JEM MACE KEEPS 78th BIRTHDAY

New York, April 21.—A dispatch from London says that Jem Mace, the old-time fighter, celebrated his 78th birthday this week, hale and hearty, and looking exceedingly young for a man of his years.

He continues to take an active interest in sporting affairs, though it is now more than a quarter of a century since he retired from the ring. Recently he posed for a picture with Tommy Burns, the American champion, and he has taken a lively interest in the whirlwind manner in which the latter has cleaned up the best English and Irish fighters.

BOXING BOUTS OF THE WEEK.

Today Tommy Murphy v. Battling Hurley at Sharkey A. C., New York; Jerry Gaines v. Bartley Connolly at Lowell; Gus Ross v. Napoleon Dufresne at Lewiston, Me.

Thursday—Young Kloby v. Dick Nelson at Manchester, N. H.; Mike Twin Sullivan v. Jimmy Gardner at Jeffries A. C. Vernon, Cal.; Harry Scroggs v. Young Otto at New York; Jack Killeen v. Honey Mellody at New York.

Friday—Sandy Ferguson v. Morris Harris at Philadelphia; Tommy Feltz v. Billy Snailham at Sacramento, Cal.

BASEBALL TOO SCIENTIFIC FOR THE FANS

Some one offers the idea that it is doubtful whether the patrons desire more batting, and refers to the fact that the American League teams average nine hits to a game last season; and then it is added: "That ought to satisfy any fan." Manifestly, an average of a single hit to an innings is in no sense strong batting. Frequently pitchers allow that many hits in a game and yet succeed in retiring their opponents without score. I contend that the patrons strongly desire a livelier game. They not only want more batting and more scores, but they desire to see the rules enforced in connection with the pitcher so that his balking and manifest subterfuge in the work of delivering the ball cannot destroy that pre-eminent feature of years agone, viz., base running. The game is getting too scientific for the majority of the patrons. They do not register much of a kick about it, simply because they have come to the belief that anything the magnates desire is bound to obtain, no matter what they may think. There is just as much disgust today among the enthusiasts over the fool foul-stroke rule as there was when it was first introduced and placed in action, yet it is accepted with complacency because all are convinced that nothing would accrue from any kick about it. More lively games are desired by the patrons—but they won't get them. The same monotonous 1-to-0 and 2-to-1 score games will prevail—contests where only two or three men figure prominently in the playing. And again, when the batting averages shall have been compiled, this coming fall, there will be another heavy shrinkage all along the line because the pitchers "have it" on the batsman all the more.

PORTLAND Y. M. A. AT HOME

About 200 were present last evening at the annual at home of the Portland Y. M. A. held in the meeting room over the gymnasium. A dainty supper was served, after which came a programme and toast list. A. McInnes, president, was in the chair. The toasts were as follows:

The King, proposed by D. G. Lingley; responded to by Rev. N. McLaughlin and Wm. Young.

Our Country, proposed by T. A. Armour, responded to by J. N. Harvey.

Our Association, proposed by D. A. Morrow, replied to by A. McInnes.

Our Athletes, proposed by Herman Thorne; replied to by George Crosby.

Our Guests, proposed by R. T. Hayes, responded to Rev. S. Howard.

The ladies, proposed by Dr. C. M. Pratt, responded to by F. Whelpley.

The entertainment consisted of readings by Miss Maude Cowan and Miss Clara Leach; solos by Miss Williams, John Salmon, Wm. McEachern and H. McQuade, and a violin solo by Miss Myles.

WAS A TOTAL WRECK FROM HEART FAILURE.

Heart disease is characterized by its stealthy approach and its variety of forms, yet in all its forms nature gives unmistakable signals which warn us of its presence.

One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling; or, again there may be the most violent beating, with flushings of the skin and visible pulsations of the arteries. You may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die. In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond all question, marvellous. They give such prompt relief, such speedy restoration to health that no one need suffer.

Mr. Darius Carr, Geary, N.B., writes: "It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you a few lines to let you know the great blessing your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been to me. I was a total wreck from heart failure, my wife advised me to take your pills, and, after using two boxes I was restored to perfect health. I am now sixty-two years old and feel almost as well as I did at twenty."

