Fashion Hint for Times Readers

THAT PRACTICAL UTILITY COAT.

Of all the garments in my lady's wardrobe none is more practical and gives as great an amount of satisfaction and wear as the rubberized rain or utility coat. The dressier types of these garments are made of silk and satin, but those which are destined for good hard wear are made of moire or a fine quality of English mohair. They are semi-fitting, but suggest the graceful lines of the figure, being cut to curve slightly at the waist line and flare nicely at the hem. The neck is finished with a high turnover collar, the fronts fastening double breasted to the neck line and the sleeves, of moderate size and full length, are gathered slightly into a high puff matching the collar.

The other boy sprang to him without a word.

He took them in his arms. He was choked. Form some buried font came long-forgotten tears. He murmured their names, but not a coherent sentence could he utter.

They were splendid fellows, he thought, tall and well knit, so nice-mannered, so thoroughly overjoyed to meet him.

That was the best of it. They had sought him voluntarily. They knew his record, and were not ashamed to own him. During the long days and nights of ceaseless inquiry he was ever tormented by the dred lest his children, if living, should look on him as accursed, a blot on their existence.

He half hoped that he might discover them in some vile slum, where crime was hallowed, and convicts were heroes. He never pictured them as honest, well-meaning youths, sons of whom any father might be proud, for in that possibility lurked the gnawing terror of shame and repudiation.

Mason's heart was full. He could not thank God for His mercy—that resource of poor humanity was denied him, and, to his credit be it said, he was no hypocrite.

His seared soul awoke to softer feelings, as his eyes, his ears, his very heart, drank in fuller knowledge of them. But he was tormented in his joy by an agonized pang of remorse. Oh, that he could have met them with hands free from further crime!

In some vague way he felt that his punishment for Philip Anson's death would be meted out by a sterner justice than the law of the land. He was too hard a man to yield instantly. He crushed back the rising flood of horror that threatened to overwhelm him in this moment of happiness. He forced himself again to answer their anxious inquiries, to note their little airs of manliness and self-reliance, to see with growing wonder that they were well dressed and wore spotless linen.

A police station was no place for confidences. Indeed, both boys were awed by their surroundings.

They passed into the outer office, and Mason went to thank Inspector Bradley.

"Don't forget your ticket," whispered the pleased officer.

The reminder jarred, but it was unavoidable. Mason got his ticket indorsed, the lads looking on shyly the while, and the three regained the freedom of the street.

"Let us find some place to sit down and have a drink," suggested Mason.

"No, father," said John, with a frank smile. "Neither of us takes drink. Come home with us. We have a room ready for you."

"I have lodgings——"

"You can go there to-morrow, and get your belongings."

"Yes. Jump into this cab," urged Willie. "We live in Westminster. It is not very far."

Mason was fascinated by the boys' pleasant assumption of authority. They spoke like young gentlemen, with the accent that betokens a good education. He yielded without a protest.

They sat three abreast in a hansom, and the vehicle scurried off toward the Westminster Bridge Road.

Mason was in the centre. His giant form leaned over the closed doors of the cab, but he turned his head with interested eagerness as one or other of his sons addressed him.

"I suppose, father, you are wondering how we came to meet in such a place," said John.

"It might puzzle me if I found time to think."

"Well, the superintendent arranged everything. Unfortunately, he was away on his holidays when—when you were released—or we would have met you then, and his deputy was not aware of the circumstances. As soon as the superintendent returned he wrote to the governor, and was very much annoyed to find that you had slipped away in the meantime."

"He wouldn't be so annoyed if he was these himself," growled Mason, good-humoredly.

"Oh, John didn't mean that, father," broke in Willie. "The annoyance was his, and ours. You see, we had not known very long where you were. We didn't even know you were alive."

"Of course, of course. Somebody has been looking after you well. That's clear enough. They wouldn't be always telling a pair of boys that their father was in Portland."

"It gave us such a shock when we heard the truth," said downright John.

"But we were so glad to hear that our father was living, and that we should soon see him," explained the younger.

