SUDDEN DEATH OF ABRAHAM ISAACS

Well Known St. John Citizen Stricken With Heart Failure on Sunday Morning

The death of Abraham Isaacs, senior member of the firm of A. & I. Isaacs, occurred suddenly at an early hour on Sunday morning at his home, No. 12 Peters street at the age of 64 years. Mr. Isaacs always enjoyed good health until two weeks ago when he was stricken with valvular disease of the heart and became seriously ill. During the last few days he had shown some improvement and the family and friends were hopeful that he might survive the attack for some time. This was the condition on Saturday. He rested well during the night hours and there was no feared that the end was near when about 4 o'clock he suddenly passed away without a warning that death was upon him. The family had just time to respond to the nurse's summons when the end came.

The Late Abraham Isaacs

Mr. Isaacs was born in London (Eng.), and left there when a boy and spent his young manhood years in New York engaged in the cigar business in that city where his father and his brother were also established.

In 1878 Mr. Isaacs removed to St. John and began the manufacturing of cigars in Dock street. In the following year he was joined by his brother, Israel Isaacs, and they established the firm of A. & I. Isaacs here. The manufactory was removed to Prince William street in a few years because of extension of their business and three years ago removed to their present premises in Princess street.

Mr. Isaacs married, in New York, a daughter of the late Solomon Hart, who, with two daughters and two sons, survives him. The daughters are Mrs. Samuel Lewis, of St. John, and Miss Mildred, at home, and the sons are Leslie Isaacs, of the American Clothing House, and Sydney, proprietor of the Cigar Box, Mill street. There are also four brothers, Israel Isaacs, and Alfred Isaacs, of St. John; Joseph and Emmanuel, of New York. There are also two sisters, Mrs. Oscar Silberstein and Mrs. L. Marks, both of New York.

Mr. Isaacs was practically the founder of the Jewish synagogue here and had been president ever since its organization. He had taken a keen interest in religious matters and was an ardent worker in his church. He was a very charitable man, a kindly and well liked with his many friends, even if known only to those who benefited by his generosity.

For the family in their sudden bereavement there will be many to offer sympathy, both within the membership of his own religious circle and among his friends in general. The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Or again, you have a sinking sensation, a feeling you are going to die; or perhaps you wake in your sleep feeling as though you were about to choke or smother, and rest leaves you for the night. If you allow these conditions to continue for a short period even, you will begin to feel your health declining. It is the nerves and heart not acting rightly, and they can only be set right by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They soon induce healthful, refreshing sleep, not by deadening the nerves, but by restoring them to healthy action.

Mrs. E. Nutt, St. Mary's, Ont., writes: "I can gladly recommend your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as I was greatly troubled with my nerves. I was so bad I could not sleep at night without the lamp burning, but after taking four boxes of the pills I became all right again."

LORD MILNER'S SPEECHES

The speeches delivered by Viscount Milner to the Canadian clubs throughout Canada have been published in book form by the firm of W. T. Irwin and company, Toronto, at the request of his many admirers in this country. As explained in the preface by the distinguished pro-consul the addresses are not a series of lectures nor do they represent a premeditated effort of any kind. They were simply delivered at various stages of a somewhat hurried and arduous journey through Canada, and their value must be attributed to the fact that the subject which was uppermost in his mind at the time—namely, the future relations of Canada and the other self-governing dominions to the United Kingdom and to one another—is one to which for years he had given a good deal of thought and was able to draw from a large fund of experience. The addresses deal with important matters from all its various standpoints, and form a valuable contribution to the literature on the subject which, in the future, is bound to command the most thoughtful consideration of all the statesmen of the Empire.

A Mysterious Disappearance

By Gordon Holmes

A Great Detective Story

"A nice kettle of fish you have made of it," growled the barrister. "You help your sister in her folly of silence and then proceed to give effect to it by ruining your own happiness and that of your affianced wife. Have you seen Miss Browne since?"

"No."

"His visitor was so utterly disconsolate that Bruce was at a loss to know how to deal with him. He felt that if Mensmore would but speak regarding Mrs. Hillmer's strange delusion, and the cause of it, all these difficulties and disasters would disappear. He resolved to try a direct attack.

"Have you ever heard of a Colonel Montgomery?" he said suddenly, bending his searching gaze on the other's downcast face.

"The effect was electrical. Mensmore was so taken back that he was spellbound. He looked at Claude, the picture of astonishment, before he stammered:—

"—you—who told you about him?"

"He was your sister's friend, adviser, and confidant," was the stern reply. "He is who, in some mysterious way, is bound up with Lady Dyke's disappearance."

