A GROWING TIME

There are occasions when private interests must give way to the public welfare, and there should be no serious difficulty in securing a site for the proposed sugar refinery, on payment of a reasonable figure for property required. Such an industry would be of great benefit to St. John. It would give employment to many persons, stimulate a larger direct trade with the West Indies, and encourage manufacturers in other lines to consider St. John as a desirable location.

The statement is confirmed that St. John will secure the dry dock and ship-repairing plant, and that, Harland & Wolff, the Canadian Pacific, Allan and Dominion steamship lines are interested. A dry dock in itself is not a great industry, but it and the repairing plant will mean much to a port whose trade is destined to increase to very large proportions. Each new enterprise tends to attract others, and when great corporations direct the attention of capital to any centre, and stamp it as an important link in a chain of transportation, it follows that industrial expansion in many directions is assured.

MEDICAL INSPECTION

The Teachers' Institute has declared in favor of medical inspection of the schools. The teachers know of the danger of contagion when disease is prevalent, and they know that in many cases trifling defects of sight and hearing, which might become chronic troubles, could easily be overcome through medical inspection. The Medical Society has urged very strongly and is still urging that a medical inspector be appointed. The Associated Charities will strongly recommend the same course from a different viewpoint—that of the dwellers in unhealthy tenements. This whole question has been brought to public attention in such manner, and with so much of powerful argument to enforce the plea, that it cannot longer be neglected or ignored by those in authority. The health of the community is a first consideration, and the voices of science and experience are alike insistent in the demand for proper precautions. The home and the school are responsible for the spread of disease. Medical inspection, by an official thoroughly competent to do the work, would be a long step in the direction of better public health.

UNHAPPY MR. BORDEN

The Toronto Telegram (Conservative) is not satisfied with the leadership of Mr. R. L. Borden. The Telegram is opposed to the government's naval scheme, which Mr. Borden has lately endorsed, and it goes after the leader in this fierce manner:

"The R. L. Borden idea of keeping every big question out of politics can only have the effect of keeping the Conservative party out of office. If Canada is not free to utilize the party system in the solution of big questions, what is the good of the party system at all? Issues like the National School question in 1905 and the Naval Aid question in 1908-9 are represented as being too big for adjustment in the arena of party difference and public discussion. Were these questions too big, or is the R. L. Borden leadership too small, to recognize the truth that parliament is the forum in which the sincere convictions of a free people should be expressed on every question? Journals like the Regina West and the Regina Standard, and representatives like C. T. Magrath, M. P., of Lethbridge, speak the convictions of anti-Laurier Canadians who are hostile to the creation of a Canadian navy. If R. L. Borden were a great and wise leader he would keep his ear to the prairie and seek to express the British-loving, war-hating ideals of the Canadians whose votes he must gain if his party is ever going to power. But Mr. Borden prefers to keep his ear to the pulse of Montreal and seeks to suppress the ideals of the once great Conservative party, which is being forced into the position of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's 'me too.'"

The Telegram intimates that Mr. Borden is not large enough for the office he holds as leader of the party. It would take a very large man, and a very wise one, to harmonize the conflicting elements in the Conservative ranks. Mr. Borden can but do his best, and he merits a degree of sympathy for having the courage to attempt an apparently impossible task.

AN AMBITIOUS TOWN

The Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, News enumerates a few things the new city council of that town must attend to with diligence and a due regard for the city's certain growth. Here are the items of a programme that would quite take the breath of an eastern alderman:

"The paving of the streets, an entirely new work, must be started; La Colle Falls must be developed; the C. P. R. and the G. T. P. must be brought into the city; the roads leading into Prince Albert must be improved; waterwork extensions must be taken care of; the whole city must be surveyed, street lines, street levels must be established and registered; a public library will have to be considered; a new fire hall should be built; replacing wooden walks with cement sidewalks will have to be considered."

The News informs us that: "Prince Albert is the centre of the four and lumber milling industries of the middle west. There are three lumber mills and three flour mills, with a capacity of seventy-five million feet of lumber and 112,500 barrels of flour per annum. The city is, in addition, the distributing point for a large cultivated area over a hundred miles in diameter, and for the northern outposts of the fur trade."

In eastern parlance, Prince Albert is "going some."

All who are interested in clean sport in St. John should endeavor to have the line sharply drawn between amateur and professional. In no other way can satisfactory conditions be attained.

In a review of the canal trade in and out of Montreal, the Star says: "The canal books also show a decided increase in the arrivals of coal boats from the west. This may be taken to fit in with a growing preference of manufacturers to use western instead of Nova Scotia coal."

A Montreal paper announces that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be the speaker at the Women's Canadian Club luncheon to be held on the twenty-seventh of October, at the Royal Victoria College. The premier's address will be on the "British and American Constitutions—a Comparison."