"When did you hear first?"

"About four months ago. Just before we took our present situations. We are saddlers and ornamental leather workers. Between us we earn quite a decent living. Don't we, John?"

"In fifteen weeks we have saved enough to pay for half our furniture, besides keeping ourselves well. There's plenty to eat, dad. You won't starve, big as you are."

They all laughed. The cab was passing St. Thomas' Hospital. Across the bridge a noble prospect met their eyes. London had a glamour for Mason that night it never held before.

"So Robinson wrote to Bradley, knowing that I would report myself to-day, and Bradley arranged——"

"Who is Robinson, father?" interrupted John.

"The superintendent, to be sure. He used to be inspector at Whitechapel."

"He is not the man we mean. We are talking of Mr. Giles, superintendent of the Mary Anson Home."

The two boys felt their father's start of dismay, of positive affright. They wondered what had happened to give him such a shock. Peering at him sideways from the corners of the hansom, they could see the quick pallor of his swarthy face.

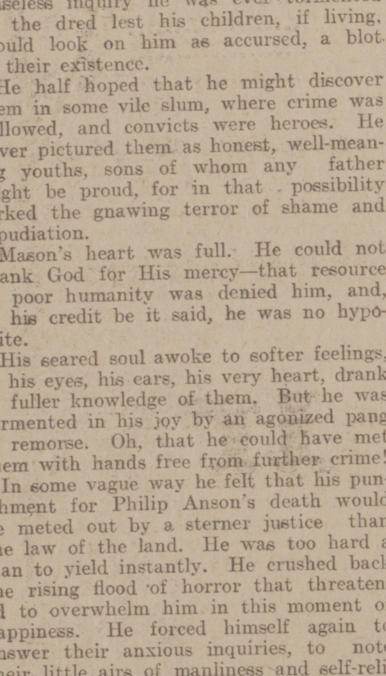

"You forget, John, put in the adroit William, "that father knows as little about our lives as we knew about his until very recently. When we reach our flat we must begin at the beginning and tell him everything."

"There isn't much to tell," cried John. "When poor mother died, we were taken care of by a gentleman whom Mr. Philip asked to look after us. When the Mary Anson Home was built we were among the first batch of inmates. If ever a young man has done good in this world, it is Mr. Philip Anson. See what he did for us. Mother was nursed and tended with the utmost kindness, but her life could not be saved. We were rescued from the workhouse, taught well and fed well, and given such instruction in a first-class trade that even at our age we can earn five pounds a week between us. And what he has done for us he does for hundreds of others. God bless Philip Anson, I say!"

"Amen!" said his brother.

The voices of his sons reached Mason's tortured brain like sounds heard, remote but distinct, through a long tunnel. His great frame seemed to collapse. In an instant he became an old man. He set his teeth and jammed his elbows against the woodwork of the cab, but, strive as he would, with his immense physical strength and his dogged will, he shook with a palsy.

TRAIN FOR BUSINESS

Most men train their brains and almost entirely neglect their bodies. They do not seem to realize that keeness of judgment and clearness of thought depend as much on the body as on the brain itself. Any man can prove this to his own satisfaction by attempting to decide a weighty business problem while suffering with an acute attack of indigestion or a violent spell of biliousness.

The amount of work that the brain can do depends much on the healthfulness of liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices in tablet-form. They act directly on liver, bowels, kidneys and skin—and enable these vital organs to rid the system of all impurities. Thus the blood will be kept pure and rich, the brain active, digestion sound, and life made pleasant.

"Fruit-a-tives" are now put up in two sizes—the new 25c box as well as the regular 50c size. If your dealer does not carry them, write Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SCHOOLS ARE OVER CROWDED

From This Supt. Bridges Deduces That St. John is Rapidly Growing in Population.

It is the opinion of Dr. Bridges, superintendent of the city schools, that the population of the city, at least of the north-end, is increasing rapidly. His reason is that the school population is increasing every year. Nine hundred permits have been issued from the office of the board so far this year and the majority of these pupils are entering school for the first time. The number is about the same as last year, but every year has shown some increase. The superintendent thinks that it will be necessary for the board to erect a new building in the north end somewhere between the Alexandra and Dufferin schools.

