THE MESSAGE

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Dream of Fortune," "The Captain of the Kansas," etc.

The servant who brought the calabash was sent back to search for the tattooed skin. He soon returned with it, and the deputy Governor examined the two curios with manifest interest.

"It is not native work," he said. "I have never seen anything just like it, even in museums at home."

Moved by an impulse which she could never afterwards explain, Evelyn asked if both the gourd and the parchment might be given to her.

"They are really mine," she explained sadly. "Captain Warden asked me to accept the carved head, as it was I who discovered it. But I was afraid of it then. Now, I should be pleased to have it in my possession. It brought us together in the first instance. Perhaps it may do the same thing a second time."

"Nigeria is the home of the ju-ju—may this fetish prove a lucky one!" said the official gravely. "Take it, by all means, Miss Dane, but let no native see it, or you will attract a notoriety that I am sure you would dislike. Meanwhile I shall telegraph to Old Calabar asking for news, though I should certainly have heard if Warden had turned up already."

That same afternoon the deputy Governor's wife called on Evelyn, and invited her to come and stay at her house, urging that she would find a residence in a private family vastly preferable to the hotel in which she had passed the previous night. For fully three weeks she lived with this most friendly and hospitable lady. By degrees, as they became more intimate, her new acquaintance gathered the threads of the unusual story in which the girl figured so prominently. Similarly, as Evelyn gained more enthusiastic explorers shrank from them? The deputy Governor scouted the idea that Warden could raise a caravan at Bel Abbas. He was dubious about the incidents reported from Lektawa, but he made no secret of the utter improbability that Warden would have the means of buying camels and hiring men for the dangerous journey outlined by Captain Mortimer. And, to complete Evelyn's dismay, the Southern Nigeria administration sent the most positive assurances that Warden had not been heard of in the upper river districts.

She learned incidentally that Mrs. Laing had gone to Lokoja in a river steamer. Her hostess believed that Rosamund had found out the latest version of Warden's adventures, and cherished a faint hope that even yet she might forestall Evelyn. No small consideration would take her so far into the interior, especially as the journey was both risky and useless.

"But that need not trouble you at all, my dear," said her outspoken friend. "If Captain Warden lives, you will hear of him long before Mrs. Laing hears. I am afraid that if news comes at all, it will reach us in the form of a native rumor that a white man died of fever away up there beyond the hills. It is always fever—never a spear thrust or a quantity of powdered glass mixed with a man's food. The natives are loyal enough to each other in that respect. Even when they know the truth, it is almost impossible to get them to tell it."

So now it was death, and not life, that was talked of, and Evelyn lived on in dry-eyed misery until Fairholme binned one day that she ought to return home, as the climate was beginning to affect her health.

There were not lacking indications that the merry-souled little peer had quickly reconciled himself to the loss of Mrs. Laing. He was the most popular man in Lagos, and he hardly ever visited Evelyn when he did not assure her that he was "having a giddy time with the dear girls." Yet she knew that he was only waiting until the last hope of Warden's escape from the desert must be abandoned. When that hour came, and she was prepared to take ship for England, Fairholme would ask her to marry him.

The belief became an obsession. To get away from it, to cut herself wholly adrift from painful associations, she offered her help to an American Baptist missionary and his wife who were going up the Benue. They tried to dissuade her, pointing out the hardships and positive dangers of the undertaking and the hum-drum nature of the nursing, teaching, and doctoring that constituted the lot of a mental missionary in West Africa. Finally, they consent-

Prevents as well as Cures

"Father Morrissey's No. 10" (Lung Tonic) Goes a Step Further Than Other Cough Medicines.

Left to themselves, most "Common Colds" will run their course and depart. But they leave reminders in the shape of lingering, irritating coughs and weak throats and lungs.

There are many cough-medicines on the market that help to stop a cold, but they do it because they contain Opium, Morphine or similar drugs that simply quiet or deaden the irritation, but do not remove the cause. Such medicines do little or no permanent good and often a great deal of harm, particularly to children.

