Canadians; 700 visits were made; 150 letters written. Mrs. G. Rolt White and lady friends had made and given 124 garments for children. The committee greatly appreciated this thoughtful act, also $10 for the work. Gifts from Oak Hall, the W. C. T. U., Alms House Commissioners, the King's Daughters and a large number of individuals and societies were acknowledged.

In summing up the year's work improvement was noted in many directions. Difficulties must be faced, such as intemperance with its train of misery; immorality and indolence, which bring poverty. A great need also was the better housing of the working man. The tenement conditions in many sections reflected discredit on the city. Better protection for the uncared children of the city was also needed. Cases of cruelty and neglect were reported, but at present the society was powerless to cope with these, but with more experience and better legislation in the near future much is hoped for.

The treasurer, J. Hunter White, read the following statement:

On motion of Dr. Thomas Walker, the reports were adopted.

President Cudlip, in his address noted with satisfaction the great work being done. Conditions were, he believed, improving. Public begging was on the decrease. They were particularly fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. J. McD. Hall. Reference was made to the system of keeping track of people which, while good, would be improved upon. Incorporation had made better work possible. Impositions were being practiced to some extent. Neglect of children, and husbands' neglect of wives was also touched upon as matters to be dealt with.

Mayor Sears spoke of the organization of the society eight years ago, and its great usefulness since. The ladies and gentlemen were deserving of great credit. His worship also extolled the work of Mrs. Hall and referred to the assistance rendered by the St. Vincent de Paul society, and the good work being done by the Salvation Army.

Rev. G. A. Kuhring spoke along the same lines, telling of the work being accomplished in Toronto by similar organizations. He spoke of neglect of children and husbands' neglect of families. He favored an international law by which such men could be placed in prison for this offence. He would make it international, so that they could not go from one side of the line to another. Referring to moving picture shows, he said that while they in themselves might not be harmful, they were an encouragement to children to spend money. He suggested a penny savings bank system for children.

Hon. R. J. Ritchie spoke of the work done for the society by the late Rev. John de Soyres and late Ven. Archdeacon Brigstocke. He congratulated Mrs. Hall and praised her work. Impostors were many and frequent, and many devices were adopted. The ladies were doing splendid work. His honor spoke at some length on the depravity among children. He thought the associated charities should be supported from the civic chest.

Dr. Thomas Walker spoke to some extent on immigration and sanitation.

J. D. Hazen, M. P. P., took up immigration matters chiefly and advocated safeguards against a poor class of people coming to the country. We were not so drastic as the United States, who had passed through the same experience we were now going through. While we had a vast western country, we wanted the right class, principally agriculturists.

W. S. Fisher read a letter from Dr. Roberts, dealing with sanitartion in tenements. The letter created a lively discussion.

Mr. Fisher spoke briefly on the education of the young.

All the officers were re-elected as follows: President, J. B. Cudlip; vice- presidents, Ald. T. H. Bullock, Mrs. F. Stetson, Rev. G. F. Scovil, Mrs. George F. Smith; treasurer, J. Hunter White; executive committee, Rev. G. A. Kuhring, Hon. R. J. Ritchie, Wm. Young, W. S. Fisher, T. H. Estabrooks, George A. Knodell, Adjt. Bowering, of the Salvation Army; C. F. Sanford, Mrs. J. M. Brittain, Mrs. Thomas Walker, Mrs. R. C. Skinner, Mrs. Robert Thomson, Mrs. Golding, Mrs. C. H. Dearborn.

SPORTING

CURRIES AND SUSSEX TIED

In Close Football Match at Kings County Town Yesterday.

Sussex, N. B., Oct. 29—(Special)—The first game of football ever played here took place this afternoon between the Currie Business University of St. John and a Sussex team. The game resulted in a tie, though the ball, for the most part, was in St. John territory during the first half. The Currie's controlled the ball much of the time, but honors were even in that regard during the latter half.

The second half was more even than the first and each side making some good runs, in which Jardine showed up well for Sussex. The Sussex men proved rather weak in combination, a number of the men having had little or no practice. Considering the disadvantages the Sussex boys feel satisfied with the showing made by their team. ith practice they should put up a strong lineup. W. B. Farris, of St. John, proved a satisfactory referee.

SHRUBB'S ANKLE GIVES OUT.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 26—Shrubb, the English champion was beaten by Marsh of Manitoba in a fifteen mile race here last night.

Shrubb, however, established several new Canadian records, covering five miles in 24.25 and ten miles in 51.18. When it is remembered that he was running on a ten-lap track, his performance is really remarkable. He conceded two minutes of a handicap to Marsh, but overtook him in the seventh mile, and was over a lap to the good when his ankle gave out.

THE DOG SHOW

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the forthcoming bench show of the New Brunswick Kennel Club are rapidly bringing their plans into shape. Judging from the number and quality of the entries already received, they say it will be the finest event of the kind which has ever been held in Canada outside of Montreal.

