MONCTON AND ST. JOHN

THE WHEEL O' FORTUNE

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillar of Light," "The Captain of the Kansas," etc.

(Copyright, 1908, McLeod & Allen, Toronto)

"Pigs, and children of pigs," he cried, "for what does the Effendi pay ye? Is there not occupation, ye black dogs? May your fathers' graves be defiled by curs!"

Stump, whose rubicund visage was burnt brick-red by the desert, took a keen interest in Abdur Kad'r's daily outpourings. He had no Arabic, but he appreciated the speaker's fluency.

"He'd make a bully good bo's'n," was his favorite comment, and he would add sorrowfully, "I wish I knew wot he was sayin.' It 'ud do me a treat."

In an astonishingly short space of time the camp would be in form, fires lit with parched shrubs gathered during the last stage of the journey, a meal cooked, and every one settled down to rest until sunset, when, if there was no evening march, the Arabs and negroes would sing, and perhaps indulge in amazingly realistic sword-play, while the dozen sailors brought from the yacht would watch the combatants or engage in a sing-song on their own account.

The present encampment offered no exception to the general rule. Abdur Kad'r it is true, may have raged a little more extensively than usual when it was discovered that the well had caved in from sheer disuse, and several hours' labor would be necessary before some brackish water could be obtained. He did not trouble the Effendi with this detail, however. There was another more pressing matter to be dealt with, but, Allah be praised, that might wait till a less occupied hour, for the Frank was in no hurry and he paid like a Kaliph.

About four o'clock Irene was sitting in her tent making some belated jottings in a diary. Being thirsty, she called a servant, and told him to bring a bottle of soda-water. A few minutes later she heard a stumble, a crash, and a loud exclamation in Arabic. The man had fallen over one of the heavy stones to which the guy-ropes were fastened.

She looked up smilingly, and wondered whether he would understand her if she said in French that she hoped he had not injured himself. The glass was broken, but the bottle was intact, for the native had caught it as he fell.

"Ca ne fait rien," she cried encouragingly. Then she found that the Somali had risen to his knees, and was gazing skyward with every token of abject terror. At the same instant a strange commotion broke out in the camp. Through the open side of the tent she saw Europeans and natives all looking in the one direction—northwards. The Britons and Arabs had an air of profound astonishment. They pointed and gesticulated, but otherwise, showed self-control. But the negroes were in a panic. For the most part they were kneeling. A few prostrated themselves at full length, and howled dolorously.

The girl was alone, and she naturally felt alarmed. Royson was not far away, and he, like the rest, was held spellbound by some spectacle the nature of which she could not guess. Perhaps his thoughts were not far removed from Irene, because he turned and looked at her.

"Come quickly, Miss Fenshawe," he shouted. "Here is the most wonderful mirage!"

Was that it—a mirage? Why, then, this hubbub? She had grown so accustomed to the grim humor of the desert in depicting clear streams of running water, smooth, tree-bordered lakes, and other delightful objects of which the arid, land dreamed in its sleep of death, that the excitement caused in the camp was wholly inexplicable.

"What are you doing there?" she cried sharply to the frightened servant. "Go and get another glass, and take care you do not fall next time."

If he heard he paid no heed. He continued to stare at the sky with wide-open eyes.

Conscious of a fresh thrill of fear, she ran towards Royson.

"What in the world—"

Then she saw, and was stricken dumb with the sight for she was looking at a spectacle which the desert seldom provides even to those who pass their lives within its bounds. A thin haze had taken the place of the remarkable clearness of the morning hours. Away to the north it had deepened almost into a fog, a lowlying and luminous mist like the white pall which often shrouds the sea on a cabin bright day in summer. The sky was losing its burnished copper hue and becoming blue again, and, on the false horizon supplied by the crest of the fog-bank, stood a brilliantly vivid panorama.

There were military tents, lines of picketed camels and horses, a great number of Arabs and blacks, and some fifty Italian soldiers, all magnified to gigantic proportions, but so clearly defined that the trappings of the animals, the military uniforms, and the gay-colored burnous of the Arabs were readily distinguishable.