Ten years ago, when he took charge, Dr. Bridges said, there were 6,584 pupils in attendance at the city schools. Last year there were 7,400. Besides population increase, he explained the need of more accommodation by the decrease in the number of private schools in the city and by the fact that parents keep their children longer in the schools than was the case some years ago. The only really new building that has been erected for years is the Aberdeen, the others were erected to take the place of older structures.

To illustrate the rapid growth of the north end since the Indiantown fire, Dr. Bridges said that the Alexandra school, which took the place of a structure burned on the same site, was opened in 1899 with eight rooms and now there are ten and all are filled. The Dufferin school was opened in August, 1903, with eight rooms. That fall another room had to be added and two years later still another. Now the rooms are all filled and there is pressing need for more accommodation.

The Winter street school was the first erected in the province after the passing of the public school act. Ten years ago there was no such crowding there, as there is today. The exhibition hall was not used for classes. Now the new annex will furnish a much needed relief to all the rooms.

There are in the city nineteen school buildings. In the most modern of these the rooms are designed to accommodate fifty pupils. In some, however, the rooms have only forty-two seats, while others are even smaller. The schools with the rooms in each are:—Alexandra, ten; Newman street, four; Douglas avenue, five; Dufferin, ten; St. Peter's (boys), seven; St. Peter's (girls), eight; Winter street, twelve; Aberdeen, seven; Centennial, ten; Victoria main building, fourteen; Victoria annex, six; Leinster street, five; St. Malachi's, ten; St. Joseph's, eight; Albert, ten; La Tour, six, (one unoccupied); St. Patrick's, five; High School, twelve; and St. Vincents, seven. This means a total of 155 rooms. Allowing forty-five pupils to a room it would mean that there are 425 children for whom no accommodation is provided.

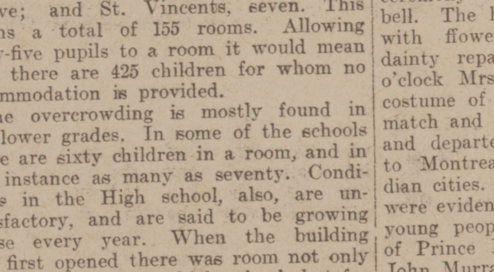

The overcrowding is mostly found in the lower grades. In some of the schools there are sixty children in a room, and in one instance as many as seventy. Conditions in the High school, also, are unsatisfactory, and are said to be growing worse every year. When the building was first opened there was room not only for the pupils of the high school, but for three grades of the lower schools. Now it will be necessary to find accommodation for the overflow of high school pupils in some of the outside buildings.

The need of a new school on the Weldon lot arises from the fact that the rooms now in use in the Leinster street building are regarded as not best suited for school purposes. There are also in the Victoria main building two schools on the top floor. This it is considered is too high up for the children to climb, besides being dangerous. Then in the third place at least one grade could be removed from the High school and thus relieve the pressure there to some extent.

McAlpine's directory estimates the population of St. John in May last at 56,760.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 16—The Canadian Club has undertaken to raise a fund to erect a memorial tower on the "Dingle," Sir Sandford Flemming's property on the North West Arm, which he has presented to the city of Halifax as a park. The cost of the tower will be $15,000 to $20,000. To this fund Sir Sandford gives a subscription of $1,000, besides the site and the park.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

CARMEN NEXT WEEK

"Carmen" has always been one of the most popular operas with devotees of music, who never seem to weary of its tuneful numbers. This ever welcome opera will be included in the repertory of the Boston Opera Singers' Company during its engagement here. The artless simplicity of Michaela, the varying moods of the bewitching Carmen, the ardor of the young soldier beguiled by the charms of the cigarette girl, and the dash of the toreador have always appealed to audiences the world over. There are few operas that so stir the blood. Many of the greatest prima donnas have won undying fame in the role of Carmen. It is said that the interpretation given this opera by the members of this company is of the highest order and both individually and collectively the company gives a well-round and capable presentation of Bizet's masterpiece.