Mr. Webber, of the Government House, Ottawa, has assured the committee that he will send an exhibit of the famous Welsh terriers. These are very rare and valuable dogs, and it is not likely that a specimen has ever been seen here. In addition, it is reasonably certain that Earl Grey will send some of his champion Newfoundland dogs. Mr. Finley, the owner of the noted Drumclamph Kennels, will send a valuable string of Irish terriers, both for competition and exhibition purposes. These will be accompanied by the manager of the kennels. Altogether, 250 dogs will be shown. The secretary desires to call attention to the fact that all entries must be in his hands Nov. 4.

KATIE'S HALLOWE'EN

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Little Katie Donivan lived with an old aunt, a lady who had long ago forgotten that she had ever been under sixty years of age, and therefore was not the right sort of person to rear a child. But Katie being an orphan had no choice in the matter of a home and guardian and was very grateful to her stern old aunt for shelter, food, clothing and schooling. But sometimes she found her home life very dull indeed. If she sang and played about the house her Aunt Maria would call out to her: "Children should be seen; not heard!" And if Katie begged to be permitted to go skating or coasting—or to participate in any of the childish sports of her school associates—the prim old aunt would shake her head emphatically saying: "It is a wicked waste of time to play. When you have finished your school tasks and household duties you should sew and mend, or read some helpful book."

And so it was that the time not spent in the school room was very tedious to Katie, whose only companion was her Aunt Maria. Occasionally her little girl friends were allowed to make formal calls upon her, but during such calls Aunt Maria sat in the parlor and helped her little niece to entertain the company. And Aunt Maria's way of entertaining children was to tell them how much better and smarter children used to be than now; to tell of her own straight-laced youth and her superiority over the children of the present generation.

The day before Hallowe'en Katie's comrades at school planned upon what they called "a lark" for the following evening after supper, and as usual Katie was invited to be one of the gay party.

"Well, you know how Aunt Maria is about such things" said Katie. "But maybe—if you'll go home with me and ask her to let me join you she'll relent a bit and consent, being as it's Hallowe'en."

That evening Katie's two most intimate friends, Lucy and Grace, accompanied her home and very solicitously asked Aunt Maria's consent for Katie to make one of their Hallowe'een party on the following evening.

"Hallowe'en party!" And Aunt Maria threw up hands and eyebrows in consternation. "Not if I know myself," she exclaimed. "Why, it's nothing but roughness and rudeness, this going about playing pranks with people's property. No, indeed, Katherine doesn't go a step out of this house after supper—if I know it. She's been brought up, in a quiet, stay-at-home and mind-your-own-business manner. No tom-boying for a girl under my roof. I can promise you."

And so the Hallowe'en matter was settled so far as Katie was concerned. And the little girl's heart was heavy in consequence. All that evening she found her mind wandering from her books while she engaged in getting tomorrow's lessons. She was continually thinking of what the world would be like if all women were like Aunt Maria. The mothers of her little friends were so different. Why, there was Grace's mama, as jolly as any of the children, playing games with her little daughter and her young friends. And how much interest she always took in Grace's parties and childish pleasures, too, And Lucy's mama was the same way. She would lay aside her work any time to tell a story to an assembled group of little folks; and it was not unusual to see her out coasting with Lucy and Lucy's friends of an evening, not only keeping close watch that no one was hurt in the sport, but enjoying the fun as keenly as any of the younger ones.

And thus thinking Katie heaved a deep sigh, a sigh so deep that her aunt, sitting at the opposite side of the table, overheard it and looked up from her sewing.

"Are you sick, Katharine, that you make that horrible noise?" she asked sarcastically.

"No-o-o, Aunt Maria," answered Katie. "I was just feeling a little sorry. That's all."

"Sorry about what?" asked Aunt Maria looking shocked at her niece's daring to hint that she could possibly have anything to be sorry about while under her roof.

"Oh, sorry I can't go with the girls and and boys tomorrow evening to celebrate Hallowe'en. You know I'm only twelve years old, Aunt, and staying at home all the time gets a bit tiresome."

"You are an ungrateful girl." said Aunt Maria sharply. "I'm bringing you up just as strictly as I know how. Why, I'm even more strict with you in some things than my own mother was with me when I was a girl. You should appreciate such bringing up, Katherine." Then the offended old lady arose, put away her sewing for the night and excused Katharine from the sitting room. As she said good night to the little orphan—with whom she was trying to be just in her old-fashioned way—there was a knocking at the front hall door.

"Now, who can that be?" asked Aunt Maria. "It's eight o'clock, and no hour for callers. In half an hour every one should be in bed and the lights out."

She went to the door and there found old Dr. Jones. He was Grace's grandfather, and knew Katie and Katie's Aunt Maria well. In fact, when he and Aunt Maria were young they had been sweethearts, but a little misunderstanding had caused them to drift apart. And so Aunt Maria had remained single all her life, never having found any other young man who could take the place in her esteem (Aunt Maria never thought of love) that young Billy Jones had held there.