A conception of the importance of Minneapolis as a milling centre may be gained from the following despatch of Oct. 20 from that city: "Every shipping record in the milling history of Minneapolis was broken today when the railroads took out 556 cars, containing 110,560 barrels of flour. The mills have all been in operation for the last ten days and the industry is active beyond precedent."

The following despatch from New York tells of the ravages of the white plague in that city, and how it is proposed to cope with the terrible disease:—"A group of distinguished physicians and philanthropists, constituting the anti-tuberculosis commission, appeared before Mayor McClellan yesterday, and urged that $487,000 be set aside by the board of estimates to reduce an economic loss estimated at $15,000,000 yearly to this city alone caused by the ravages of tuberculosis. Robert W. DeForest, president of the Charity Organization Society, declared that of 44,000 tuberculosis sufferers in New York but 16,900 were receiving proper medical attendance, while there are, he said, 24,000 new cases and 10,000 deaths each year. Ferry-boat clinics and class rooms for tuberculosis children excluded from the public schools were urged by Dr. Samuel Lambert. Dr. Abraham Jacobi recommended outdoor classes such as have been successfully maintained at Boston, Mass.; Providence, R. I., and abroad."

Of the conditions of the steel trade in the United States, the New York Journal of Commerce says: "The steel trade is booming as it never boomed before. Capacity for production is the greatest in history, yet it cannot cope with the volume of business now pressing upon manufacturers. Prices are back to the levels that prevailed before the collapse. Premiums are offered for prompt delivery. Every skilled iron and steel worker in the country is employed. The tariff revision that the trade feared has proved innocuous. Foreign rivalry is negligible and at home the lion and the lambs are locked in friendly embrace, their only regret being that wicked thing known as competition should ever have disturbed their amicable relations. As for the value of steel securities, they never were so high as they are today. Steel, in short, is wearing the plumes, the robes and the airs of a prince, instead of the rags of a pauper. The future is without the shadow of a cloud—nothing but expanding trade and waxing dividends are in sight."

ROOSEVELT AND MISSIONARY

Miss Hilda Stumpf is a missionary in East Africa who recently received a visit from President Roosevelt. She is a native of Indiana, and was interested in church work before she became a missionary. She writes glowing accounts of the prowess of the ex-president and the admiration in which he is held by the natives because of the courage he has displayed in the hunt.

THOSE WHO WALK ALONE

Women there are on earth, most sweet and high,
Whose love their own, and walk bereft and lonely,
Loving that one lost heart until they die,
Loving it only.

And so they never see beside them grow
Children, whose coming is like breath of flowers,
Consoled by subtler loves the angels know
Through childhood hours.

Good deeds they do, they comfort and they bless
In duties others put off till the morrow,
Their look is balm, their touch is tenderness
To all in sorrow.

Betimes the world smiles at them, as 'twere shame
This maiden guise, long after youth's departed;
But in God's Book they bear another name—
"The faithful-hearted."

Faithful in life, and faithful unto death,
Such souls in sooth, illumine with lustre splendid
That, though weeps, glad land wherein, the Vision saith,
Earth's wrongs are ended.

—By Richard Burton.

IN LIGHTER VEIN FOLLOWING THE CUSTOM.

"Well," said the Eskimo, next day, Chagrined, "It really looks
As if he didn't want to stay.
He's packed his duds and gone away,
Just like all other Cooks."

—Chicago Tribune.

HAPPINESS.

Still we are inclined to the belief that the happiest men are those whose happiness doesn't depend on a winning baseball team.

MY OVERCOAT.

Another year 'twill surely do,
My thoughtful wife believes;
With but a velvet collar new
And lining for the sleeves.

MEAN.

I asked her what she thought of Jane,
She answered with a grin,
"I wouldn't call her two-faced, but She has a double chin."

TAKE HEED.

Whoso mocketh a married man, let him take heed, for a fool is born every minute and the mocker himself falleth by the wayside.
—Smart Set Magazine.

STILL MIGHTIER.

By this irate truth how oft we're bored:
"The pen is mightier than the sword."
Of course the poet knew not the pen,
The pennant would obscure the pen.
—Cleveland Plaindealer.

TOUGH SHOPPING.

A bit of turf he sadly bears
Downtown;
Upon his troubled brow he wears
A frown.
They have a little house, you know,
A yard,
And have been trying hard to grow
Some sward.

And thus he lugs, it comes to pass,
Around
A bit of turf composed of grass
And ground.
His face, as he displays this patch
Is drawn,
His wife has sent him out to match
Some lawn.

MAN OF MANY LIMBS.

The old colonel was spinning off yarns of the civil war and in the heat of reminiscence his memory became somewhat tangled.