NEW TALKING PICTURE AT THE NICKEL

"Wanted: A Maid," is the new Humanovo Co. bill at the Nickel today. It is very funny; not only were the strangers charmed beyond words with the great feature picture, "Samson and Delilah" yesterday but the city folks themselves—who are used to the Nickel's good programmes—were thoroughly delighted and surprised by the startling realism of the biblical story as reproduced in living photographs. The scenes in which Samson carries away the gates of Gaza and tumbles the pagan temple are wonders of scenic reality and elicited great applause.

The other pictures—"A Chieftain's Revenge" (Scottish) and "The Mourners," a comedy, were particularly pleasing. During the Samson picture, Mr. Weston sang "The Palms" with great effect and sang a secular number in another part of the programme. Today, Miss Felix will sing a new number "Bride of the Prairie" and Mr. Weston is down for a ballad "I Want You." It is the best and biggest show the Nickel has given.

AT THE PRINCESS

The Princess was well attended last night. The programme of motion pictures was:—"The Fireman's Daughter," a strong drama showing the love of a father who has the dangerous calling of a fireman; "The Learned Doctor," taking the people for a trip in his airship which explodes in midair; "If Women Were Policemen," a comedy film which tells its own story. Seky, the magician, has a new act of magic and illusion. Harry Newcombe is singing a new illustrated song. This programme will be repeated today.

OBITUARY

Thomas Tyner

Thomas Tyner died suddenly about 6 o'clock last evening at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. John McCoach, Haymarket square, with whom he made his home. Mr. Tyner, who was eighty-three years of age, had enjoyed fairly good health and was able to be out every day. Yesterday he had dinner and tea with the family but did not feel quite as well as usual and went to his room to rest about 6 o'clock. A few minutes later Mrs. McCoach, going to his room to enquire how he felt, was horrified to find that he had passed away.

Mr. Tyner for years was teamster for Messrs. Lee in their brickmaking business and he also owned a farm at Red Head. He is survived by four sons—Fred, in Loncoln (Me.); Charles, in Minneapolis; George, in New York, and John, of The Telegraph engine room staff; also four daughters—Mrs. McCoach, of St. John; Mrs. George Ayr, in Boston; Mrs. Howard Hulton, in New York, and Mrs. George Wilson, Forest Hills, Boston.

Mr. Kee was aged only thirty-two years but had been in failing health for some time. Mrs. J. J. Bennett.

The news of the death of Mrs. Bennett, widow of Rev. Dr. J. J. Bennett, which took place at the residence of her son, Frederick Bennett, in Ottawa last evening will be received here with much regret. Mrs. Bennett was more than eighty years of age, but had been ill only a week, following a stroke of paralysis. She was a resident of St. John for many years, removing to Ottawa after the death of her husband seven years ago.

Mrs. Bennett was born in Ireland and came to St. John with her husband in the year of the cholera. From that time until her husband's death she made her home here and had many St. John friends who will be grieved to learn of her death. During her husband's long incumbency as pastor of the St. John Presbyterian church, Mrs. Bennett proved a helpful companion and endeared herself to all.

The body will be brought here and service will be held at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon in St. John Presbyterian church.

The surviving children are: Mrs. J. Boyle Travers, wife of Dr. Travers, of the Provincial Hospital staff; Mrs. T. E. B. McCready, of Charlottetown; Mrs. W. Gardiner, of Montreal; Mrs. John A. THE FIRST MOOSE

The first carcass of moose to reach St. John in the season which opened yesterday arrived in the afternoon by river steamer from Sheffield. It was shot at Douglas Harbor by A. Coakley who came upon the forest monarch in the water after pond lilies.

The moose weighed about 800 pounds and to get the carcass ashore it was necessary to back a cart into the water. It was brought to Sheffield and sent to St. John, consigned to Fred McMulkin.
