Small Parties for Children

It is a great mistake to allow a child to give a large party, as the result often is a nervous breakdown, caused by the attendant fatigue. Rich food should not be served indiscriminately at children's parties, as the result often is a dangerous attack of indigestion for one or more of the children. Another reason why the large party is undesirable is that the dust the children raise in their romping gets into their throats, and has, often, a very injurious effect. For a child under the age of ten the party should never be made up of more than four to six children. The mother of the child giving the party may watch this number and send them home confident that their little stomachs and nerves have not suffered.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE NICKEL

Louis XVII and the French Revolution is the most interesting picture at the Nickel last evening and will be shown for the last time this afternoon and tonight. It is one of Pathé's historical series of gorgeously-colored photographs with close attention to all the details. A Day in Lapland was also of unusual interest, being a comprehensive travel picture in that foreign land. Both pictures have educational value. The comedy element is supplied in The Two Handboxes and Bess and Her Goose. Today Holmes and Buchanan will have new solos, Miss Holmes singing A Little Girl Like Me, from the musical comedy, The Storks, and Mr. Buchanan a delightful song from the German entitled In the Time of Roses. Mr. Courtinais will be heard in a charming little bit of sentiment, Just One Sweet Girl. These musical features are above the ordinary, and will make the Nickel's show a new one.

THE CAMERAPHONE

The big programme at the Opera House last night was pronounced one of the best in some weeks. Miss McDonald's singing was the big number on the programme and an entire change from anything she had previously presented. Her singing of I'm Looking for a Boy Like You, was a distinct novelty. Tonight Miss Macdonald will sing I'm Glad I'm Married, another new number.

AT THE STAR

The Star Theatre in north end is more than pleasing its hundreds of patrons and the new show of pictures made a distinct hit last evening. Tonight is the last opportunity to see this fine bill which is as follows: The Little Waif, The Mysterious Safe, Who's Hat Is It?, An Ingenious Lover, The Lost Necklace and Five Minutes' Interview. Miss Von Brander in a new song. The Star's shows start at 6:30 and continue until 10:30 p. m. On Friday there will be no shows in this theatre until 8 in the evening, as the W. C. T. U. ladies are going to hold their annual meeting and social.

MANY HERE HAD RECIPE FILLED

Tremendous Popularity of the Home Prescription Says Local Druggist Who Fills the Simple Recipe Many Times.

That the readers of this paper appreciate advice when given in good faith is plainly demonstrated by the fact that our well-known local pharmacy supplied the ingredients for the "vegetable prescription" many times within the past two weeks. The announcement of this simple, harmless mixture has certainly accomplished much in reducing the great many cases of kidney complaint and rheumatism here, relieving pain and misery, especially among the older population who are always suffering more or less with bladder and urinary troubles, backache and particularly rheumatism.

Another well-known druggist asks us to continue the announcement of the prescription. It is doing so much real good here, he continues, that it would be a crime not to do so. It can not be repeated too often, and further states many cases of remarkable cures wrought.

The following is the prescription of simple ingredients, making a harmless, inexpensive compound, which any person can prepare by shaking well in a bottle: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Amalgam, running commentary of debonair, indifferent jests about this, that and the other thing—anything, except poker.

"When the question of the size of the limit is settled you proceed to take solemn oath with every last man present that the game will break up at 11:45 prompt—win or lose. You tell of the absolute and imperative necessity of your being home by midnight at the latest—and so does every other chap, especially the married ones.

"The smoke gets thick and hazy and heavy and the conversation dwindles down to the necessities only—and you're at it again!

"The necessities? Did you ever stop to think of the peculiar nature of the conversation around a poker table? You simply must have the vocabulary down pat, to be considered an ace, and to avoid being picked out as the one original lamb of the shearing.

"I got 'em, they're off!" says the fat man across from you, throwing in his "opener."

"I'll boost you!" draws out the chap on the left.

"Not for little Angel-face!" exclaims the next fellow, throwing down his cards disgustedly.

"Come again!" you retort, when it gets to you, real mysterious like. And so it goes.

"Then, when the betting is done with and somebody called your hand, you open the five pasteboards slowly, one by one, like a fan, while concealing them just as though you were sure every good fellow in the crowd in standing back of your chair looking over your shoulder.

"When the fifth card has been squeezed a hair's breadth beyond the margin of the fourth, you announce hopefully:

"Thirty-miles for mine."

Lady—I hope you go to Sunday-school regularly, my little man.

"You win," you grunt disgustedly. "Say, I'm looking for a boy like you."

Mr. A. Good Fellow on Poker Playing

"I sat in at a little session last night," Mr. A. Good Fellow confided dolefully to his friend on the way home from the office, "and I've felt like a worn-out lime peel in a sloe-gin fizz all day. Ain't it funny that a man'll do to rake in a little of the mazzara over a round table drawing to four-card flushes and handing out his red, white and blue lozenges like a little man, instead of getting to work and earning the money honestly? And did you ever think what an unmitigated subject piece of a damped fellow is to sit up all night long and the next morning try to con himself into thinking he's had a regular helluva good time when he unwinds the wet towel from his head and looks at the cold, grey dawn? Ain't it funny? But ain't it funnier still the way he'll go and do precisely the same thing over again the very next week!

"Take it from me, there's a whole lot about this poker business that's a long way from being what it's cracked up to be. And, believe me, when I say it—there's a whole lot more about it that for absolute, inextinguishable assurity, has got all other forms of parlor amusement played away off the board."

Did you ever stop to think of the way in which one of these little 'sittings' begins and ends and runs amuck, so to speak, without end? Did you?

"Well a budding of your meets you on the street or telephones you the high sign and states the place and time of the gathering of the clan. You immediately get busy and figure out just how much coin you can rake and scrape together for the little session. And all the rest of the day you have visions of how you will look behind a red and blue stack as high as your chin.

"You're there on time—right to the minute! Everybody gives you the glad hand—and everybody's figuring in his own mind just what is the limit. And cash he can take from you. Somebody's sure to ask you that old chestnut about whether you brought a horse and wagon with you to carry away the coin or whether you were content with a wheelbarrow.

"You take off your coat and collar, roll up your sleeves, and, after anxiously intutting into the staying qualities of the bottled invigorator and the cheese sandwiches, you sit down to the table and pass over your dough for your first stack of chips. The meanwhile, you keep up a non-chalant, running commentary of debonair, indifferent jests about this, that and the other thing—anything, except poker.

"When the question of the size of the limit is settled you proceed to take solemn oath with every last man present that the game will break up at 11:45 prompt—win or lose. You tell of the absolute and imperative necessity of your being home by midnight at the latest—and so does every other chap, especially the married ones.

"The smoke gets thick and hazy and heavy and the conversation dwindles down to the necessities only—and you're at it again!

"The necessities? Did you ever stop to think of the peculiar nature of the conversation around a poker table? You simply must have the vocabulary down pat, to be considered an ace, and to avoid being picked out as the one original lamb of the shearing.
