

WILCOX BROS.

New Fall and Winter Goods at Big Sacrifice for Saturday and Monday Sales

CLOAK DEPARTMENT.

Ladies' Suits and Coats at Prices That Cannot Be Beat.

Ladies' Ready-made Suits, latest fashionable cut, from $11.00 to $35.00
Ladies' Suits to Order (we find everything).....$14.00 to $45.00
Ladies' Ready-made Coats.....5.00 to 35.00
Ladies' Coats to Order.....10.00 to 45.00
Ladies' Silk Raincoats, rubber lined.....8.50 to 17.00
Ladies' Skirts, all colors and styles.....1.98 to 12.00
Ladies' Dressing Jackets......75 to 1.50
Ladies' Tea Gowns, full length, all colors.....$1.75 to $14.00

Do Not Forget Our Millinery Dept., Where You Will Find Everything That is Newest in Headwear—Prices to Suit All.

GROUND FLOOR.

300 Ladies' Wrappers, worth $2.00 to clear at.....$1.48
100 Ladies' Wrappers, worth $1.50, to clear at.....1.10
200 Ladies' Wrappers, worth $1.25, to clear at......98
150 Ladies' Shaker Night Gowns, worth $1.00, to clear at......75
175 Ladies' Shaker Night Gowns, all colors, worth $1.50, to clear at.....1.10
75 Ladies' Night Gowns, all colors, worth $2.00, to clear at.....1.50
200 Children's Dresses, from......75c to 4.50
Children's Night Gowns, from......35c to .75
Children's Underskirts, from......35c to 1.00
100 Ladies' Umbrellas, worth $1.10, to clear at......85
75 Ladies' Umbrellas, worth $1.25, to clear at......98
50 Ladies' Umbrellas, worth $1.75, to clear at.....1.25
Ladies' All-Wool Norfolk Coats from.....$2.25 to 3.50
Ladies' All-Wool Golf Coats, worth $2.25, for.....1.75
Ladies' All-Wool Golf Coats, worth $1.75 for.....1.25
Ladies' All-Wool Cashmere Hose, worth 50c, for......38
Ladies' All-Wool Cashmere Hose, worth 35c, for......25
Ladies' All-Wool Cashmere Hose, worth 25c, for......19
Boys' and Girls' All-Wool Cashmere Hose, worth 50c, for......35

Boys' and Girls' All-Wool Cashmere Hose, worth 35c, for.....25
Boys' and Girls' All-Wool Cashmere Hose, worth 25c, for.....19

SPECIAL SALE OF FASHIONABLE FURS FOR TEN DAYS.

$100.00 Mink Stoles, sale price.....$75.00
75.00 Mink Stoles, sale price.....55.00
55.00 Mink Stoles, sale price.....38.00
35.00 Mink Stoles, sale price.....29.00
Mink Muffs from.....$35.00 to 60.00
Mink Marmott Muffs from.....$5.00 to 15.00
Sable Muffs from.....$8.00 to 16.00
Mink Marmott Stoles from.....$6.50 to 28.00
Black Martin Stoles from.....$8.50 to 30.00

ALL MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES. A BIG DISCOUNT IN ALL FURS DURING THIS SALE.

IN SHOE DEPARTMENT.

Men's $6.00 Fall and Winter Boots.....$4.98
Men's 5.50 Fall and Winter Boots.....4.48
Men's 5.00 Fall and Winter Boots.....3.98
Men's 5.50 Dr. Brandon's Cushion Soles.....4.48
Men's 5.00 Dr. Brandon's Waterproof Soles.....3.98
150 Pairs Men's $5.00 Tan, Patent and Velour Oxfords.....2.98
Ladies' $2.50 Fall and Winter Boots.....1.48
Ladies' 4.00 Fall and Winter Boots.....2.98
Ladies' 4.00 Patent Bals.....2.98
Ladies' 4.50 Tan Bals, Sewed Tops.....3.48
Ladies' 3.00 Tan Bals.....1.98
Girls' and Boys' School Boots.....$1.23, $1.48 and $1.98
Infants' Shoes.....29c, 48c, 79c and 98c.

IN HAT DEPARTMENT.

Men's $2.50 "Kennore" Hard Hat.....$1.98
Men's 2.50 "Wilson" Hard Hat.....1.69
Men's 2.50 Soft Hats in all the latest shapes.....1.48

50 Dozen Men's Pockets Hats......98
Boys' Skull Caps in Navy, Black, Brown and Red.....19c

See the "KING HAT" in All the Leading Shapes and Colors.

ALL CAPS AT REDUCED PRICES.

IN CLOTHING DEPARTMENT.

