CONSERVATIVE TORONTO HEARS MRS. SNOWDEN

Women of Masses Aloof Because They Wish to be Ladies, Says Mrs. Snowden, Who Sways a Large Audience

(Toronto World.)

If that old fallacy is ever revived again in Toronto that women have neither humor nor logic it will only be necessary to mention Mrs. Philip Snowden to put it to sleep again. Last night before an audience in Massey Hall almost as large as that which listened to Mrs. Pankhurst she exhibited logic and humor enough for half a dozen ordinary men, combined with an eloquence, a lucid grasp of principles, and an ease and brilliance of manner that give her a very high place among public speakers. Applause and laughter were frequent, and she was heard throughout with the closest attention.

"Gentlemen and ladies," was the way Mrs. Snowden addressed her audience, beginning with a compliment to Mrs. Pankhurst, who represents another wing of the suffrage army.

She exulted in the fact that the best and highest women in the land were taking part in the suffrage movement, knocking on the head the disgusting and vulgar snobbishness which had kept women of different classes apart for so long.

The days were gone in England when cartoonists depicted a suffragette with the proportions of a Dreadnought and the face of a hatchet. She hoped there were no such remnants of barbarism in Toronto.

"Nearly every woman who has been in prison has a degree from a university," she declared.

"You cannot get the working women of the masses to touch the movement with a 40 foot pole. They wish to be regarded as ladies." (Laughter).

"I glory in the knowledge that for a man in this country to label himself an anti-suffragist is to mark himself as not very intelligent or not very good." (Applause.)

"I might give a string of dazzling names to show that the men who support women's suffrage are not the imbeciles they have been considered."

Rock of Physical Force

"We split upon the rock of physical force. We disagree upon the use of physical violence," she said, distinguishing between suffragists and suffragettes.

"Don't think because I am a peace woman that I am a peace-at-any-price woman."

"If one class seeks recklessly and cruelly to dominate another class, and that class is without means of redress, physical violence is justified."

She attributed the tardy progress made to the 90,000 Liberal suffragists who put their party first. A dramatic illustration drove home the force of this statement.

"If the government had received but one deputation it would have taken the wind entirely out of our sails and there would have been no justification for physical violence," was another point she made.

"When a woman rushed on the floor of the house of commons once it was because she lost her patience listening to the members discussing how to turn banana boxes into cradles for babies."

Picture of Austen

Her account of an anti-suffrage league meeting convulsed the audience. Austen Chamberlain's speech was adroitly burlesqued and his main argument shown to be exactly that on which the suffragists rely. Women are different from men, and men cannot understand their needs sufficiently to legislate for them properly.

Her satire on the male demand for the womanly woman was very severe.

"Havelock Ellis has described the womanly woman as a cross between an angel and an idiot. Mr. Ellis knew what he was writing about." It was the anti-suffragist that would make woman coarse, never permitting her to forget her sex.

"If the suffragette movement means one thing more than another it means less of sex and more of humanity. That does not mean any defection from the sacredness of motherhood—her noblest work."

"The average noble woman looks for a home, desires a home; but it does not follow that the woman who never goes beyond her own four walls will make the best wife and mother."

For the Budget

Her replies to questions asked by members of the audience were exceedingly apt and witty. She confessed herself an advanced Radical in politics; in favor of the budget; anxious to put a nail in the coffin of that imbecile institution, the house of lords; considering votes for women the most important issue before the country as men would, if the issues were votes for men, believing tariff reform of no importance whatever, as it might benefit a limited class, but would raise the cost of living for the working-classes; holding the fundamental principles underlying the grant of the franchise to be an equal moral standard and a right relation of the sexes, an inheritance of purity, and good prospects for every child born into the world.

Eighty-one per cent. of the women entitled to vote under the present qualifications were wage earners. It was the poor who were the chief obstacles to progress.

FOR THE PUBLIC

New Formula Cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Hoarseness in Five Hours

Much is being done in these days to stop the ravages of consumption, but probably nothing has been so effective as teaching the public how to break up a cold and cure coughs, bronchitis, tonsilitis, etc., with simple home-mixed medicine. A laxative cough syrup, free from whiskey is the prime need. A cough indicates inflammation and congestion and these in turn are due to an excess of waste and poisons in the system. A tonic laxative cough syrup rids the system of congestion, while relieving the painful coughing. Get the following and mix at home: One-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol ad three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less, according to age. Cut this out and save it for some friend.

