By LOUIS TRACY

The disagreeable part of this business ended, the Italian officer conveyed the compliments of the Cigno's commander, and, on his behalf, invited Signor Fenshawe and the two ladies to luncheon. Mr. Fenshawe stiffly declined on the plea that he did not wish to interrupt the voyage, and the envoy went back to his ship.

The Aphrodite swung round into the wind, dipped her ensign, and was seen bounding along at her usual rate. The Cigno stood away for the coast, but, as the day wore, it was palpable that she did not mean to part company with the yacht until the Straits of Babelmandeb were passed.

About four o'clock the wind dropped and the engines were called on. With the night the wind rose again but veered to the south. The Cigno's lights were clearly visible at about three miles' distance. Her white masthead light watched the Aphrodite while hither and thither, and green eyes suggested to Irene's fancy some fabled monster of the deep waiting to pounce on the yacht if she deviated an inch from her seaward course.

The girl snatched a few minutes' talk with Royson. "Don't Kerber, it seemed, had persuaded her grandfather that Alferi was the paid agent of rival archeologists who had got wind of the Sabaean hoard, and were able to secure the help of the Italian Government. She was convinced that the ill treatment meted out to them at Massawah had only confirmed the old gentleman's determination to best his opponents at all costs. The burking of his cablegrams, made known by the Baron, was the last straw in an aggravated load. The yacht was going to Aden to enable him to lodge a complaint with the proper authorities, but she would leave almost at once for French Somaliland, where a kafla would be collected and a dash made across the Italian frontier. And Dick gathered that Irene herself was inclined to let affairs run their natural course. He agreed with her, which was to be expected, seeing that he was four-and-twenty, in and love. He culded his brains for some pretext to discuss rings and the manner of wearing them, but his wit failed him there. Irene on the deck, and her grandfather's yacht differed in several important particulars from the tremulous girl who clung to him during that blissful journey of the previous night.

He tried to clear up this vital point with Tagg. "Did you ever give a young lady an engagement ring?" he asked, after judiciously leading his chief to discourse on the fragilities of the sex.

"Well," said Tagg reflectively, "it all depends on the way you take it. I once gave a girl a Mizpath ring, which she told me when she saw it in a pawnshop window. Next time I met her she fancied she'd swapped it for a dress improver. The feller she was going to marry didn't like the motto as comin' from me, you see, but the funny thing was she never said a word about him when she saw my ring. Since then, I've kept my money in my pocket."

Royson took the morning watch, from 4 a.m. till 8. Stump joined him soon after dawn, and appeared to be anxious about the yacht's exact position. So far as Dick could judge from the charts, they were in safe waters; nevertheless, the stout skipper did not rest content until the tall peak of Jebel Aduali opened up clear of Jebel Ash Ali, with Sanahbor Island bearing west.

Stump changed the course sharply. To Royson's surprise, the yacht turned due west, and headed for the point where the lighthouse had gleamed half an hour earlier.

And now, instead of looking ahead, Stump kept his telescope glued on the Cigno. A cloud of smoke from the gunboat's funnels showed that she had noted the Aphrodite's new direction, and meant to take a close interest in it. She had a few miles to make up, but that was a simple matter, and her nose swung to the southwest as she raced for the bay towards which the yacht was steaming.

Both vessels held on, following converging lines, for nearly an hour. By that time they were hardly a mile apart. Suddenly Stump sent the Aphrodite round until she lay on her previous course. In a word, after standing in for the land in the most decided manner, he was now making for the Straits again.

This behavior apparently puzzled the Italian vessel, as indeed, it succeeded in puzzling Royson and the man at the wheel while the looks cast towards the bridge by the watch, who were mainly employed in awaiting the order that the men were commenting on the yacht's erratic wanderings.

All at once the blare of a siren came faintly over the shimmering sea, and Stump checked triumphantly.

"She's found it," he roared, his voice almost rivaling the hoarseness of the far-off foghorn. "Sink me if that Dago wasn't so taken up with pipin' my antics that he's gone an' done it!"

"Done what, sir?" asked Dick, seeing that his respected skipper was in hilarious mood.

"Run his bloomin' Cingo onto the Scella Shoal. Darn me, I thought he'd do it. Listen to him," for another while reached them from the disconsolate warship. "He's there as though he was glued to it. He'll have to jettison all his bunker an' a gun or two afore he gets off. They tell me Cigno means 'evan.' I wonder why the Italian for 'goose.' Go an' tell Tagg. Tell him to tumble up quick, if he's for the sake of ole times."

