Brave Little Maggie Dorr.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

Maggie Dorr sat in her little bedroom where she had slept every night of her life — when not absent from home on an occasional visit to some relative — and listened to the excited discussion going on in the adjoining sitting-room. The argument was caused by herself — the disposition of her body and soul, as it were. That morning Maggie's dear mother, who had been an invalid for two years, and who on the previous day had died, was buried in the little graveyard at the edge of the pretty town; and only two hours had passed since Maggie, with bleeding heart and tear-dimmed eyes, had returned from the sad ceremonial attending the funeral of her dearest and best friend on earth. Maggie's father had died while she was but a baby, and her mother had been her only dear-loved one, bravely trying to support herself and lit-old sitting-room where she and her darling mother had spent so many happy years together. For poverty had not robbed them of happiness while Mrs. Dorr was able to earn a simple living for them.

"Well, it's this way," said Maggie's uncle John. "After Ned's death I contributed fuel and clothing every winter to his widow and child. And then, after his widow lost her health, I gave ten dollars every month towards her support. And now I really feel that one of you, who have not done so much, should take the girl. She's big enough to work and will earn her board and clothes. She should be made to understand that she's on charity, and must feel that it is her duty to work in any way that she can to repay her relatives for their trouble over her."

"But I just can't take her to my home," declared Aunt Dullia, "for she's just a pet to be dressed as well as they are."

take the girl. I'd like to do it for the sake of her dear father, but I can't do so while not keeping house. Taking one into a hotel and paying out cold cash for board each week is very different from taking one into your own home where the extra cost could hardly be noticed. If Johnnie were smaller, I'd be glad of the chance to get Maggie, for she's of a gentle disposition and would be a splendid nurse for him. But he starts to school this winter and no longer needs a nurse. But I'll pledge myself to help dress the girl. I'll have a few friends yet who will gladly give me welcome in their homes till I find employment. Thanking you for your many generousities I shall trouble you to remain no longer."

The irate aunt turned upon her heel and re-entered the sitting-room where the other aunt and the uncles were preparing to take their departure, feeling thankful that they were "rid of the burden of a poor relation." To their astonishment the irate Aunt Dullia told them that "the insolent Miss had refused her kind invitation to accompany her home for the week, and that she preferred to go to the house of some of her common friends whom she seemed to prefer to her own kin." Although the three astounded listeners pretended to be much hurt over their orphan niece's conduct, in their hearts they felt much relieved. They were glad she was taking what they termed "an antagonistic stand against them."

And then they all—save Aunt Dullia—went to the door of Maggie's room and bade her a hypocritical good-bye, telling her that she might call upon them for any assistance she might need it, and that they would expect her to "come and see them and let them know how she was getting on," and they "hoped she had warm friends who would help her to find some nice and congenial employment." Maggie made no reply to them, merely nodded her head in farewell. But after they had departed she burst into weeping, her poor little heart was so full that she could not help it. As she sat crying mournfully, calling her dear mother's name, and feeling that there was nothing now for her to live for, a knock on her room door aroused her from her grief. Going to the door she found a sweet-faced old lady there, and on hearing her speak she remembered that she had seen her somewhere before. "I'm Mrs. Martin,"

HAD A STAB-LIKE PAIN THROUGH THE HEART.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS CURED HER AND SAVED HER LIFE.

There is no one, we imagine, sets about deliberately to do injury to the heart, yet in the excitement and excesses of present-day living, the nervous system is done violence to, and the heart and nerves being so intimately bound up with one another, disorganization of the one means disease and disorder of the other.

When you find your heart the least bit out of rhyme, your nerves unbalanced, don't wait until you are prostrated on a bed of illness. Take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They'll put you in such condition you'll never know you have a heart, make your brain clear and active, your nerves strong, your blood rich and pure, and your whole being thrill with a new life.

Mrs. John C. Yenson, Little Rock, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with a stab-like pain through my heart. I tried many remedies but they seemed to do me more harm than good. I was advised by a friend to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They'll put you in such condition you'll never know you have a heart, make your brain clear and active, your nerves strong, your blood rich and pure, and your whole being thrill with a new life."

