M. CLEMENCEAU

"Really, M. Clemenceau never could do any thing in the ordinary way."

Taking this apt remark by M. Veber as a text the New York Herald editorilly says of the recent overthrow of the French ministry:—

"That is the concluding epigram of Pierre Veber's vivid description of the last appearance in the Chamber of M. Clemenceau's Ministry — a description which appears in a special cable despatch to this morning's Herald. M. Veber's remark is singularly appropriate. Even in his manner of leaving office M. Clemenceau is original. To speak of his overthrow is almost an abuse of terms; for everybody, including the opposition and the opposition press, is compelled to admit that the downfall of the cabinet has been brought about not by M. Clemenceau's adversaries but by himself. Usually when a ministerial crisis arises it is because the minister's policy is inacceptable to the parliamentary majority. In the present instance M. Clemenceau's policy is approved by a solid majority in the chamber and has been sanctioned by a long series of votes. In its general lines that policy undoubtedly will be adopted by M. Clemenceau's successor, whoever he may be; for with the present chamber any reactionary policy is impossible of realization. It is manifest, therefore that M. Clemenceau's rtirement is attributable to other than political causes. He has in fact fallen into one of the snares that beset the path of every parliamentarian. He retires in consequence of a tactical error. He retires on a purely technical point which never would have been raised if his unrivalled parliamentary skill had not momentarily failed him. But that slip probably will not prevent history from classing M. Clemenceau among the great statesmen of the present generation — a rank to which his vast political experience, the liberality of his views and the success with which he defended his opinions in parliament and out of it fully entitle him. For foreigners this ministerial crisis again illustrates the smoothness with which the French political system operates. For the forty-third time since the foundation of the republic in 1870 the ministry has been changed without any perceptible effect upon the course of public life. It is merely an interesting news event. The fact is the French system enables the people, through their representatives, to get rid of the head of the government the instant he ceases to satisfy them. In this respect it is superior to most other political regimes — even to our own system which concentrates the real control of the government in the hands of a president, who is a fixture for four years, to say nothing of his chances of re-election. If the president happens to be a Roosevelt there is nothing for the unfortunate people to do but grin and bear with him until the end of his term of office. One must admit that 'they manage these things better in France.'"

OPENING FOR TRADE

That a great opportunity for the extension of Canadian trade in Siberia and Japan is being almost wholly passed over, and that Siberia will soon become America's great rival in furnishing the wheat and flour supply to the East, are two of the firm impressions of Mr. James S. Cartwright, formerly of Toronto. He has returned after an unbroken absence of ten years in Japan. Mr. Cartwright holds an important post in a British oil company, which, with the Standard Oil and native concerns, divide up the business of the Japanese Empire. In an interview with the Toronto News, Mr. Cartwright says:—

"Canadian manufacturers do not seem to be eager for new business in the Orient. There is, I think, but one direct representative of a Canadian house in the whole empire, though the British and American houses are pushing after the trade for all they are worth. British and Canadian enterprise would seem to be lagging as regards Siberia. I am informed that in Vladivostok, the Russioan city which is the port of entry to Siberia, there is not a single British house established, though the opportunities in that rapidly opening country would seem immense. The popular notion of Siberia as a land of perpetual snow and ice is quite misleading. The winter season is no longer than in Manitoba, and no such depth of snow falls as over the west of Canada. Moreover, they have what the interior of the Canadian west must do without—a net work of great rivers to nourish the land and assist communication. Into that new and very fertile country the Russian government is putting hundreds of thousands from the eastern districts, making a new and prosperous land from the surplus peasant population of the older rural districts, and every assistance is afforded by the government to settlers. At Harbin, a name which figured very prominently in the recent war, I saw some of the finest flour mills ever constructed, and, with the supplies on hand it looked as though as many more could be kept running.

"What grade of wheat and flour is produced?"

"Something similar to uor best grades of Manitoba," Mr. Cartwright replied. "But as it can be raised and marketed at a price below our Canadian and American, it will probably drive the latter out."

"Is there no antipathy to Russian goods and Russian enerprises since the war?"

"It is with the Japanese consumer and merchant just as with all others the world over. Dollars count every time, and the anti-Russian feeling doesn't last long when the same Russian can beat the world in the price of his wheat and flour."

Just how slow has been the increase in the consumption of Canadian grain was shown The News by a table of trade figures. In 1903 the entire import of wheat and flour from Canada amounted to $90,000. Four years later they had risen to slightly over $126,000 The United States wheat exporters had no showing of increase whatever. Their total of Japanese trade dropped from five million dollars to a little over two million and a half in four years.