PHOEBON W. WON IN BOSTON RACES

St. John Horse Captures Free-for-All in Combination Park's Meet

Boston, April 21.—That harness racing is popular with the public was proven yesterday by the large audience which turned out in the rain at Combination Park to witness the first races of the season where a bit of money was hung up. Most of the horses were well known by their appearance at the various club matinees and in previous years on the turf. Phoebon W., invincible half-mile track campaigner, took the free-for-all pace in a jog, going the last heat in 1.08 1-2 in the mud.

Evangeline Rex, a bay mare from Haverhill, pulled the most money out of the 2.17 class with Montana Girl, and Bobby Wilkes giving her a solid argument in each heat. Mardell had a hard battle with Nero and Mabel C. along up the back stretch. He made a few skips, but on the upper turn settled down to a clean stride and came home a length the winner in each heat.

Time—1.10 1-2, 1.12, 1.13.

FREE-FOR-ALL—TROT OR PACE.

Phoebon W., b. g., Bailey	1	1	1
Aintree, b. g., Fox	2	2	2
Colbath, b. g., Reid	3	3	3

Time—1.11, 1.09 1-2, 1.08 1-2.

TURF NOTES.

G. G. Patten of Sullivan Center purchased a fine horse recently.

Rodney Haswell of Monroe purchased a fine pair of horses last week.

Billy Andrews will be the man behind Sweet Marie the coming season.

Frank Hall's trotter Kim, 2.14¼, will be entered in the $50,000 race at Readville.

Swift B., formerly owned by Ralph B. Williams of Boston, passed through the Indianapolis sale for $430.

Arthur Bugbee of Washburn has purchased a fine new horse recently from L. B. Stevens of Caribou.

Todd's home is at Raritan, N. J., a place about 30 miles east of New York on the Central railroad at New Jersey.

Frank McKenney of Exeter was in St. Albans one day last week, where he purchased a fine, matched pair of young horses.

M. W. Savage says that since he purchased Dan Patch, in the fall of 1902, he has earned in exhibition over $100,000, which is an average of over $20,000 per year for five years.

Edward Giggey of Strickland Road, Caribou, has bought of G. W. Garow the beautiful pacing horse, Dustmont, race record 2.18½, and will keep him as a driver.

Capt. H. M. Bean of Camden has sold two of his fast horses, Blanch B. and Charles Van Trump, to Frank Donohue of Rockland.

ABUSE IS NOT A GOOD SIGN.

There is much to be commended in the following from the Montreal Herald re the C. A. A. U. attack on the Federation:

"It is not a good sign for any cause when its champions have to resort to the weapons of slander and abuse; but that it is just what is happening on the C. A. A. U. side of its alleged struggle with the Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada.

"The latter body, one of the chief constituents of which is the M. A. A. A., thinks that an amateur is none the less an amateur because he plays lacrosse or hockey with or against a professional, and thinks one honest pro. more worth while than half a dozen bogus amateurs. The C. A. A. U., on the other hand, does not think that the professional should be allowed to enter into any game with amateurs. It is a debatable point, and both sides have abundant ground for argument. Argument, however, is not the strong point of the C. A. A. U.'s champion, the Toronto Globe. Allowing for all the latitude which might be supposed to be conceded to sporting matters in general, the Globe's sporting writer in particular contents himself with such assurances to the Toronto public, that the Federation has adopted a mongrel system— is an imposture—the obstinacy of the M. A. A. A. has become the greatest menace to amateur sport in Canada; and finally winds up with a frank accusation that the Federation issued fraudulent entry forms to its athletic meet at the M. A. A. A. grounds last fall."

WORLD HURDLING RECORD BROKEN

Portland, Ore., April 21.—Forest Smithson, an Oregan sprinter whose hurdling created such a sensation in New York, a week ago broke the world's record for 50 yards high hurdles, indoors, clipping two-fifths of a second from his former record of 6 4-5 seconds. It was a sensational performance and took place at the indoor track and field meet at Columbia university, Portland.

'LONGSHORE WAGE SCHEDULE SETTLED

Montreal Shop Laborers Will Accept Last Year's Rate With a Bonus

Montreal, April 21.—An agreement was reached today between the Montreal shipping companies and the longshoremen, due largely to the activity of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, minister of labor.