Mensmore rose excitedly.

"I cannot discuss the matter with you," he cried. "I have given my sacred promise, and no matter what the cost may be I will not break my word."

"Do you hear that, Bertie?" cried the girl. "Don't I tell you so?"

Mensmore came forward to her side of the table.

"I need not wait, Phil, dear," he said simply. "I ask your pardon now. This was foolish to think that anything I could do would stave off the inevitable."

"Add if you have—to go to China—you will take me with you?"

Bruce looked out the window, whistled, and said loudly, addressing a beautifully young in short skirts who figured in a poster across the way:

"Let me ring for some tea. All this talk makes one dry."

"A most unwise resolve," said the barrister.

"So I thought. You appear to hold the key to the situation; and, as it is an easy matter to trace you through the Directory, here I am. My people think I am skating at St. James's."

"Well, Miss Browne," said Claude, "I am neither jury nor counsel for the prosecution, but there is the culprit. I hand him over to you."

"Yes; but that goose didn't kill anybody, did he?"

"No."

"And I am sure his sister did not; from what little I saw of her she would not hurt a fly."

"Quite true."

"Then why don't you find the man who caused all the mischief—and—lock him up at least, so he cannot go on injuring people?"

Miss Phyllis was very brave and self-confident at the outset. Now she was on the verge of tears, for Mensmore's saddened face and depressed manner unnerved her more than his passionate words at their last interview.

"You ask me a straight question," replied Bruce, though his eyes were fixed on Mensmore, "and I will give you a straight answer. I will find the man who killed Lady Dyke. As you say, it is time his capacity for doing injury to others should be limited. Before many days have passed Mr. Mensmore will come to you and beg your pardon for his hasty and quite unwarranted resolve."

"Do you hear that, Bertie?" cried the girl. "Don't I tell you so?"

Mensmore came forward to her side of the table.

"I need not wait, Phil, dear," he said simply. "I ask your pardon now. This was foolish to think that anything I could do would stave off the inevitable."

"Add if you have—to go to China—you will take me with you?"

Bruce looked out the window, whistled, and said loudly, addressing a beautifully young in short skirts who figured in a poster across the way:

"Let me ring for some tea. All this talk makes one dry."

CHAPTER XXVI

LADY HELEN MONTGOMERY'S SON.

When the young people had gone—Mensmore ill at ease, though tremulously happy that Phyllis had so demonstrated her trust in him, Phyllis herself radiantly contenting right in the barrister's powers to set every thing right, Bruce devoted himself to the task of determining a new line for his energies.

The first step was self-evident. He must ascertain if the Dykes knew a Colonel Montgomery.

He dove to the club frequented by Sir Charles, but the baronet was not there, as he went to Wensley House.

Sir Charles was at home in his accustomed nook by the fire. He looked ill and low, but he displayed the same old-fashioned courtesy and respect for the past few weeks as he had at any time since his wife's death.

"Well, Claude," he said wearily, "anything to report?"

"What is it?"

"I want to ask you something. Did you ever know a Colonel Montgomery, or your wife acquainted with any one of that name to your knowledge?"

"I don't think she was. Had she ever met such a man I should probably have heard of him. Who was he?"

The baronet's low state rendered his words careless and indefinite, but his friend did not wish to bother him unduly.

"The police have discovered," he said, "that Mrs. Hillmer formed a close intimacy with some one whom she designated by that name and rank, though I have failed to trace any British officer who answers to his description. He disappeared, or died as some people put it, about the same time as your wife."

"Is it not known what became of him then?"

"No."

"Won't Mrs. Hillmer tell you?"

"She absolutely refuses to give any help, whatever."

"On what ground?"

"That is best known to herself. My theory is that a man she loves is implicated in the affair, and she is prepared to go to any lengths to shield him."

Sir Charles bent over and poked the fire viciously. Then he murmured: "Women are queer creatures, Bruce. We men never understand them until too late. My wife and I did not do so at all appearance care a jot for one another while she lived. Yet I now realize that she loved me, and I would give the little remaining span of existence, dear as life is, to see her once more."

This was a morbid subject; the younger man tried to switch him off it.

"It is almost clear to me," he said, "that Colonel Montgomery's name was assumed. Few people realize the use of the alias made in modern life. I have a notion that the custom among otherwise honorable people has arisen from the publicity given to the fact that Royal and other distinguished personages frequently choose to conceal their identity under less known territorial titles."

"The idea is ingenious. We are all slaves to fashion."

"However that may be, it should not be a difficult task to lay hands on the gentleman should he be still living."

