A RUBBER HAT COVER INSTEAD OF AN UMBRELLA.

The up-to-date woman, when she is caught in a sudden downpour, does not hasten to the nearest shop to invest in an ambrella, or telephone for a cab. She takes from her handbag a little folded arrangement of rubberized silk—scarcely more bulky than a pocket handkerchief Unfolded, the scrap of silk reveals itself to be a shapely cover which clasps to the edge of her hat brim all around, completely covering plumes or flower trimmings. The hat cover, in place, looks really like a puffed, crushed crown of silk and it is not at all bulky or cumbersome in appearance.

Schooner J. L. Nelson sailed from Halifax for Sherbrooke to complete her cargo of laths for New York.

The schooner Nina Blanche arrived Saturday morning from Chance Harbor (N. S.)

AMUSEMENTS

OUT IN IDAHO

The attraction at the Opera House tonight and Tuesday is Frederick N. Brush's production of "Out In Idaho." If you have ever seen "Out In Idaho," the above notice will be sufficient; you will want to go again. A country in the making is always more interesting than one where the people have settled into ruts; and that is just what western people never did. "Out In Idaho" is above all things natural. The characters are alive and do just what you or I would do were we placed in the same position. The humor is irresistable because of its absolute seriousness and the interest is unbounded because of its naturalness. One really forgets that he is watching a play, he imagines that he has been wafted back by some magic, to the mystical golden age that Bret Harte wrote about and Mark Twain immortalized. One glimpse at the cast will be sufficient to insure any person however skeptical, of an evening of unalloyed pleasure. The cast is headed by that bright little star of the west, Miss Dorothy Kurtis who portrays the role of "Bess Carson."

THE NICKEL TODAY

The Nickel, which picture theatre seems to possess a happy faculty of varying its bill frequently to suit all tastes, will today offer a most amusing comedy in "Dime Novel Dan," the storiette of a Western Union messenger boy who mixed Jesse James literature with his daily work. The other pictures are: "A False Accusation," or the drama of a forlorn entertainer and his invalid child, and "The Mexican's Gratitude," one of the western type of films with exciting horse riding and stirring climaxes. Miss Jennie Evans, whose singing grows more acceptable each day, will have another picture-ballad, and the Castellucchi Trio of Italian instrumentalists will enter upon their second week with an entire change of programme. No specialty act yet presented at the Nickel, has created more favorable comment than these clever sons of sunny Italy have aroused, and with such special contributions as Anvil chorus from "Il Trovatore," Sextette from "Lucia di Lammermoor," besides popular airs and "The Maple Leaf Forever," as a finale. They should increase their great popularity.

AT THE STAR

One of the most refined and melodious vocalists in picture house work in Canada today is Al. Weston, "the Minstrel boy," who makes his bow to Star Theatre patrons tonight in the homestead ballad, "Just What The Good Book Taught." Mr. Weston has had years of experience with the best minstrel troupes on the road in which aggregations he did all the leading ballad roles. Mr. Weston's visit at the Star places this clean, new theatre still another step forward. Five brand new pictures. Orchestra Tuesday night.

A PARENTAL SCHOOL TO BE THE OUTCOME

Dr. H. S. Bridges, superintendent of city schools, speaking of the action of Judge Forbes in dealing with the incorrigible truants before him on Saturday, remarked that he hoped the matter might have a deterrent effect on others. At the same time he had no doubt that a parental school would ultimately have to be established. It had been the experience of all cities where the compulsory school law had been enforced that such institutions were necessary.

In this city so far, he continued, there had been a certain element among the school children who did not seem to appreciate the power that lay behind the law. Now, however, it had been made clear to them that if they continued to attempt to play truant they might be deprived of their liberty for a time. Everything possible had been done both by Truant Officer McMann, by himself and, in many cases, by the parents, to induce the boys to attend school, but they had only laughed at these well meant endeavors.

IT WAS TOO LATE

The crosstown car was cantering along at a moderate pace, with its 21 passengers wondering if clothespins would be included in the new tariff schedule, when a little German band on a street corner struck up a lively air, and at the same time a young man at the front of the car rose up and made a dash for the rear door. He had gone half the length of the car when he stumbled over the feet of an old man and came down in a sprawl. The car was at once all excitement.

Trying to pick my pocket, was you?" shouted the old man as he grabbed for the fallen.

"He's running from the police!" shouted two or three others.

"Here! What's this?" demanded the conductor, as he entered and laid hand on the victim.