The men will this year be paid the same as after the strike last year, 27 1-2 cents an hour by day, and 32 1-2 cents at night, with a bonus of 2 1-2 cents. an hour to all who work to the end of the season.

The men at first objected to this, on the ground that they could not keep track of their dues. Hon. Mr. Lemieux suggested that this could be overcome by giving each man a check with his weekly pay bearing his number, the name of the firm, and the number of hours he had worked, so that he could tell from week to week what was coming him by way of bonus. This proved satisfactory to both sides, and as a result the final wage schedules were today posted by the fourteen steamship companies coming to Monreal this season.

The dispute at Quebec is still as far from settlement as ever, the longshoremen still demanding the higher wages they got last year, while the Canadian Pacific as firmly refuses to pay any more than at Montreal, with the added threat of moving their port to Three Rivers in case a settlement cannot be reached.

BY FERRY TO PARIS

A New Plan For A Ferry Across The English Channel From Dover

London, April 20.—It is certain that before very long goods and passengers will be able to travel from London to Paris and from Paris to London without change or transhipment. The van or carriage in which they begin their journey will be the van or carriage in which they will end it. There will be no more struggling with hats and belongings on the gangways at Dover, Folkestone and Newhaven, no more shifting from train to steamer and from steamer back again to train; no more interruptions of sleep on the night journey; no more breaking of bulk or muddle of loading and unloading. It is the Channel ferry that is to work the miracle. Of all the schemes for improving communications between England and France that have been put forward in the last hundred years it alone holds the field. Its rivals have all been squelched. Tunnelling below the Channel bed, tunnelling through the sea with tubes placed on the bed, spanning the straits with an upraised bridge, spanning them with a submerged bridge—all these projects have been formulated, discussed and finally abandoned. But the idea of a ferry survives, and the South Eastern Railway will soon make the experiment.

AN EASTER MEMORY

When I was very, very small
At Easter once I paid
A visit to a man whose all
On poultry had been made.

And there he told me how his brood
Sprang from a couple old;
The hen, he said, in grateful mood,
Had laid him "eggs of gold."

I heard his words with secret glee,
And instantly resolved
To watch that valued fowl till she
A golden egg evolved.

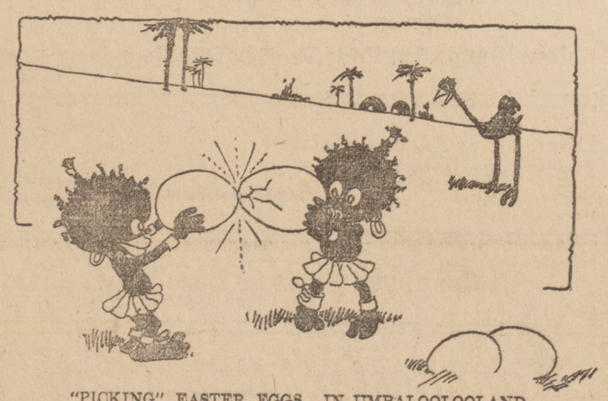

I hope that persecuted bird
Since then some peace has found;
But while I stayed there, take my word,
She had to jump around.

No matter where she tried to rest
I forced her to her legs,
So wild was I to reach her nest
And get those golden eggs.

And now when Time brings Easter in,
And olden memories wake,
I often stretch a quiet grin
At that absurd mistake.

For ridicule no longer stings,
And lots of folks, I find,
Are chasing far more foolish things
With purpose just as blind.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY

What It Is and Who St. George Was

To-morrow will be St. George's Day, and will be celebrated all over the world by Englishmen no matter under what flag they may be living, and while the old battle cry of "St. George for England" or "St. George for Victory" will not now be used as it was five hundred years ago, yet many a toast will be drank to "St. George and Merrie England," and the memories of the dear old land across the sea will be again recalled by England's sons.

St. George was born at Lydda, in Palestine, on 23rd April, A. D., 270, but must not be confounded with George of Cappadocia, who lived 50 years after, and was a villain and impostor, by fraud he was made Arian bishop of Alexandria, but was finally put to death by his own people. The great St. George was most active in upholding the cause of the Christians when they were persecuted by Diocletian, and did much to help the Christian cause, and having much money given him by his mother, he freely gave for the good cause and to help the poor, he was called the Trophy Bearer and The Evergreen, and was martyred on his birthday, 23rd. April, 303. His name was reverenced by the people, and many churches were called after him, and also the bay near which Beyrout stands, St. George's Bay. His fight with the dragon may be allegorical, representing the fight against sin, but it is related that he killed a fierce dragon in single combat, and thus saved the life of a beautiful princess, who otherwise would have been killed by the monster.