"Father Morrissey's No. 10" is made of Roots, Herbs and Balsams, without a trace of Morphine or any other harmful drug. It goes straight to the root of the trouble and removes the cause of the cough. It restores lungs and throat to a healthy condition, tones them up, and makes them stronger than ever to resist colds and more serious diseases. Trial bottle, 35c. Regular size, 50c. RESTIGOUCHE COURT SITTING

Address Presented By Bar to Judge J. H. Barry

Dalhousie, N. B., Aug. 31.—The Restigouche circuit met here today, Judge Barry presiding. The only important case before the court is the claim for damages by the Campbellton Tribune against the town of Campbellton. This is the second time that this case has come before a Restigouche jury.

At the opening of the court this morning the bar of Restigouche court presented the following address to Judge Barry, to which his honor made a very suitable reply:

To the Honorable Jeremiah P. Barry, One of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the Province of New Brunswick:

"May it please you honor, we the members of the bar of the county of Restigouche take this opportunity on the first occasion of your presiding at the Circuit Court of this county, to congratulate you upon your elevation to the supreme bench of this province and to welcome you to the county in your official capacity. We remember the high position which your honor occupied while at the bar as one of the leading members of the legal profession and we have no doubt but that you will take an equally high position as one of the judiciary of the province. We look forward to the most pleasant relations between your honor and the bar of this county and as you from time to time come to reside at our courts and at times when we may have occasion to come before you in court or at chambers, and we trust that you may long live to exercise the high duties of your honorable office."

Most respectfully yours,
JOHN McALLISTER,
W. A. MOTT,
JAMES S. HARQUAIL,
WILLIAM MURRAY,
A. G. MCKENZIE,
ARTHUR T. LEBLANC.

The address was read by Mr. Trueman. There is a hot contest in every parish in Restigouche for municipal honors, except in Addington where Couns. Adams and McBeath were returned unopposed.

In Eldon, Councillors Dawson and Cheser are opposed by Firth and Cleveland. In Durham, Councillors Laver and Murchie are opposed by McMillan and McDonnell.

Colborne—The old councillors retired and the contest is between ex-Councillor Mawhinney, John Galbraith and John C. McLean.

Balmoral—Councillors Arsenault and Goulette are opposed by ex-Councillor Bernard and John J. McIntyre.

Dalhousie—Councillors Chaytor and Saintonge are opposed by ex-Councillor Timothy Robinson and Alexis Levesque, with a fifth candidate, J. J. Legouffe.

THE BRAVE DEED THAT WON VICTORIA CROSS FOR BERESFORD

Gallant Rescue of Soldier From Zulus—His Quaint Method of Making Wounded Man Accept His Aid—"Where Condor Charlie" Came From

Under the glowing title of "The Bravest Deed I Ever Saw," Archibald Forbes, seasoned war correspondent, and world traveler, tells of Lord Charles Beresford's daring exploit in the first South African campaign which won him the Victoria Cross.

Foremost Rider on Force

"Colonel (later General) Redvers Buller, had been ordered to make a reconnaissance before Cetewayo's Kraal of Ulundi. Beresford led the advance, Buller bringing up the main body. Beresford and his smart chestnut with the white ticks on his withers and flanks, was the foremost rider on the force.

"The Zulu chief, bringing up the rear of the fugitives suddenly turned on the lone horseman, who had so outridden his followers. A big man even for a Zulu, he ringed around his head proved him a veteran. The muscles rippled in his shoulder as he compacted himself behind his cowhide shield, making his distance for the thrust of the gleaming assegai.

Buried in Zulu's Breast

"It flashed out like the head of a cobra as it strikes. Beresford's cavalry sabre clashed with it; the spear head was dashed aside; the horseman gave point with all the vigour of his arm and the impetus of his galloping horse and lo! in the twinkling of an eye, the sword point was through the shield and half its length buried in the Zulu's broad chest. The gallant induna was a dead man and his assegai stands now in a corner of Beresford's mother's drawing-room.