The bill adopted by the bills and by-laws committee relative to the prize ring should be promptly thrown out by the city council. This city does not need any so-called "boxing matches." They tend to degenerate into brutal slugging matches.

An increase in telephone rates is announced to take effect Oct 1st. This will doubtless pave the way for another increase at a later date. There is no competition.

◇ ◇ ◇ ◇

With the federal and provincial governments both studying the question of trade with Cuba there should be some definite result of value to the farmers.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., SCENE OF MURDER

Cambridge, Mass., July 23.—Through the discovery today of the body of Stewart McTavish lying fully clothed on a bed in the Hotel Florence, near the Cambridge court house, with a bullet hole in one eye and one side of his face and head a mass of bruises, the police of this city are confronted with a sordid murder, upon which up to a late hour tonight they had been unable to throw any light. Mrs. Elizabeth Richmond, aged forty-five years, the proprietress of the hotel, who was found apparently under the influence of liquor on the kitchen floor adjoining McTavis' room, was detained as a witness, but a rigid examination by the police failed to bring forth any statement from the woman other than that she denied everything. As Mrs. Richmond appeared in a dazed condition until late tonight, the police were obliged to wait until tomorrow to gain any information from her.

Eight men and two women who were found in the house at the time and who are said to have shown traces of having used liquor during the day, were also detained as witnesses.

A revolver and a bloody axe were found in an empty bedroom, near the room where McTavis was found, but with the exception of blood stains in this room and McTavis' room, none was found elsewhere. McTavis' watch and a large roll of money, which he is said to have had with him when he went to the hotel, are missing.

The body was found by Timothy Clifford, a blacksmith, who lives at the hotel. Wishing to speak to McTavis, Clifford searched throughout the house, finding Mrs. Richmond in a dazed condition on the kitchen floor, and McTavis' body in an adjoining room. He immediately notified the police, who at once detained all the people found in the hotel.

McTavis, who was employed at the State Insane Hospital at East Gardner, started on a three weeks' vacation Tuesday and on Wednesday was to have acted as best man at the wedding of his sister to a man named R. Gillis, of Boston. McTavis, however, failed to appear, and the ceremony was performed without him.

The murdered man was about twenty-five years old and was unmarried. He bore a good reputation among his employers.

Your father's on his way from town,
Way from town,
Way from town,
Your father's on his way from town,
With glad thrills coursing through him;
With eager steps I'll hurry down,
Hurry down,
Hurry down,
And meet him in the lower hall,
And give glad greeting to him.

But you, my darling, must not go,
Must not go,
Must not go,
For you are young and sweet and frail,
Your life must be protected;
He'll be a mass of germs, you know,
Germs, you know,
Germs, you know,
Therefore you must not kiss him till
He has been disinfected.

Dear Jocassidy—In answer to your appeal for the "funniest thing I ever saw," I relate the following:—

A chauffeur was coming down the Newton boulevard at full speed. An old lady with a cane was making her way slowly across the thoroughfare, and when halfway over seemed dazed and uncertain which way to proceed. The Chauffeur had plenty of time to strike her and keep on his way. But did he? No! He came to a full stop, and lifting his cap, said politely: "After you, my good woman."

There ain't much show for chaps like me
To have a steady sweetheart, gee!
I only gets eight dollars per,
An' w'at's dey left to spend on her?

It costs me five for board an' wash,
An' carfares put de grand kibosh
On sixty cents; an' den I blows
A half on movin' picture shows.

I'd like to take her for a stroll
Each evenin' if I had de roll;
But ice cream sodas, at ten cents per
Gee! Wat's dey left to spend on her?

It ain't no sport I wants to be,
Plain citizen's enough for me;
But to go out each night wid her—
Can't do it on eight dollars per!

THE VACATIONIST'S LAMENT.

Last night a letter I received
O'er which I've fretted, sighed and grieved,
And cursed the hour when Adam weaved
His apron.

It was the worst I ever read;
It filled my inmost soul with dread,
And made me wish myself a dead
Red herring.

It cast me from the topmost heights
Of rest and ease and pleasant sights,
And happy days and dreamless nights,
To Hades.

O, tell me where beneath the sun
Can a poor, tortured fellow run
To find a refuge from that dun—
His tailor?

The government dredge Cape Breton has has been taken to Cheticamp, N. S., where she will be engaged for the next several weeks, in dredging the harbor and docks there. After completing the work at Cheticamp the dredge will be removed to Ingonish where there is considerable work to be done in deepening the harbor approaches. The work at the latter place will probably complete the season's work for the dredge.