He was early adopted as patron by military men, and in 1190, when King Richard I., who went to the east with the Crusaders, gained a victory over the Saracens at St. George's Bay, he was in 1194 made the tutelary saint of England, and his cross, the red cross of St. George on a white field made the national flag of England. The army was placed under the special protection of St. George and his name and fame have ever since been honored in England. In 1222 St. George's Day was made a national holiday, and all soldiers were obliged to wear St. George's cross both on the front and back of their armour or coats. His name is found among the black letter saints of the Church of England, and is still in that calendar, and while he was never canonized by the Roman Church, his name appears in a list issued in 494 by Pope Gelasius as being one among those "whose names are justly reverenced by men." The Red Cross of St. George continued to be the flag of England until the union with Scotland, when St. Andrew's Cross was added, and later on when Ireland was taken in the Cross of St. Patrick was combined with the two former, the whole forming our present Great Union or Union Jack; the order of the garter was at first named after the patron saint of England, and the cross and badge of St. George are worn on the star and collar.

St. George's Society, always keen to celebrate England's day, are in no wise behind this year. Tomorrow evening they will hold a grand charity ball at the assembly rooms, for which a large number of invitations have been issued. The chief guests will be his Honor the Lieut. Governor, Colonel White, D. O. C.; the Mayor; the President of St. Andrews Society and the United States consul. The objects of St. George's Society are to foster a spirit of patriotism, and to keep up the celebration of England's day, the 23rd. April, also to assist their fellow countrymen who may be in want or need, and this part they are carrying out to the letter, there having been during the past few years very many calls upon them owing to the large number of immigrants coming here. Next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock the annual service will be held, when the society will attend Trinity Church, the sermon being by the chaplain, the Rev. E. B. Hooper.

The officers of St. George's Society are: President, G. A. B. Addy, M. D.; vice-presidents, A. Porter and J. C. Anderton; treasurer, F. E. Hanington; secretary, E. E. Church; assistant secretary, F. Noel Sheraton.

The society request that all citizens will display their flags tomorrow and also wear roses, the national flower of England. At 12 o'clock the chimes of Trinity will play a selection of English airs under the direction of Mr. Coupe.

That's breathed in the words—I'm an Englishman.

WAS FORCED TO MAKE APOLOGY

Nova Scotia Barrister Taken to Task For Insulting Judges of Supreme Court

Halifax, N.S., April 21.—The Nova Scotia supreme court today handled a contempt of court case that carried the terrors of the law to the heart of one of its barristers and shows the public that they cannot write just what they like either to or about the judges.

Some time ago a case was tried before one of the judges in which Oliver S. Miller, a barrister of Bridgetown was interested. Miller won the action. An appeal was taken to the full bench and the decision was reversed. Then the barrister took the unprecedented course of sending a letter, which he signed with his own name and addressed in a personal way to three of the judges.

In moving that Miller be found guilty of contempt, W. B. A. Ritchie read Miller's letter that he sent to Justice Meagher. In part it was as follows:

"Nicholas Meagher, judge of the supreme court of Nova Scotia: Dear sir,—"I was not aware until I received judgment in Hutchinson vs Bent, that the title to land and character could be dealt with in the slipshod way in which this judgment was obtained.

"In view of the disastrous consequences of this judgment, I will have to ask that some inquiry be instituted with a view to clear my character from the serious imputations suggested by the judgment.

"The matter of the opposing solicitor being the judge of probate, requires some attention also.

"I thought before commencing any inquiry it would be only right for me to write you.

"Yours very truly,

"O. S. Miller, per E. W."

Miller's counsel before the court today admitted that his client had done wrong, but unwittingly, and stated that on his client's behalf he desired to make a "full, ample and complete apology" for "the contempt of which he was undoubtedly guilty."