HALIFAX KNIGHTS TO BE THE HOSTS

Pythian Grand Lodge of the Maritime Provinces Will Meet This Year in Halifax—Good Time Promised

Judging from the notices being sent out by Halifax Lodge, No. 12, Knights of Pythias, the Pythians in the sister city intend to make the annual meeting of the grand lodge of the maritime provinces, in August next, a memorable one. The grand lodge session will be open on August 17th and continue probably for two days. The annual regimental meeting of the Uniform Rank will also be held on the same date. The notices now being sent out which have been received by the local lodges here, are in the nature of reminders. They state that the programme is not yet definitely arranged, but they urge every member of the order to be in Halifax at the time. Efforts are being made to have the supreme chancellor, supreme vice-chancellor, the major-general of the uniform rank and other distinguished members of the order present.

It is a good many years since the grand lodge met in Halifax, and the members of the order have increased greatly, so that the Pythian spirit is now very strong.

A hearty invitation is extended to all K. of P.'s in the maritime provinces, to members of their families and friends, to give every member of the order to be in Halifax at the time. Efforts are being made to have the supreme chancellor, supreme vice-chancellor, the major-general of the uniform rank and other distinguished members of the order present.

SAP WILL RUN SOON

New Maple Candy and Sugar Due to Appear Any Day Now

With bright sunshine weather such as has been the rule during the past few days the maple sap will soon be running and maple candy and sugar may be expected to make its appearance almost any day. Then again, good brown sugar is quite reasonable and it is said that sales of this article for shipment to the country districts have been quite heavy of late and if the sap does not start running pretty soon the farmers will be able to supply "good, pure maple" just the same.

'CLOTHES MAKE YOUR WOMEN IMMODEST

American Lecturer Makes Interesting Statement to New York Audience

(New York American.) "American women should wear fewer clothes and they'd be more modest," said Arthur George Pomeroy Colten, lecturer, yesterday. "The native women of Africa," he added, "wear little or nothing, and they are the most moral women in the world. Not until they achieve civilized refinement do they become immodest or immoral."

Mr. Colten is here to lecture on Africa before the League for Political Education, having been for seven years a representative in East Africa for Great Britain. "Wearing a strip of bark or a bit of blanket, the African women are as un-conscious as children," he declared. "But with the first dress—a white shirtwaist and skirt to which the missionaries introduced them—come the seeds of vanity. The American women should wear the gab of African savages. They couldn't because of the climate. But there are a lot of frills and furbelows they might discard. Then they wouldn't be constantly struggling to outdo each other. That causes immorality and immorality."

Tral marriage is a regular institution in Africa, Mr. Colten said. The bridegroom purchases the bride with $10 worth of cattle. If they don't agree at the end of the year either one can depart from the hut and take a proper share of the cattle. Much of the time of the English officers is spent in deciding disputes as to who gets the usual increase in the cattle family at the end of the year.

THE CITY OF TORONTO MAKES COSTLY BLUNDER

Toronto, March 12—(Special)—The city of Toronto has received a reply from the customs department to the effect that $1,875 duties must be paid on the plans for a filtration plant prepared by a New York engineer. The beauty of the situation is that most experts say the whole scheme is a useless waste of money, and that it will cost no one knows. However, the people voted for it last January, and are entitled to a show for their money.

REBEL TROOPS ARE ADVANCING ON FEZ

Sultan of Morocco Opposed by a Powerful Subject and a Battle is Imminent

Fez, Morocco, March 13—The forces of Roghi, the sultan's formidable rebel subject, are close to Fez and advancing on that city. The tribesmen are in good condition, while the opposing government column is in a pitiable state, due to exposure to the cold and the frequent rainfalls. The surrounding tribes are maintaining a neutral attitude, awaiting the success of Roghi's venture before they openly join him.

A second government column which is operating against the Aityoussi tribe, has been successful in a sharp engagement with the enemy at Sefrou.

SWEDEN'S KING SHOCKS PEOPLE

London, March 12—According to reports from Sweden the people there are gravely agitated because the King wore a colored dress coat at a ball he recently gave at the Castle in Stockholm. The male courtiers wore similar coats, while the ladies of the court had their hair powdered. This unheard of gorgeousness calls forth protests from the press, one newspaper saying that the wearing of colored dress coats made an unpleasant impression upon the less well-to-do classes. Dress coats, if worn at all ought at least to be black. Colored dress coats are the invention of the evil one.

Both leaders in parliament, the paper adds, are much disturbed by the King donning such a gorgeous garment, and questions to the ministers are expected.