INDIAN STUDENT FOUND GUILTY ON MURDER CHARGE

London, July 23.—Madalarl Dhinagari, the Indian student who on the night of July 1 shot and killed Lieut.-Colonel Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Cawas Lalcara, was today found guilty and sentenced to death at the conclusion of a trial of less than an hour's duration in the old Bailey police court. During the recital of the occurrence in the Imperial Institute on the night of the tragedy, the prisoner sat in the dock listening unconcernedly and only once broke his silence by saying, "Whatever I did was an act of patriotism."

At the close of the evidence and in reply to the query if he wished to question any of the witnesses, Madalarl said no, adding that he wished only that the statement in justification of his act which he made in the police court of July 10, should be read. This was done and the verdict of guilty and sentence to death followed in a few seconds.

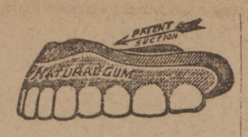

As the lord chief justice concluded in pronouncing sentence, the prisoner drew himself up in military style and saluted. He said: "I thank you, my lord. I am proud to have the honor of laying down my humble life for my country. Your sentence of death is perfectly illegal. You are all powerful and can do what you like, but remember we will have the power some day. That's all I have to say."

FAVOR PORT NELSON FOR HUDSON BAY TERMINUS

Winnipeg, July 23—(Special)—That Port Nelson would be a better terminus for Hudson Bay railway than Fort Churchill is the report of a party of surveyors who have just returned from running try lines for the railway. Their opinion is that a road to Port Nelson would be shorter, more direct and cheaper to build than one to Fort Churchill, while navigation opens earlier than at the more northern port. Harbor facilities at Nelson, they say, are good.

The schooner Nina Blanche, recently purchased by Richard and Alfred Cline, to be used as a pilot boat, will make her trial trip today or early next week. The commissioners have passed inspection on her and all is satisfactory. She will be No. 3.

SCARCITY OF LIVE HOGS AND BECOMING SCARCER

Farmers Have Been Neglecting a Very Important Brench of Their Vocation—Provisions, as a Result, Are Dearer.

(Toronto News.)

Not only is pork and bacon dearer than it ever was before in the city of Toronto, but it looks as if it might even be dearer yet. This is owing to the great scarcity of live hogs, hog-raising having been to a here, but almost throughout the while civ- Canada during the last year.

Live hogs are now very scarce, not only here, but almost throughout the whole civilized world. In the United States there has been an almost steady decrease of receipts of live hogs at the big packing centres, where all hogs for commercial trade go, and where accurate account can be kept of them. Last week the total receipts of live hogs at the leading eleven centres were 98,000 less than for the previous week, and 118,000 head less than for the same week of last year. The total receipts of hogs at these leading centres for the year 1909, up to last week, was 13,982,000 hogs, and for the same date of last year the number was 16,434,000 hogs.

In Denmark, where so much of the bacon for the British market comes from, the weekly killings of live hogs have for years averaged about 36,000, but for the past few weeks the weekly killings have only footed up to about 30,000.

At the present time there is probably no other country which feels the shortage of live hogs more than Canada. In allowing the hog-raising industry to decline, Ontario farmers have lost one valuable means of turning a great deal that is now going to waste into profit.

In speaking of the dairy conditions in Ontario recently, a Dominion government officer of the Dairy Department stated that it was to be regretted that "at many factories the whey was allowed to run this season into the drains, because the patrons had not hogs to feed it to.

The whey from cheese factories and skim milk and buttermilk from factories have always formed a large share of the feed upon which the live hogs of Ontario were fed during the summertime, and it is thus being wasted, owing to the farmers' neglect to keep on hand a sufficient number of hogs.

Now, when hogs are very scarce and very dear, it is a matter of deep regret with many farmers that they have allowed such an important end of farming operations to go by default.

The rarity and elusiveness of the hog at the present time is not only a source of deep regret to the farmer, but of annoyance to the packer, who cannot find the remedy he once did, of importing outside hogs to fill market orders, so easily, as hogs are scarce everywhere.

Nor has the consumer a remedy at hand for his consolation either. With other meats quoted at present high prices, with fruits and vegetables still too scarce to be an economically available substitute for the festive bacon and the toothsome ham, there is little recourse to be had, and demand is good enough to make the packer sad. It is a situation which is being duplication everywhere this upward trend of the prices of provisions of all kinds.