It could be seen, too, that they were working. Mounds of rock and earth showed that considerable excavations had been made. While those gathered round the well were yet gazing at this bewildering and lifelike picture, the moving ghosts in the sky underwent a change which enhanced their realism. One squad of soldiers and natives marched off towards the tents while another took their places. Were it not for the grotesque size of men and animals and the eerie silence of their movements it was hard to believe that the eyes were not witnessing actualities. The thing was fantastic, awe-inspiring, stupendous in design, but faultlessly true in color and treatment. No artist could ever hope for such a canvas. Its texture was vapor, its background the empyrean, and nature's palette supplied the colors.

And this cloud scene was pitiless in its moral. Two of the onlookers, Mrs. Haxton and von Kerber, knew exactly what it meant, while others read its message correctly enough. The expedition was forestalled. The long voyage and longer march the vast expenditure, the hardships inseparable from the journey through the desert, the hopes, the fears, all the planning and contriving, went for nothing, since Alfieri the dreamer, Alfieri the fool, had apparently suceeded in locating the treasure of Sheba.

CHAPTER XIV.

Wherein a Bisharin Camel Becomes Useful

To the Arab every white man is a Frank. The European invader was given that name during the First Crusade, and the Paynim does not change appreciably with the centuries. But he has learnt to differentiate between certain varieties of Frank, and Abdur Kad'r murmured maledictions on the Italian species as he watched the mirage slowly fading into nothingness. Though no one had told him the ultimate objective of the caravan, he felt that the presence of Italian soldiers at the nearest stopping-place put a bar to further progress. The mere fact that the kafila came from French territory was unanswerable. There were difficulties enough already, difficulties which must be discussed that evening, but this obstacle was wholly unforseen.

Under his bent brows the gaunt sheikh had noted Mr. Fenshawe's manner when he turned excitedly to demand an explanation from von Kerber. The Effendi's change of tone told its own tale. Aldur true believer and desert-born, remarked to a brother Arab that Allah was Allah and Mahomet was undoubtedly the Prophet but that of all the misbegotten produce of swine now cumbering the earth the Italians ranked easily first—or words to that effect. Then he relieved his feelings by objurgating the panic-stricken Somalis, whose superstitious minds interpreted the appearance of the air-borne host as a sure indication of war. He was in the midst of an eloquent outburst when his employer summoned him.

"How far is it to the next oasis?" came the dreaded query.

Abdur Kad'r shrewd judge of men, knew that he must be explicit.

"Sixty kilometers, honored one," he replied.

"What! Nearly forty English miles?"

"It may be so, Effendi. In our reckoning it is twenty kos, and one kos is three kilometers."

"But these Italians—in the mirage—they must be camped near water?"

"There is non nearer than the well of Suleiman, Effendi."

"Is it possible that a mirage would reveal so clearly a scene taking place at such a distance?"

"Strange things happen in the desert, Effendi. I have seen a village in the sky which my camels were four hours in reaching, and I have been told of sights even more wonderful."

"You are sure about the sixty kilometers?"

"Quite sure, O worthy of honor."

FIRST LADY MAYOR CHOSEN IN ENGLAND

Miss Dove Will Preside Over High Wycombe Council, but Cannot be Chief Magistrate.

High Wycombe, England, Nov. 12.—This charming, old-fashioned town in Buckinghamshire, thirty-five miles from London, has been daring enough to choose a lady for the position of mayor of the borough. This honor has been paid to Miss Dove, the head mistress of the well-known Wycombe Abbey School for Girls, and soon the deliberations of the corporation will be presided over by a lady, the first in England to hold such a position.

A peculiar point arises, for although she can fulfill the role of mayor, she will be precluded from exercising the functions of chief magistrate of the borough.