The court then, after a few minutes' deliberation, pronounced Miller guilty of contempt, ordering him to pay a fine of $50, or one month in prison, and commanding that he read the following apology in open court, which he forthwith did:

"I, Oliver S. Miller, of Bridgetown, in the county of Annapolis, a barrister and solicitor of the supreme court, beg to express my sincere regret for having written and sent to three of the judges of this court, offensive letters in regard to a judgment delivered by them in a matter in which I was professionally and personally interested.

"I further, in particular, offer to these same judges my humble apology for so far forgetting my duty as a barrister as to write to them in the manner and terms I did in a matter pertaining to their judicial functions.

(Signed)
"OLIVER S. MILLER."

In imposing the penalty, his lordship stated that the court was not actuated by the spirit of revenge, but by a sense of the vital importance of guarding its dignity.

NEW CONSERVATIVE CLUB

Some thirty-five or forty workers in the interests of the Conservative party met at 123 Mill street last night and set in motion the machinery for the organization of a North End Conservative Club. Temporary officers were appointed, and a committee named to arrange for a hall.

A general meeting will be held next week, and it is then proposed to organize. The club will be confined to the north end.

EIGHT HOUR DAY IN ENGLAND.

(London Standard.)

The weighty and well-considered protest made yesterday at a meeting of London merchants against the principles embodied in the eight hours (mines) bill should by itself suffice to arouse public opinion to a proper sense of the mischief likely to be done if this measure becomes law. Lord Newton, who presided, and men like Sir John Ellerman, himself a shipowner and a coalowner; Sir George Livesay, and others who spoke, no doubt have interests of their own to defend, but no reasonable person will refuse to listen to them on that ground when they demonstrate from the practical point of view the consequences of the attempt to tamper with the conditions of a great industry. The utmost that can be hoped from this bill is that it may prove an advantage to a certain section of miners. It will be injurious to every other class, and indeed to the nation at large. As for the problematical benefits, it has been known all along that the coal miners are divided on the question. As Sir John Ellerman argued, this restriction of the hours of labor in the mines must inevitably diminish the output of coal and increase the price. It means additional yearly expenditure of £2,250,000 for shipowners. It will handicap the industry of the country, and, while the whole population must share this extra burden, everyone, from the large capitalist to the smallest householder will feel this additional tax on his resources. Sir George Livesay maintains that it is the poorer classes who will suffer most, and this is more than probable. The pretence that the measure is required by the dictates of humanity has of course long been exploded. Coal miners are well able to take care of themselves without assistance from parliament. But the humanitarian argument may surely be employed against a proposal which would inflict the greatest suffering with no real or lasting advantage to anyone.

SHE SAVED HIM.

His fellow-passengers on the street car noticed that he had a wild look in his eyes.

He was carried a block beyond his corner, but he didn't threaten to sue the road.

He stood at his gate a moment before entering and his chin shook and tears camé to his eyes. It was evident that the mental struggle was terrific.

When he finally summoned the courage to enter the house his butler didn't know him for a moment and took him for a con man.

As he entered the presence of his wife she started, turned as white as snow and whisperingly asked:

"James, have you brought home a case of the bubonic plague?"

"I wish it were only that!" he groaned in reply.

"Speak! What is it? I am a bleached blond, but I can bear any sort of bad news. What has gone wrong?"

"I—I must have $34,356.90 before the opening of business tomorrow morning or I am a dead duck."

"And you can't raise it?"

"Not even the 90 cents."

Then she thought and thought and thought. Various emotions passed over her. Various chills and thrills shook her. Thus for half an hour while he sat with his face in his handkerchief and lifted his shoulders convulsively from time to time. Finally she set her jaw and rose up and left the room. When she returned, five minutes later, she had a bandbox full of money in her hand, and she placed it on his knees and said:

"Here it is, James. I wanted it for my Easter hat, but I see my duty as a wife and do it. Put it in your hind pocket and let's go down to dinner."

Likely a Double Tragedy.

Norwood, Mass., April 21.—Erasmus Munroe Boyden, of Boston, shot and scriously injured Sarah P. Boyden, his divorced wife, attempted to kill his son Henry and then committed suicide at Mrs. Boyden's home here today. The woman is in a critical condition and will probably die.

Portland Wheat Shipments.

Portland, Me., April 21.—The grain exported from this port for the winter season just ending amounted to 5,142,181 bushels, as against 4,592,076 bushels the preceding year and 7,300,670 bushels in 1905-6.
