A GREAT DEMONSTRATION

There was no possibility of mistaking the significance of last night's banquet to Hon. Dr. Pugsley. It was a great demonstration in honor of a leader who has far more than fulfilled the expectations of his party. Not only did the great throng of cheering Liberals include representatives from all parts of this province, but men from Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island bore eloquent testimony to Dr. Pugsley's worth as a Canadian public man; and to the warm tribute of the prime minister in the letter read last evening was added the glowing words of two of his colleagues in the government. But that which must have appealed most strongly to the guest of the evening was the enthusiastic tribute of the Liberals of his own province. There was no possibility of mistaking the meaning of their enthusiasm. It meant that they have a leader whose strength grows with leadership, and who is regarded, as time passes, with increasing confidence and affection. They hail him, in the words of one of the visitors from another province last evening, as "a big Canadian," and one of the able statesmen who are working out the destiny of the British empire.

They were three very notable addresses delivered last evening by the three members of the government—the three men who are the latest acquisitions to the cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Those who listened in turn to Hon. Mr. Murphy, Hon. Mr. Mackenzie King and Hon. Dr. Pugsley were convinced of the wisdom of the premier in gathering arround him men of such broad and statesmen-like views, who also possess the ability to impress their views upon the people. The three speakers dealt with large questions, and it was an inspiration to every Canadian to hear the clear and convincing statements made concerning the rapid growth of the country, and to catch the note of high confidence regarding its great future which was sounded by these leaders. There was nothing sectional or trivial or narrow in the views expressed. They spoke of Canada as a rapidly developing country, certain to become a leading factor in the working out of the high destiny of a great empire. They told of progress under Liberal rule, of the brilliant leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of the essential value of east and west to each other's welfare, of the steps taken to draw closer the different parts of the empire, and of the splendid opportunities and high responsibilities of Canadian citizenship. It was easy to perceive that with such men as these at the head of affairs the country must continue to progress along safe and sane lines of development, toward a future that will see Canada taking a foremost place among the nations within the empire.

Hon. Mr. Murphy was heard with intense pleasure by New Brunswick Liberals. His glowing picture of the growing west was supplemented by a clear statement of the interdependence of the various parts of the country. There was, he pointed out, no ground for jealousy, but the whole country must progress at the same time. His splendid tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the unifier of races in Canada was cheered to the echo. One of the most interesting portions of his address was that dealing with the immigration policy of the Liberal government, and the splendid results achieved. Mr. Murphy, it is safe to say, will always be sure of a warm welcome among New Brunswick Liberals.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie-King is a speaker more after the English than American model. He is scholarly and fluent in expression, and at once gains the sympathy and commands the attention of his audience. He knows history, and was able to give the maritime provinces their proper place in the development of representative institutions. In all that he said there was evidence of the larger outlook, the clear vision, the absolute confidence in the splendid future of the country, which appeals with special force to the younger generation of Canadians. He, too, will always be welcome among the Liberals of this province.

Of the speech of Dr. Pugsley it must be said that he has seldom appeared to better advantage. He spoke not of himself, further than to express his heartfelt thanks to his supporters, but of Canada—the Canada that has made such rapid strides and is moving on to such a splendid future. It was the well-considered speech of a statesman who knows whereof he speaks, and who has made himself personally familiar with the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. If he spoke of growth, he had the figures to submit in evidence. If he ventured prophesy, he had the data upon which it might with confidence be based. He dealt with the transportation question from the broad Canadian standpoint, and made it clear that the government is not concerned about any one locality except in-so-far as it fits into a national scheme of transportation. He touched upon many topics in the course of his brilliant address, but not once was there an allusion to the bitter attacks against himself. He could safely rest upon his achievements as a minister, and in the confidence and high esteem of his colleagues and supporters. The fact that he pursued this dignified course gave emphasis to the remarks of Mr. Warburton and others concerning the dignity and courtesy which he displayed in parliament when the most savage attacks were made upon him by some of his political opponents. Dr. Pugsley stands today as one of the strongest leaders the Liberal party has ever had in the province of New Brunswick, and his speech last night made him more than ever secure in the affections of those whom he led to such a splendid triumph in the last federal elections.