And even after Billy Jones had become a full-fledged young doctor of medicine, and married pretty Gracie Turner, he and Aunt Maria remained good friends. And now that the doctor was a grandfather, and Aunt Maria old enough to be a grandmother, their friendship was a deep one. Aunt Maria often going to the doctor for advice in matters of business.

"Why, Dr. Jones! What on earth are you here for at this time of night?" asked Aunt Maria, holding the door open, but not inviting her visitor in. "I hope there's nothing the matter with any of your folks."

"No, no, Maria," answered the doctor. "But there's something the matter with YOUR folks—I think. May I come in and chat a bit? It wants half an hour till bed time."

"Certainly, come right in," said Aunt Maria, her tone cordial, but her manner reluctant. She did not approve of late hours, even for visitors.

The good old doctor entered the sitting room and took his chair beside the comfortable grate fire. "Has Katie gone to bed so early?" he asked, looking about for the little girl.

"Just gone, sir," said Aunt Maria. "I'm raising Katharine by clock work, you know. No staying up after a certain hour at night and no lying abed after a certain hour in the morning. I believe in regularity." And Aunt Maria looked at the clock with a meaning glance. "Well, friend Maria," said the doctor, "since it is getting on close to your bed time I guess I'd better be making my visit short. But the truth is, Maria, I came over here tonight to talk over old times—when you and I were young. Do you remember the time we all went to the country in the big bob sled—and got tumbled out in the snow?"

"Oh, I guess I do," said Aunt Maria, laughing heartily as she recalled a chapter of her girlhood. "Yes, yes. But how long ago that all was! Why, I'd almost forgotten it,—really would never have thought of it again hadn't you refreshed my memory. Well, we were a gay company that night, weren't we?"

The old Doctor Jones and Aunt Maria recalled many happy incidents of their youth, husking bees, harvest-home festivals, country fairs, wedding festivities and other occasions of gaiety when youth lets loose its spirit. And so they sat and talked and laughed till suddenly Aunt Maria heard the clock strike. Looking up in surprise she almost gasped. Then, with chiding in her voice she turned to her jolly visitor:

"Dr. Jones, do you see that it is ten o'clock? Mercy me, I never heard it when it struck nine! Where were my wits, anyway?"

"Back in the happy past, Maria," smiled the good doctor. "We were young again for an hour and a half tonight, and now that we are old again let us not forget that others are young as we were once, and that youth has its own requirements. And while I think of it, Maria, I came over expressly to ask you to reconsider your decision in regard to little Katie's making one of the Hallowe'en party tomorrow night. My little Gracie has told me that you refused to grant your consent to her going. But since you have just had a peep into the folded pages of your own past, enjoyed once more the sweet springtime of life, and its inocent gaiety, don't bar those precious memories from your mind. Stay young in heart and help the young in years to be happy. What do you say to Katie's going with the party tomorrow evening? They are planning on a gay time with a supper at our house after they have torn the town up." And the good doctor laughed merrily, his blue eyes twinkling as he rose to take his departure.

Aunt Maria's face flushed a bit. She felt for the first time that perhaps she had been a little too strict in her methods regarding the rearing of Katie. "Well" she said, "I guess she may go. The only thing, Doctor, is this: when we—you and I were young—we never had these rough Hallowe'en parties. We were more decorous in our conduct."

"You have surely forgotten again that bob-sled ride," reminded the doctor. "And the barn dance we had out at old Tom Atkins' farm, when we liked to have wrecked the barn and the house as well with our merrymaking. But you were the young one then, Maria, and now it is Katie. Do you see the difference?"

"I see. I see," admitted Aunt Maria. "And what's more, Doctor, I'll try to keep my girlhood days closer to the surface of my thoughts in future, especially when Katie is in mind. So now good night. And say to Grace that she may count Katharine in on the Hallowe'en doings. It may not be just the PROPER thing, but we can't always be right. The best of us will make mistakes sometimes."

"You are correcting your gravest mistake tonight." declared the good doctor, and shaking his hostess' hand he bowed good night and went down the street whistling like a boy, he was so happy to have accomplished his purpose.

"Yes, it's good to be young," sighed Aunt Maria. "But mercy on us! I had most forgot that I was ever a girl. Well, Katharine may thank the doctor if she has a gay time tomorrow evening. But all the same I don't approve of such frivolity, even though I was as silly when young. But I have given my word and I'll stand by it. Katharine may go with the young folks whenever she wishes to. I'll stand in her way no longer, for after all, I'm a real OLD MAID, and don't really know so much about rearing children as I ought to."

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES OR IMITATIONS—GET WHAT YOU ASK FOR.

When you ask your dealer for an advertised article and he tries to sell you a substitute, which he claims is just as good, it's because he makes a larger profit on the substitute. Insist on getting what you ask for.