"Ah, gentlemen," he related seriously, "I shall never forget the charge at Chickamauga.
It was there that I lost my leg."
Ten minutes later the old colonel was relating an incident of Gettysburg.

"And when we climbed Little Round Top the bullets were whistling on all sides. It was there that I lost my leg."
And thirty minutes later through a misty haze of smoke

"Seven Pines, gentlemen. Seven Pines!" Ah, that was the battle. One of my legs was shot from under me and—
But just then a timid little boy looked up and asked shyly: "Grandpapa, were—were you a contipede in those days?"—Chicago

THE NEW LOCHINVAR.

Oh, young Lochinvar has come out of the sky,
So fast that he looks but a blur to the eye.
The girl of his heart is that day to be wed
To a prince with a crown on the top of his head.

And nothing inside it—so Lochinvar glides
To a spot where the leafage his acroplane hides.

For all over Europe "was sadly confessed
That of all such machines his plane was the best."

The prince was a craven, and hated the air;
He wouldn't ascend if the weather was fair.
He stuck to an auto, although the bold bride Thought nothing such fun as a monoplane ride.

"This laggard and craven will have to go far Ere he takes her from me," said young Lochinvar.

And just as the bridal procession went by He snatched up the girl and was off through the sky.

Oh, then there was action. Some fell in a swon.
While others unanchored a captive balloon;
And motors were humming on many a plane
As they chased the abductor, but chased him in vain.

For cleaving the air like an eagle in flight
Lochinvar and his loved one were soon lost to sight.

And thus in the cross-channel flight there is hope
For the maid of the future who wants to elope.
—Philadelphia Bulletin.

MID-AUTUMN

(Emma A. Lentz, in Christian Endeavor World).

The sumac's torches are ablaze along the country road and lane;
The timid gentian gathers heart to show
its simple charms again;

The full-fed crows with gladness claim the upland stubbles as their own.
And all the birds of sweetest song have with forewarning sudden down.

The vines, with vivid scarlet drape the old stone walls with royal grace,
And busy squirrels store their food in many a secret hiding place.

The trees their short-lived splendours flaunt
and dazzle with their pomp and pride,
Which the keen winds will surely grasp,
and rudely scatter far and wide.

The creaking harvest carts bring home the largest spoils of hill and plain;
The golden hunter's moon rides high, and makes the night like day again;

The mornings, crisp with frost, tone down into fair noons of gentle heat,
And the strange fancies of the land entice afar our wandering feet.

We love the summer, and we joyed in all
her many sweet delights;
But, swift, we saw her slip away on waning days and lengthening nights;

And now the autumn charms, but soon
the winter's pleasures will be here;
And so we find each season good around the circle of the year.

WOMAN'S UNIQUE CLUB

Bowdoinham has a unique woman's club of practical nature. The club meets on the shore of the Cuthance River, meeting Monday morning, as early as possible. This is known as the washing club, and the club room is the wash house, where the women sort the clothes before carrying them to the river, where the washing is done on the rocks. A stove is set up near the shore, and while the clothes are boiling the club members enjoy a friendly gossip on the rocks.

A MAINSTAY FOR ALL MEN

All Breadwinners Who Find Health Declining Should Take
Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Thousands of men throughout Canada are suffering today from a deplorable failure of strength without knowing that they are the victims of nervous exhaustion. The signs are plain. The sufferer cannot keep his mind on work, passes restless nights, turns against food and cannot digest it, feels exhausted after exertion, while headaches and fits of dizziness often add to his misery. These symptoms denote that the nervous system is weakened and insufficiently nourished. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will promptly cure because they enrich the impure weak blood and thus give new strength and tone to the exhausted nerves. No other medicine can do this so promptly and so surely.

Mr. W. H. Hipson, East Pembroke, N. S., says:—"For a number of years I was troubled with violent headaches. When these spells came on the pain was so severe that I feared I would lose my senses.
At the outset these headaches would come on about once a week. I doctored for the trouble and did everything possible to get relief, but without avail, and as time went on the attacks grew both in frequency and severity. The pain was terrible and with each attack seemed to grow worse."

The only relief I could get was from a hot mustard foot bath, and the application of hot water and ammonia to my head. I would then have to be led to bed where I had to remain until the attack passed away. At this time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my notice, and while I scarcely hoped they would cure me, I decided to try them. After taking a few boxes I found that the attacks were not so severe, and I joyfully continued to take the Pills until I had used ten boxes when every symptom of the trouble had passed away, and I was in better health than I had ever enjoyed before. It is several years since my cure was effected, and as I have not had a headache since I feel that the cure is permanent. This is a plain statement of my case, but no words can tell what my sufferings really were and I believe that but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would have been in my grave, for I could not have stood the pain much longer and doctors did not do me any good."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50
from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brookville, Ont.