The strong hold of Mr. F. B. Carvell upon the hearts of New Brunswick Liber- also was well shown when he responded to the insistent calls. His brief but vigorous address contained one notable suggestion. It was that the government of Canada should enlarge the number of its trade agencies in other countries, and advertise its wares just as the progressive business man is wont to do. Mr. Hendry, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, made a point worth noting when he said that for a long time the east must manufacture for the west, and that St. John can do more than merely offer a winter port for the produce of the west. Mr. Turgeon, M. P., made a hit when he declared that in the future, when western Canada is providing the grain to feed the English nation the iron mines of Gloucester will be turning out the iron and steel for its Dreadnoughts. Mr. Warburton heartily approved of great public works, and a progressive transportation policy, to which it was clear he would not obpect if it included a tunnel to the island province. These speakers, with Mr. Logan, Senator Costigan, Mr. Copp, Hon. Mr. Sweeney, and Dr. Sormany, M. P. P., all joined in glowing tributes to the guest of the evening and in expression of confidence in the Liberal party as the party of real progress in Canada.

Occasions such as that of last evening do much to strengthen a party and give its members a new inspiration. The men who came from all parts of New Brunswick to honor Dr. Pugsley go back to their several localities with a new enthusiasm born of contact with each other under such inspiring circumstances, and of the message conveyed to them by leaders of the party in the federal arena. The Times devotes considerable space to the report of the addresses delivered, but only those who were present can fully realize the significance of the splendid demonstration in honor of a leader and in assertion of the strength and confidence of a great party.

In the course of his remarks at the banquet last evening, Mr. Logan of Amherst urged St. John merchants to appear before the West Indies commission and set forth their views fully. He declared that this question of West Indies trade is one of the most important now engaging attention in the maritime provinces.

Those who heard the statements made last evening concerning the Canadian transportation system can have no doubt of the commanding position St. John will occupy as a winter port. Mr. Hendry tells us the name is a misnomer, and that St. John should become a great summer port as well.

◈ ◈ ◈ ◈

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's letter expressing his regret that he could not attend the banquet last evening was singularly felicitous, as all his utterances are, and it left no doubt of the high estimation in which Dr. Pugsley is held by his colleagues in the government..

◈ ◈ ◈ ◈

Mr. Warburton made a point last night when he said that the bitterness of the attacks made upon Mr. Pugsley was the best evidence that they feared his ability and desired to get him out of their way.

OTHER DAYS

Oh, sing me a song of other days,
A song of youth and youth's affections gone,
And voice the rhythm of those glad, wild lays
That stirred my heart and voiceless still live on.
Sing me the chime that oft in days gone by
Flung round my gladsome heart its magic spell,
The subtler harmonies of earth and sky
The living charms that I remember well.

Bring them again those mimicries of joy,
The song of bird, the note of woodland stream
And let the pure gold from time's alloy
Gild bright the memories of a boyish dream—
For when in all the years that life enfolds
Amid the varying scenes that time has given,
When has the heart surpassed its joy of old
Or been since boyhood half so near to heaven.

There was a music then I hear not now
Save in the notes that sound from memory's lyre—
E'en as we find beneath a realm of snow.
Unquenched the smoldering remnant of a fire.
So in the heart the songs of youth remain,
Those fainter sounds of love's fond minstrelsy
And snow of years heaps o'er the scene in vain—
Youth's fires still smolder on in memory.

WHY HE SOLD HIM

The village postmaster doubted that the animal offered for sale was really "a valuable watchdog," and eyed rather dubiously the nondescript canine.

" 'Deed he am, boss," asseverated Rastus.

"But if he was a good watchdog as you make out, how is it you want to sell him at all?"

"Ye' see boss, it am dis way; In dese hard times I ain't done got nuthin' to watch."