FURS THAT ARE PRACTICAL AND DRESSY.

In selecting furs, the business woman, if she is a clever dresser, buys something that is not alone practical for every-day business wear, but is also dressy enough to be worn with evening costumes. Dark furs are always most serviceable, and this year they are extremely fashionable for both day and evening wear. A set of broken fox illustrated here is a splendid example of what the business woman's furs should be. The neck piece is made of two skins, the tails and hind paws of which are joined in the back and hang to the waistline, the bodies and heads showing in the front. The muff is medium in size and trimmed with a head and two paws and one tail set in the lower left hand corner.

brothers, "to have a place for her to go to work. I'll call her now and tell her to prepare to go home with me for a few days."

But when Aunt Dullia entered Maggie's room she saw a very proud, pale girl, a girl with a determined look in her face. "I've overheard your conversation," Maggie said, looking straight into her aunt's face. "And as I'm to look after myself henceforth, I shall begin this very day to do so. Thank you all for your deep interest in me. If, when looking about for work of some kind, I should find more employment than I need shall I recommend your daughters for it Aunt? You—and all my kin—seem to think that girls should be put out to earn their own living; so, I suppose you shall be glad of employment for your girls."

There was quiet irony in the voice of the poor orphan girl whoseaching heart had suffered this unjust hurt at a time when all the world should have given her sweetest sympathy. Aunt Dullia's face turned purple with rage. "You are a thankless, impudent Miss," she said sneeringly. "After all that your uncles and aunts have done for you—to have you behave in such an insulting manner is beyond me. But I've always found it so with poor relations. I suppose, then, you do not wish to go home with me for the remainder of the week?"

"No thank you, ma'am," said Maggie. "I shall look after myself. I have a few friends yet who will gladly give me welcome in their homes till I find employment. Thanking you for your many generousities I shall trouble you to remain no longer."

Fooled the Doctors and Got Well

GIN PILLS CURE
RHEUMATISM

They certainly were a surprised lot of doctors out Tyneside way. They had been treating Mrs. Harris for years. Gave her about everything that was ever heard of for Rheumatism—and then told her the disease was chronic.

A friend told Mrs. Harris about GIN PILLS. Just to oblige her friend, Mrs. Harris took a box. When that was gone, she dismissed the doctors and bought another box of GIN PILLS. By the time these were gone, she was so much better that she bought the third box and laughed every time she saw a doctor.

Tyneside P. O., Aug. 6, 1906. I received your sample box of GIN PILLS, but as there was only enough for a trial I got a box from our druggist, and after only taking the third box. The pain across my back and kidneys had almost entirely gone, and I am better than I have been for years. I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism, but it has all left me.

The doctors can't explain it. They don't try to. They said Mrs. Harris could not be cured. GIN PILLS cured her. Proof beats explanation all to pieces. Do YOU want proof? Write, mentioning this paper, for a free sample of GIN PILLS and try them yourself. Then you will see what GIN PILLS will do for YOU. Write now to the Boile Drug Co., Winnipeg, for a free sample.

Sold by dealers everywhere. 50c a box—6 for $2.50.

BOURASSA UNDAUNTED

He is Still Ready to Fight and
Will Stump Against the Gouin
Government in Chateauguay

Montreal, Nov. 7.—Far from being discouraged by his crushing defeat in Bellechasse, it is stated that Henri Bourassa will continue his campaign against the government at the bye-elections that are yet to come off. His name has been mentioned as a possible candidate in Chateauguay, but in all probability the Conservatives will put P. Laberge in the field, as he came very near winning the last election there. Preparations are being now made to organize the county and Mr. Bourassa will stump the riding in support of Mr. Laberge. He is expected to speak at a preliminary meeting next Sunday. The recent campaigns have greatly encouraged the Conservatives of this province and their policy of drift is already a thing of the past. Preparations are now under way to put up a stiff fight at all federal bye-elections beginning with Nicolet and also to organize the party throughout the province so as to be ready for the next general federal elections.