Men's 35c Neckties, sale price.....19c
Men's 35c Police Braces, sale price.....19c
Men's 35c Fancy Braces, sale price.....19c
Men's $1.35 Dent's Gloves, sale price.....98c
Men's 35c Black Cashmere Hose, sale price.....19c
Men's 25c Handkerchiefs.....2 for 25c
Men's $1.50 Negligee Shirts, sale price.....98c
Men's $1.00 Negligee Shirts, sale price.....69c
Men's 75c Negligee Shirts, sale price.....48c
Eureka Underwear, pure wool, guaranteed unshrinkable. Men's $1.25 Shirts, sale price.....98c
Men's $1.00 Hewson Brand Shirts and Drawers, pure wool, sale price.....98c each
50 Dozen Umbrellas, Self-opening, double Ribbed, worth $1.25, sale price.....69c
Men's $15.00 Black Clay Suits, double or single breasted, sale price.....$12.00
Men's $15.00 Blue Clay Suits, double or single breasted, sale price.....$12.00
Men's $18.00 Black Cheviot Suits, sale price.....$14.00
Men's $15.00 Scotch Tweed Suits, sale price.....$11.98
Men's $12.00 Scotch Tweed Suits, sale price.....$8.50
Men's $14.00 Scotch Tweed Suits, sale price.....$9.98
Men's $10.00 Canadian Tweed Suits, sale price.....$7.48
Men's Overcoats, long and short cuts, in all fashionable shades.

OUR STORES WILL BE OPEN EVENINGS DURING THE MONTHS OF OCTOBER, NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER.

NO PULP WOOD EXPORT DUTY IN QUEBEC

Premier Says Government Will Prohibit Exports of Unmanufactured Lumber

The report that the Quebec government had decided to impose an export duty on all raw pulp wood exported to the United States is denied by Premier Gouin. The latter said he wished it to be specifically announced that his announcement at St. Johns recently did not mention any export duty and that it was not the intention of the government to propose any such duty.

"That," he said, "can only be done by the federal government in so far as timber land generally is concerned. We have jurisdiction only over timber lands included in the crown lands and we do not intend to impose any export duty. We do intend, however, to prohibit the exportation of unmanufactured timber from this province. It is our intention to follow the example of the Ontario government in this respect, and make such prohibition a condition of all future licenses."

Conclusive proof that this and not an export duty, is the government's decision is provided today in an advertisement announcing that the crown lands minister will receive tenders for permission to cut timber on certain lands along the line of the national transcontinental railway. A condition of such permits is announced as follows: "All timber to be manufactured in Canada."

It was originally Sir Lomer Gouin's intention to wait until next year, when the period guaranteed to present license holders by his predecessor, Premier Parent, would have elapsed, but in view of strong representations, he has decided to put the prohibitory clause into force at once.

HIGHER PAPER DUTY ASKED

Washington, Sept. 30.—Domestic paper interests have filed a lengthy brief with the treasury department on the subject of the rate of tariff duty to be levied on print paper imported from Canada. They want the rates raised on the ground that the present estimate of the wood pulp required for the production of a ton of print is, according to them, too small. In support of this view they submit an elaborate argument. The formula now used by the treasury was taken from the report of the Mann Committee which investigated the cost of production of print paper and the duty thereon.

CAPTAIN GOING BLIND AT SEA

Skipper Leaves Bark After Getting $50,000 Worth of Sperm Oil

Boston, Sept. 29.—Having sailed over the deserts parts of the South Atlantic and Indian oceans for seventeen months, gathering $50,000 worth of sperm oil, until he felt himself gradually growing blind, Capt. B. A. Higgins, of the New Bedford whaling bark Wanderer, returned aboard the Azores yesterday. He will undergo an operation here.

Captain Higgins and his crew of thirty-eight men have been remarkably successful. More than 2200 barrels of the precious catch are safely in the holds of the big bark now at the Azores, and as soon as a skipper can be sent out to her, she will come back to civilization.

It was a story replete with romance and not unminged with pathos that the skipper related as the liner was steaming up the harbor from quarantine yesterday.

"My eyes were going bad gradually," he said, "until two months ago, I had to give up writing entirely. We were nine long months without touching anywhere between St. Helena and the Tristan islands. And in that time we scarcely sighted a single sail. But I knew the best thing I could do was to get someone to obtain treatment for my eyes. So I shaped my course for Ponta Delgada, Azores, and came here as quickly as I could."

"Yes, this catch of ours in the Wanderer knocks all other catches his," he said. "Why, fifteen years ago, if I had come home with 1,000 barrels they would have greeted me with cheers. But the secret of it all, I guess, was that we kept moving and didn't stop at all. We sailed away from New Bedford April 23, 1903."

Capt. Higgins lives in Provincetown.

LONDON PLANS

BIG AUTO SHOW

London, Sept. 28.—The International Automobile Show, to be held by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders at Olympia, in November, is expected to attract more than ordinary attention, for the reason that this year no international exhibition will be held in Paris.