Miss Dove has always been in favor of women taking their due share upon the different local governing bodies in the country; and when last year women were made eligible to serve on town councils she was keenly desirous that women with experience and ability should be public-spirited enough to come forward. When it was suggested to her that she herself should stand in the borough with which her great educational enterprise has so long been connected, she willingly consented, and on November 1 last was triumphantly returned at the head of the poll for the East Central ward, in which her school is situated.

Her experience as a town councillor only served to convince her yet more strongly of the importance of the work in local government which women are specially fitted to perform. She served on the Hospital and Health Committees, taking a special interest in the efforts to reduce infant mortality, and also on the Library Committee.

Miss Dove has expressed her school aim in words: "The great work our schools are doing is the raising of the whole moral tone of women's lives; honesty, fair play and esprit de corps are taking the place of petty meanness and jealousy; if only every girl would go to school and stay there long enough to learn the corporate virtues, in two or three generations we should realize Utopia."

RHEUMATISM IN THE BLOOD

Liniments and Rubbing Will Not Cure It—The Disease Must be Treated Through the Blood.

The trouble with men and women who have rheumatism is that they waste valuable time in trying to rub the complaint away. If they rub hard enough the friction causes warmth in the effected part, which temporarily relieves the pain, but in a short time the aches and pains are as bad as ever All the rubbing, and all the liniments and outward applications in the world won't cure rheumatism, because it is rooted in the blood Rubbing won't remove the poisonous acid in the blood that causes the pain. But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will, because they are a blood medicine acting on the blood. That is why the aches and pains and stiff swollen joints of rheumatism disappear when these pills are used That's why sensible people waste no time in rubbing but take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, when the first twinges of rheumatism come on and these speedily drive the trouble out of their system. Mr. John Evans, 12 Kempt Road, Halifax, N. S., says: "About three years ago I had an attack of rheumatism which settled in my right leg and ankle, which became very much swollen and was exceedingly painful. I wasted a good deal of time trying to get rid of the trouble by rubbing with liniments, but it did not do me a bit of good. My daughter was using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the time and finally persuaded me to try them. Inside of a week the pills began to help me, and after taking them a few weeks longer the trouble had completely disappeared and has not bothered me since. My daughter was also taking the pills at the time for weakness and anaemia, and was also cured by them, and I am now a firm friend of this medicine."

Most of the troubles that afflict mankind are due to poor, watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new red blood. That is why they cure anaemia with its headaches and backaches, and dizziness and fainting spells; the pangs of rheumatism, and the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia; also indigestion, St. Vitus dance, paralysis and the ailments of young girls and women of mature age. Good blood is the secret of health and the secret of good blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OPENINGS FOR YOUNG MEN

(Bangor Commercial.)

The New York Times advises young men who wish for a good business or profession to look into the possibilities of public accounting. Private business firms need increasingly the services of certified accountants, who may obtain their degrees from the state by passing examinations prescribed by some competent authority. They are needed to go over the books, detect antiquated methods and systems, and substitute therefor more modern and accurate business devices. As corporations grow these complexities become more insistent of unraveling and reform.

In the same direction may be mentioned municipal accounting, which offers an inviting field of effort for competent young men. The disposition that is manifest in all departments of public and private affairs to analyze improper and wasteful methods and to supplant them is not the least hopeful sign of our times. In this work young men of ability will take an important part.

Fashion Hint for Times Readers

THE RUG MUFF A FEATURE THIS YEAR.

There is an indisutable suggestion of lavishness about the rug muff—the beholder being impressed with the seemingly careless disregard of expense in the superfluous quantity of costly fur employed. The pelt is flung across the inner muff, the long ends hanging free and showing their rich lining when the muff is moved. In this lining are often hidden myterious little pockets for the stowing away of various feminine knick knacks. Most of the large rug muffs are developed in long-haired pelts, with accompanying heads and brushes; but matched chinchilla with its well-defined striped pattern is very effective in this form With the big muff may be worn one of the new collar-stoles, which combine a deep rever effect with graceful stole ends of the fur.

