OLD BOILERS IN DEMAND

An ex-Flat Dweller Finds That in the Suburbs They are Prized.

(New York Sun.)

"A great advantage of living in the suburbs," said the ex-flat dweller, "is the chance it affords of picking up old boilers to use for decorative purposes about your ground. In the city you rarely see any of these discarded appurtenances of the kitchen, but no large open space in the suburb is without a few.

"As soon as a holed wears out in the suburban home and becomes a menace it is promptly hauled away to some vacant lot, until someone decides he can make use of it in fixing up his grounds. Of course in the city there is nothing for an old kitchen boiler when it has to leave its place by the kitchen range but the junk shop, but in the country they seem to treat them that way.

"It may surprise some flat dwellers to know that they are prized highly by some suburbanites as gate posts. Stood up on end and painted red they make a very neat entrance to a yard in the opinion of a good many folks who seem to have hit on this idea in my town. If the crop of old boilers is good it is possible, I have found to make a hedge of them.

"Some people, I find, prefer them unpainted, but it strikes me that paint improves them, particularly if the shade harmonizes with the color of the house. One man, whose house I have to pass on my way to the train, has a row of old boilers painted along his home to take the place of a fence.

"Of course they are most popular in the poorer quarters, but even others find use for them, as for instance a man who has found that they make excellent receptacles for flowers. This man picked up two boilers from the nearest vacant lot, cut them open and placed them lengthwise on the ground in his yard. He had filled them with earth and has just put his seeds in.

"When summer comes I expect to envy him. On the whole this use of old boilers is among the greatest surprises of the suburbs."

AMUSEMENTS

KIRK BROWN PLAYS TO CAPACITY HOUSE

Pudd'nhead Wilson Given a Most Artistic Production at the Opera House.

Another crowded house greeted the Kirk Brown Company last evening when they presented Mark Twain's comedy, "Pudd'nhead Wilson," for the first time in St. John. It was an excellent production, marked with all the perfection of detail characteristic of Mr. Brown's offerings. It also gave the company's popular star an excellent opportunity to display his versatility, for in the title role he had a part entirely different from anything he has attempted before. It is a quaint character type of a kindly, lovable man, not over successful in this world's pursuits, rather inclined to frivol and fuss but at the same time endowed with a keen legal mind and a true sense of discernment. The play that Mr. Brown was delighted to see a fair criticism, and the role will take its place among the very best he has presented here. Miss Kathryn Purnell in the role of Wilson's niece had not a great deal to do, but her acting was crisy in keeping with the part. Particular mention should be made of Margie Dow, who made a hit as Roxy, Driscoll's favorite slave. Miss DeWeale was happily cast as Wilson's sister. Mr. Bird played the juvenile role of Chambers, and did well with it. Mr. Crosby was seen as Jim Driscoll, and embraced all the opportunities of the part. Mr. Taylor as York Driscoll and Mr. Charles Savage as Count Lingi added in no small degree to the success of the production.

The scenes as in all plays presented by the Kirk Brown Company, was a feature. This evening David Belasco's and H. C. DeMille's stirring play, "The Wife," will be presented.

OLD ST. JOHN PICTURES

AT THE NICKEL TODAY

Living up to its policy of pure educational entertainment for the young and old of the city, the Nickel is delighting its patrons with a specialty that is of value especially to the younger generation. This specialty is the showing of numerous views of St. John before the fire of '77, some of them dating back to the early days. All are copied from photographs submitted in competition by children who are awarded cash prizes and the explanation of the views is interesting to hear. Last evening, despite the weather, the theatre was crowded, all the time and every item in the bill was enjoyed. The Cromwell and Charles I. picture was of historic worth, the society drama, A Pair of White Gloves, of intense interest, the talking picture, A Jealous Husband, brought laughter and Miss Edwards' song was very pleasing. Today Miss Edwards will sing the new ballad hit, Pansies Bring Thoughts of You. During the high-class motion pictures the orchestra played some magnificent classical numbers.