"The flight of the groups of Zulus was a calculated snare; the fugitives in front of the regulars were simply a decoy. Suddenly from out of a deep watercourse crossing the plain, and from out the adjacent long grass, sprang up a long line of several thousand armed Zulus. At Buller's long command to fire a volley and then retire, Beresford and his squad rode back towards the main body, followed by Zulu bullets. Two men were killed on the spot. A third man's horse slipped up and his wounded rider came to the ground, the horse running away. Beresford riding behind his retreating party looked back and saw that the fal-

MORE GRAFT IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Aug. 31.—New light on the working of the roads department was thrown at the royal commission today when an ex-foreman of roads who had graduated into the contractor class was examined.

This man, Leon Giguere, dropped his civic employment in 1906 and started contracting for city work. He swore that he had as his partner Phileas Lariviere, brother of Ald. Lariviere, then chairman of the roads committee, and had recently divided his profits with him, although Lariviere had no apparent connection with the business except his relationship to Ald. Lariviere, devoting his time to his grocery store.

It was further shown that Giguere secured contracts for city sewers and used old bricks belonging to the city to make them with. This appeared to be the custom which Commissioner Cannon characterized as rather strange.

Lariviere, the grocer partner in the contracting business, was called and swore that he had not shared his unearned increment with his brother, the alderman, who knew nothing of the business. He, however, offered no explanation as to how he came to be admitted into so advantageous an arrangement.

ARE MAKING BIG WAGES AT GLACE BAY

Glance Bay, N. S., Aug. 31.—Eighty-six eviction cases were set down for trial before Judge Finlayson today and thirty-four additional cases for Friday.

As an indication of what the men who are now at work in the mines of the Dominion Coal Company think of the strike and their feelings regarding an early settlement of the difficulties, the opinion expressed by two miners who were asked about it is a practical expression:

"Why," they said, "there is our pay cheques for the last fortnight, $140 each. Two men can now make as much as four men could earn previous to the strike, and the reason is not far to seek. The men working get their coal taken more readily. The company can get fully as large an output as was obtained in the days before the strike with but seventy-five per cent. of the men then employed. We who are working do not want to see the strike end, as under present conditions we are making more money than we ever did in our lives."

Outdoor Life for Children

Physicians everywhere agree that outdoor air is the sovereign panacea for all ailments, and this is one of the reasons why children should be allowed to spend the greater part of their time in the summer outdoors in the sunshine, and fill their lungs with pure air.

The little people need to be developed and outdoors is where this should take place. Each organ must be kept in condition and the children should be allowed sufficient exercise to allow them to grow up healthy and strong for their fight with the world.

A little walk in the park is not sufficient to bring the bloom to the cheek of a child; it must be allowed to play outdoors with other children, romp in the dirt, with a good bath to follow. Many city children need the country, or, if this is not possible, the parents should select a home where they have a spacious yard, that the children may play to their heart's content. On the other hand it cannot be expected that the children can remain in the yard and play all day long if they do not have some kind of amusement. Many games must be provided, and with these as aids, the mother will not have to spend much of her time in looking after the children.

A few of the best games for children are croquet, see-saw, and the "Tag-you're-it" games. Many of these games teach poise of body and accuracy of aim, and develop the spirit of competition among the little people. Quoits is an interesting game and can be played with small wooden rings and a peg driven into the ground, while the system of keeping the schools and every child should learn to swim. The children take the lessons as a pleasure and in many cases it is self taught. For children it is best to give them their first lessons with the swimming bags, which fit under their shoulders like a pair of wings, and minimize the danger. These bags give much aid to the beginner and under the direction of the parent or teacher the child will learn rapidly. Once swimming is taught a child, he will never forget it, although years may pass from one swimming season to another. There is no telling at what time in the child's life his lessons may be useful; thus, the earlier they are taught the art the better it is for their future safety.