In France automobile makers came to the conclusion last year that the expense entailed on individual firms by holding a show every year was not warranted by the advantages directly traceable thereto. Moreover, it was urged that the automobile, both in construction and design, had arrived at a stage when an annual exhibition was no longer essential to the progress of the industry.

Similar views were held at the time by many manufacturers in England, but as a result of an exhaustive discussion of the question the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders decided to continue the practice of holding an international exhibition each year.

One result of the absence of competition from the Paris Salon is that the applications for space at Olympia from leading makers in France are more numerous than usual, and in a less degree this also applies to Belgium, Germany and Italy, as well as to America. The whole of the space available has been allotted to nearly three hundred exhibitors.

BABY'S HAIR.

Many mothers desire the hair of their children to be curly and try all sorts of ways to accomplish this. One of the best is to brush the hair the wrong way.

WHITNEY TELLS THE TIMES BOTH COOK AND PEARY REACHED THE POLE

(Continued from page 1.)

"That question," said Mr. Whitney, "I must decline to answer." He added that he had issued a statement to the Associated Press and it contained all that he could give the press. With a good bye word Mr. Whitney then boarded his car for home.

Issues Statement

His statement to the Associated Press is as follows:—

New York, Sept. 29.—The following dispatch has been received by the Associated Press from Harry Whitney, the New Haven hunter, who returned to St. John's (Nfld.) yesterday by the schooner Jeanie from Greenland and is on his way home:

"Stevensville Crossing (Nfld.), Sept. 29. "So many questions are being asked me by different papers that I desire to make the following statement through the Associated Press:—

"My reasons for not going back to Etah after Dr. Cook's things were that the engine in the Jeanie, one of the smallest boats that ever went to the north Arctic, was not working satisfactorily, and we were depending partly on sails, which later we had to do entirely. There was no reason why the Jeanie could not have gone back, but not knowing that Dr. Cook's things left with me were of such importance they have since turned out to be, I did not return."

"In addition, I had promised the Eskimos who were with me after musk oxen in Ellsmere Land certain things which I expected on the ship coming for me, but they were not aboard the Jeanie and I did not want to return and disappoint the men. Another reason was that I wanted to prolong my hunting trip, which I was able to do, by not going back, but by cutting across Smith Sound from North Star Bay and following the edge of the ice south."

"I do not believe that either Dr. Cook or Commander Peary, if placed in my position, would have done any differently than I did, nor would they, having started south for civilization, have turned back."

"I had never seen Dr. Cook until I met him in the Arctic. He told me he had been to the North Pole, and I was pledged not to reveal this fact to Commander Peary, but I could say that he had gone farther north than Peary in 1906."

"Commander Peary, to my knowledge, knew absolutely nothing about what had been left with me by Dr. Cook, except that I mentioned instruments, clothes and furs and also a norwalg horn. Dr. Cook's belongings left in my charge were placed in boxes, which were nailed up. Then I saw the Eskimos cover them with rocks."

"No one could have been kinder or shown me more consideration than Commander Peary while I was on the Roosevelt, and he said he would be very glad to have me remain on board and return with him instead of joining the Jeanie."

"HARRY WHITNEY."

Has Lost 40 Pounds

Mr. Whitney is a man of about thirty-two years, tall, of ruddy complexion, a clear, concise talker, who speaks to the point rapidly and smoothly. He was much more rugged when he left for the north in the summer of 1903 as he has lost forty pounds between that time and his return to civilization. He brings many trophies of his hunt in the far north. He did not bring the sledge which Dr. Cook presented him, the one, the explorer said, with which he had reached the pole.

Mr. Whitney, said, was now at Etah. Mr. Whitney intends going direct to his home in New Haven. He will likely present his information to the tribunal which will settle the polar controversy, and has plans thereafter are not known.

MINISTERS SCORED BY A MINISTER

Some Too Sanctimonious, He Says; Some the Reverse—Gambling Evil Condemned

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"The Minister as a Citizen," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

MINISTERS SCORED BY A MINISTER

Some Too Sanctimonious, He Says; Some the Reverse—Gambling Evil Condemned

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "One has no interest in mundane affairs and does not know the ministers of the crown in the old country in his own province or in the Dominion. He neither knows nor cares who are the aldermen of his city or the councillors in his town. He does not know who are the trustees of the school, his children attend, and does not know half the members of his congregation by sight. In fact he does not know whether he is living in this earth or careering through space on some planet. His interest is wholly spiritual. When he goes on his holidays and passes through beautiful scenery, he never lifts his eyes from Calvin's institutes. Wherever this type of thought has prevailed and separated the church from all temporal interests she has become petrified and fossilized an archaeological curiosity interesting only to the students of antiquity."

"There are two extreme positions in connection with the ministry," said the Rev. James Ross, D. D., in a paper on "The Minister as a Citizen," which was read at the post-graduate conference in Knox College, Toronto, this week, by the Rev. Prof. Ballantyne, D. D. "