Stump aroused the chief, and gave him the skipper's message. Tagg, rubbing his eyes, came on deck. He looked at the Cigno, heard her dismal trumpeting and slowly took in the surroundings.

Scribner-Paddock

On Wednesday evening, November 4, a large congregation assembled in Trinity church, Kingston, Kings county, N. B., to witness the marriage of Lily Goldsmith, daughter of J. C. Paddock, to Alex. W. Scribner. The old historic building was prettily decorated for the occasion. The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the church and proceeded to the chancel step whilst the hymn, "The voice that breathed o'er Eden," was being sung, and there the happy couple were united in matrimony by the rector, the Rev. H. S. Winwright.

The bride wore a costume of blue cloth, with a white picture hat and carried a bouquet of white carnations. After the ceremony, a reception was held. The bride received many useful and costly presents. The newly married couple have the good wishes of their friends for a long, happy and prosperous life.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold—only you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or "scipions" containing Opium, Chloroform, and other poisonous substances. Put it on the label, if you are in your Cough Mixture. "Good! Very good!" Hereafter for this very reason, mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must be law to be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy, of a most reliable character, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure, and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

SIMPLE YET MOST EFFECTIVE.

At first glance this graceful reception toilette gives the impression of extreme elaboration. A closer study, however, reveals the actual simplicity of the hand needlework, which forms the only trimming of the gown. The embroidery is executed in coarse filocelle, which stands up richly from the fabric, and the long lines of the pattern are rarely in keeping with the graceful sweep and flow of the gown. The material—a very soft and supple Dretroire satin. The skirt, draped across the downward into one of the small trains, adopted for house wear. Notable is the front in the small "Paquin folds," sweeps which Paris women have enthusiastically draped sleeves, in one with the boules, and caught lightly to the undersleeve of tucked chiffon.

MRS. THOMPSON TELLS OF WORK IN TRINIDAD

An interesting address on the education of the children of the coolies on the island of Trinidad was given by Mrs. F. W. Thompson yesterday afternoon in the school room of St. Andrew's church. Mrs. Thompson, who is the eldest daughter of Rev. Dr. John Morton, a well known missionary, is engaged in mission work on the island.

The chair was taken by Mrs. J. H. Thompson. In the course of her address Mrs. Thompson explained the system in force under which the government schools are conducted by the missionaries. About 7,500 coolie children are receiving education. There are now about 125,000 Indian laborers on the island, engaged on the plantations, brought over under a five year contract. Many, however, don't return and the number is increasing every year, opening up a large field for mission work.

At the close of Mrs. Thompson's address refreshments were served by the executive of the mission band.

There was no quorum at the meeting of the school board last night and adjournment was made till next Monday night. The secretary's report showed that during the past month the total enrolment in the schools was 7,447 as against 7,517 in October, 1907. The trunk officer reported sixty-eight pupils irregular in attendance, with thirteen by truant.

BRODEUR SUSPENDS TWENTY THREE MEN IN HIS DEPARTMENT

Quebec, Nov. 8.—As a result of the investigation being held into the Quebec agency of the Marine and Fisheries Department no less than 23 permanent officials have been suspended and are likely to be dismissed from the Government service. Hon. Mr. Brodeur, minister of the marine and fisheries department, arrived in Quebec on Friday evening last on board the Government steamer Lady Grey, from a trip of inspection with members of the Federation of Shipping Association to the Beaujeu banks, east of Quebec, and when he came ashore and learned of the revelations made by Mr. F. X. Drolet of this city, whose firm paid out money to some 28 officials, he immediately ordered the suspensions and at the same time gave orders that the officials interested should be in attendance at the court house when the investigation is resumed on Tuesday next. Five of those named by Mr. Drolet have left the service.

The officials suspended are:—Capt. Koenig, master of the government steamer Druid; Capt. Belanger, of the Montcalm; C. D. Schmidt, alleged to have received $1,700; chief engineers of the government steamers, yard foremen, etc.

It is impossible to conceive at the present under what circumstances these men have accepted the money from Mr. Drolet and the other contractors involved, consequently it is but fair to wait until the suspended men tell their story to Mr. Justice Casella, who will no doubt grant them a hearing under oath.

At the same time the minister of marine and fisheries is inexorable in his intention to weed out from his department all the officials adjudged guilty. Friends of some of the suspended parties state that the money they received were presents without consideration.

Mr. Greygo was appointed to the marine department in 1864 and became Quebec agent in 1870, under Hon. Peter Mitchell.