This is the first time an act of this nature has been heard at the Palace and it will doubtless draw a crowded house nightly. Cardin will change his act every night and if a strong and novel show is any inducement, this will be a banner week at the Palace.

MUST NOT SPECULATE IN SOUTH AFRICAN GRANTS

A Warning Issued to Clerks in the Interior Department of Ottawa—One Clerk Admits That He Has Bought Land Warrant.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The deputy minister of the interior has issued a notice threatening with dismissal any clerk in the department found trafficking in the land grants awarded to South African veterans by parliament by the act of last session.

This action has been found necessary by reason of the fact that some of the officials in the department have taken advantage of the information which has come to them in the ordinary course of office routine to approach some of the veterans and secure from them the surrender of their rights for a small consideration. In one instance a clerk acquired rights to 320 acres for $175. When the clerk was called before the deputy-minister, he acknowledged that he had made the deal, the outcome being the present warning.

Application will be made to parliament at the next session to incorporate the Salisbury & Harvey Railroad Company with power to acquire and take over all the property rights and franchises of the Salisbury & Harvey Railway Company, which was incorporated in 1901, running from Salisbury to Shepody Bay, a distance of forty-five miles, and also to construct, equip, maintain and operate all the branches of the main line mentioned and referred to in chapter 80 of the acts of the parliament of Canada of the year 1900. That such railway may be declared to be for the general advantage of Canada.

The store of J. L. Peck & Co., Hillsboro, was broken into on Saturday. The burglars got admittance by taking a pane of glass from a door in the rear of the store. A quantity of dry goods was taken, also the money from the cash drawer. As yet there is no clue to the thieves

The other night bruin came into the yard and licked up all the feed that had been left in a tub at the corner of the house for the pig, and Mr. Tucker thinks that is going a little too far. He fired several shots at the bear but missed.

Geo. A. Fawcett, of Sackville, has already shipped six cars of potatoes to Montreal and expects to ship several more during the next few weeks. The freight rates are very high. Mr. Fawcett says if he could induce the I. C. R. people to give him a more favorable rate he could soon work up a big business, and almost every farmer in the country would be benefited. Mr. Emmerson has promised to use his influence to secure better rates on the I. C. R. Should he succeed it will be an invitation to farmers to plant more potatoes next spring.

F. E. Sayre & Co.'s mill at Hartland ceased sawing long timber on Tuesday, after an unusually successful season. They cut upwards of five million deal, much of which was rafted to Fredericton and towed to St. John. Since the water has been so low shipments have been made by rail. The mill continues sawing lath.

The steel is being laid on the new C. P. R. division between Hartland and Deep Creek, a distance of about a mile and a half. It is expected that trains will run over the new road within a week or two, when one of the heaviest grades on the division will be cut out.

THE DOCTORS SAID "THERE MUST BE AN OPERATION"

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Mrs. McCready Untold Suffering and Almost Certain Death.

"Publish this for humanity's sake," writes Mr. C. McCready, of Putnam, Ont., in his letter to the owners of "Fruit-a-tives." Physicians said that only an operation could save his wife's life. But again "Fruit-a-tives" proved its wonderful powers. The doctors were wrong—Mrs. McCready is today well and strong—and "Fruit-a-tives" have made friends of every one for miles around Putnam.

"Dear Sirs,—My wife suffered for over a year from Indigestion and Bowel trouble. Several doctors treated her for this trouble and advised her that only an operation would save her life, as they stated it was a tumor that was causing the trouble. The operation was to cost $200 and, while she was debating in her own mind about being operated on, she was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives," which I procured for her from our local merchant. From the first box she improved, and after having taken four boxes she is completely cured and is now as well as ever.

I decided then that "Fruit-a-tives" was the most wonderful remedy in the world and it certainly saved my wife's life. She still takes one tablet every night, we also give them to the children with excellent results, and they have to thank "Fruit-a-tives" for the fact that their mother is now with them, they fully expected she would be in her grave. Publish this for humanity's sake."