THE GYROSCOPE

Louis Brennan's unique gyroscope car is said to have had its origin in the brain of a French physician. M. Foucault, born in Paris in 1819. Foucault proved unfaithful to medicine, but loyal to the physical sciences. In addition to inventing, or, rather popularizing the gyroscope, he calculated the velocity of light by means of a revolving mirror, established the undulatory theory of light, and made an improved electric-light apparatus.

Foucault used his gyroscope to make plain to the bodily eye the fact that the earth rotates on its axis—his instrument being merely a demonstration of the fact that when a symmetrical body is set rotating round an axis it will continue so to rotate unless acted upon by an outside force.

The earth is a gigantic gyroscope, which insures the changes of the seasons. When a bullet is projected from a grooved rifle (with the consequent rotatory motion) it displays another application of the principle—in the increased precision of fire.

Just as Mr. Brennan steadies his car on its single rail by means of his whirling disks, so many years ago did Prof. Piazza Smyth, the astronomer royal for Scotland steady his telescopes at sea.

Lord Kelvin auso constructed a gyrostat, which stood upon its rim in any set position. His liquid gyrostat is still more wonderful.

ANOTHER "VELVET WINTER"

Some years ago the smartest carriage and calling costumes were of the soft panne and mirror velvets, but a brief reign of satins and crepes displaced the heavier stuffs from favor. Now the velvets are back, but they are much softer and more supple than the old kind. The handsome velvet calling costume usually boasts of a complete frock, topped by a well-cut and somewhat ornamental coat to the knees. Such a suit is shown here, the coat being trimmed with silver and silk embroidery. Such a velvet coat could be worn upon occasions over the little "tea" dresses and matinee frocks of lightweight wool and silk.

FRAUDULENT WEIGHING SYSTEM WELL PLANNED

Electric Signals to Warn Sugar Checkers—On Approach of Inspectors Lights Flashed Warning

Testimony that electric signals warned checkers in the scale houses of the approach of government inspectors further showed at the trial of the former employes of the Sugar trust the completeness of the fraudulent system of weighing that formerly prevailed on the Havemeyer & Elder docks in Brooklyn.

The last two witnesses called yesterday afternoon by the government caused a considerable stir by their testimony, which was very short. The first, Frederick B. Sanders, a negro who had worked on the docks for eleven years, said that when the government inspectors came on the docks the checkers were warned by the flashing of the electric lights in the scale houses where they were working. Asked what effect this had, he said the scales were immediately balanced.

On cross examination by Mr. Lexow, the witness was asked how many times he saw this happen. He couldn't tell, and Mr. Lexow then asked, "Did it flash every day?" The witness didn't know about that, but later he said it was a common occurrence in 1908.

John Rochefort, who had been employed on the docks for 20 years, corroborated Sanders' testimony on the signals by electric lights. The understanding was that watchmen of the Sugar Company who were stationed at the foot of every street leading to the docks, pressed a button connecting with the lights in the scale houses, whenever the inspectors appeared.

Witness Robert Jones, who marked on the docks under defendant Spitber, gave more testimony on the so-called "roly-poly gang" of checkers who worked with the government weighers. He said there were five or six men who always did this work. An entirely separate gang, he said, worked with the city or merchant weighers. Defendant Coyle, he said, had often referred to the government checkers as the "roly poly gang."

FATHER AND SON.

Edmund Goss relates in the story of "Father and Son," that his father and mother always consulted the Lord in the face even of the most trifling dilemma. If anyone was ill, it showed that "the Lord's hand was extended in chastisement." They seemed even reconciled to the chronic illness of their little son as being the "Lord's will." "If I burned my finger with a sulphur match my father would solemnly ejaculate: "O, may these afflictions be much sanctified to him!".

Before going to the first children's party he ever attended his father and he knelt in long and earnest prayer, and had asked the Lord's will in regard to his going, and at that time the spirit of revolt had been first aroused in him. In answer to his father's confident enquiry, "Well, and what is the answer our Lord vouchsafes?" the boy replied boldly: "The Lord says I may go to the Browns!".

"My father gazed at me in speechless horror. He was caught in his own trap, and, though he knew the Lord had said nothing of the kind, there was no road open for him but just sheer retreat."