A meeting was held this evening of Nicolet workers, which was presided over by P. E. LeBlanc, the provincial Conservative leader, and which many of the leading Conservatives in the Nicolet district were present and at which preliminary arrangements were made for a vigorous campaign in Nicolet.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of Rheumatism! These same Rheumatism wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes pass from the system. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY TO HOLD DINNER

Patron Saint of Scotland Will Be So Honored on Nov. 29.

At the annual meeting of St. Andrew's Society last night it was decided to celebrate St. Andrew's day this year by a dinner on Friday, the 29th inst. The society will attend divine service in St. David's church on Sunday, the 24th, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. C. K. Cameron was re-elected president for the ensuing year and practically all the old officers were reappointed.

An interesting event was the presentation of two certificates of honorary membership granted to Thomas Davidson and James Davidson in 1832 and 1835 respectively. The relics are in perfect preservation, though the writing is somewhat faded. They were presented to the city by Mrs. W. M. Woods, wife of the superintendent of the Municipal Home, and received by the president in behalf of the members, and a letter of thanks will be sent to Mrs. Woods.

Besides the president the following were the officers elected: Dr. John R. McIntosh, 1st vice president; A. Gordon Leavitt, 2nd vice; Rev. A. A. Graham, chaplain; Alexander Wilson, historian; Cyrus F. Inches, secretary; Dr. P. R. Inches, Andrew Macdonald, R. B. Wilson, committee of charity; Charles W. Bell, Francis F. Burpee, marshals; Homer S. Cruikshank, Alexander S. Cruikshank and W. H. Ross, pipers. The auditors for the year are R. B. Kessen and John Macintyre.

After five new members had been received and some routine business transacted adjournment was made to White's restaurant where all regaled themselves with a very enjoyable oyster supper on invitation of the president-elect. After supper the toast to the King was received with the usual loyal honors. Other toasts were Canada, which was proposed by Dr. James Christie, and responded to in an able and eloquent manner by Rev. Geo. M. Campbell; and The President, spoken to by Mr. Cameron. Brief addresses were made by Dr. McIntosh, A. G. Leavitt, Cyrus F. Inches, Dr. Inches, A. Wilson, A. Macdonald, C. W. Bell and F. F. Burpee. S. J. McGowan and Piper Ross were the soloists of the evening. After the jollification the president was escorted to his home by the company headed by the pipers.

WRECKED AT RICHIBOUCTO

Captain and Crew of Schooner
Tartar Picked Off of Wreckage.

Richibucto, N. B., Nov. 6.—The schooner Tartar, of some 65 tons, owned by Keady Lanagan, of this place, was totally wrecked this morning while entering this port. The crew were saved, being picked up from the cabin on which they floated away from the vessel.

The Tartar left Sydney (C. B.) on Saturday night last with a load of coal consigned to the schooner's owner at Richibucto. At 11 o'clock this morning while attempting to enter harbor in the face of a southeast gale the vessel crashed on what is called the northern reef at the harbor entrance. She soon began to found under the influence of the high seas and in a few hours had gone to pieces.

The crew clung to the cabin and on this floated out into deep water, where they were rescued by boats from shore.

Capt. H. D. Irving, of Richibucto, was commander and Louis and Frank Lanagan, sons of the owner, and George and Ernest Long comprised the crew.

It is understood there is no insurance on the vessel and both schooner and cargo are a total loss. Parts of the wrecked craft are being driven up the river tonight.

The gale was severe here but the loss of the Tartar is the only disaster reported.

J. A. McLeod, of St. George, was registered at the Dufferin yesterday.

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 7.—Bill Bales, an incorrigible young lad of this city, was sentenced by Magistrate Ball to three years' imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary for stealing $1 from Roy Rudd, a clerk in a cigar store. After sentence he grinned at Rudd and he would "beat his brains out; just watch."

J. A. McLeod, of St. George, was registered at the Dufferin yesterday.

WHERE DOES THE PAPER GO?

The first question asked by a general advertiser. The Telegraph and Times reach that class of people who subscribe and agree to pay for the reading privilege. These papers go first hand from the publishers by carrier and not through street boys to be left in office or store by purchaser after reading. Common sense teaches that every paper passed into homes direct will be read. The Telegraph and Times are home papers. Do they contain your advertisement?