THE NOTED LAWYER FOR POOR WOMAN'S DEFENCE

New York Case Suggests Possibilities of Reform—Administration of Justice Costly

(New York World.)

The Italian woman charged with murder whom Samuel Untermyer was assigned by the court to defend and for whom he secured an acquittal was to all intents on the footing of a rich corporation.

If all penniless defendants could enjoy the advantage of high-priced legal talent very radical changes in criminal procedure might be expected to result, and the case is interesting for the possibilities of reform it suggests. It has a further element of interest as a rare example at the present time of a practice which was general at the bar in an earlier day when the best lawyers did not deem it beneath their dignity to accept criminal cases.

But the trial was mainly significant as affording an additional illustration of the great cost of justice in American courts. Mr. Untermyer's fee from the state for defending his client is $500, but his personal expenses in preparing the case were $1,000. It is obviously not to be expected that lawyers will sacrifice their interests to legal philanthropy, and the lack of public funds to provide fees proportionate to those paid by corporations forbids the general adoption by the courts of the plan of designating distinguished counsel to defend poor prisoners.

Even if all should take their turn at it, the supply of available corporation lawyers would be inadequate to the demand.

The trial of Mrs. Crisanti in fact has mainly served to confirm the truth of Mr. Taft's observation that part of the great problem in the administration of justice is to cheapen its cost. It has merely exhibited the ideal conditions of justice, as shown in the defense of a poor client with all the resources of the law which are at the disposal of rich defendants, but unfortunately without pointing the way to a remedy, for the conditions as they are in the majority of cases.

SAYS HE IS THE OLDEST PREACHER IN WHOLE WORLD

The Rev. Sedgewick W. Bidwell, of East Middlesbury, preached a sermon of twenty-five minutes' duration in the village Methodist church at services in observance of his 100th birthday.

Bidwell asserts that he is the oldest clergyman on the world, and few centenarians have his energy. Every day he walks three miles, no matter what the weather, and he reads and writes with ease. He keeps in touch with current events, and has never missed casting his vote at election for twenty years. Mr. Bidwell has held pastorates in twenty-two towns in Vermont and New York. His pastoral record includes 10,000 sermons, 1,200 funerals and 340 marriages, the fee for many of the weddings being a bushel of potatoes or apples.

Mr. Bidwell is a native of Starksboro, his parents being English and among the first settlers in that town. He left school at the age of 19, and during the winter of 1830 taught the district school. A year later he attended the Hinesburg Academy, and was admitted into the Methodist church. In 1834 when he was 25 he received a license to preach, and for three-quarters of a century he has served his church.

Mr. Bidwell has a remarkable memory which goes back through three generations. He remembers the battle of Plattsburgh and distinctly recalls the roar of the cannon during that fight. As a Vermont historian he has few equals.

He has been twice married. He longed to preach at the close of his first school year and he gathered a number of his playmates about a stump, on which he mounted to address them. At the age of 7 he could declaim with facility and won a prize. His congregation gave him a gold-headed cane.

A padded cell yawns for the young man who uses perfumed stationery.

It's easy for an old bachelor to get married when a widow camps on his trail.

CHLORAL IN WHISKSY

The Story of Doped Liquor Served in Hotels in Northern Ontario

Toronto, Dec. 10 — Charges are being made that in the hotels of Northern Ontario, not excepting those in Fort William and Port Arthur, doped liquor is sold. Lumber jacks, railwaymen and laborers generally are said to be victimized regularly in the various northern bar-rooms that they are foolish enough to patronise.

Allegations are frequently made in Fort William that the drugging of liquor is going on continually. W. A. Matheson, a well-known barrister there, has called attention of thereports of the police that more drunken men are being found in the streets and in the lanes. The victims are paralyzed and remain in their stupor for hours. Invariably they awake to find themselves robbed. In many cases the loss is the entire earnings of a whole season.

It is an open secret that in the lumbering towns of the north, liquor is drugged by hydro-chloral. A few drops of syrup of chloral in the third or fourth drink of the victim causes his collapse and he is carried to the "morgue." This is a dark back room, and it is reported that these rooms exist in many places. It is alged that in one hotel in one week eight men were robbed in this way. The drinker remains dead to the world for twelve hours or more.

The depresing effect of the drug is overcome by the stimulation given to the heart by the liquor and the victim sleeps.