"Let me go! Let me go!"

"But I want to know who you are and what you've been up to."

That's right. Make him explain!" chorused the passengers.

"If you don,t, I,ll call an officer," threatened the conductor.

"It is too late to see him now," replied the young man, as he dropped into a seat. "Yes, I'll explain. That band was playing in honor of Teddy McGraw, and I wanted to get on and swing my hat for him."

"And who is Teddy McGraw?" blankly asked the conductor.

"You don't know him? You don't know Teddy McGraw? Man man! But have you gone back to the eighteenth century! Teddy McGraw is the new twirler for the Giants this season, and the greatest man in the United States.

Dress Hints

A beautiful silk dressing jacket for summer wear can be fashioned of two widths of silk over the shoulders and falling down the arms below the elbows. The strips are separated at the neck, but come almost together at the bust, where they are tied with a loop of silk cord. A bit of braiding, or a fancy stitch, worked with heavy silk floss, joins the backs of the silk strips. Over the shoulders there is a two or three-inch strip of plain silk, ornamented with fancy stitching; this strip runs down the front and across the sides and bottom, a silk fringe finishing the ends of the two widths.

To look well dressed in summer is not so much a question of exquisite materials and expensive dressmaking as it is of neatness and thorough cleanliness of the wearing apparel. Even plain, simple wash dresses, if thoroughly washed and starched to just the right degree of stiffness, will produce surprising effects, even though placed in contrast to expensive waists and gowns that are not scrupulously neat and pressed.

Punishing the Child

No factor is of more importance in the bringing up of a child than the method of punishment employed. Every child differs in nature at some particular point in character. This precludes the possibility of a set code or regulations for punishing children, and makes it necessary for each mother to decide the individual case from what she knows of the character of her own child. All should observe, however, one fixed rule, and that is—never punish when reasoning will bring about the same results. Needless correction blunts the sensitiveness of every child and creates a hardness of character that no mother wishes her child to possess.

On general principles it is better to try reasoning before punishing. If the child commits the same offense a second time after being reasoned with, then punishment should be resorted to. The punishment of other days—the hard brutal slap and similar things—are gone. There are many ways to make a child understaind he or she has done wrong, and the principal method is to deprive him or her, of some anticipated pleasure, such as the attending of a circus, a church sociable or at this season of the year, no greater hardship or punishment could devolve upon a boy than the refusal to allow him to join the baseball gang on the adjacent lot.

A Cure for Gossip

That women, despite their frantic entrance into the political field, have not lost sight of the little things of life is the opinion of a minister in New York state, who insists that many of them still continue to gossip. The minister is the Rev. Henry McIlray, of Little Falls, and he comes forward with a means of curing those whose greatest pleasure in life consists in rip-sawing their neighbors. Every Thursday evening he invites the women of his town to meet together at the parsonage and discuss general topics. In this way he wishes to educate women into seeing how much more entertaining the discussion of such topics is. But it would appear that the women have begun pointing fingers at each other—each declaring that the other one is the particular gossip for whom the pastor's method is intended. Of course, the pastor, like a wise man, is not taking sides, but he does say:

"The only remedy for infamous gossip would be to corral the gossipers, investigate the condition of their brains, and distribute them on appropriate corridors in institutions for the mentally weak."

THE "PI" LINE

When you start to read a story,
And the energies you bend
In a tense and rapt attention
To the interesting end,
Don't it jar you, don't it thrill you
With a rare ecstatic bliss,
When there's sandwiched in the story
A line
like
this:

Jack's knife glittered and described a semicircle in the air, his arm shot down radwhite vbgkp zyfllflflfffl cmfwypetaoi.

It's a "pi" line of the printer,
Which happens to the best,
And no "make-up" man has ever
Yet been found to stand the test,
For in spite of all endeavors,
Sometimes they are bound to miss,
And an interesting story's
Spoiled

BEAUTIFUL PICTURES

Among the beautiful pictures,
That hang on Memorys' wall,
Is one of a dim old forest,
That seemeth best of all;
Not for its gnarled oaks olden,
Dark with the mistletoe,
Not for the violets golden
That sprinkle the vale below.

Not for the milk-white lilies
That lean from the fragrant ledge,
Coquetting all day with the sunbeams,
And stealing their golden edge;
Not for the vines on the upland,
Where the bright red berires rest;
Nor the pink, nor the pale, sweet cowslip,
It seemeth to me the best.

I once had a little brother
With eyes that were dark and deep,
In the lap of that old dim forest
He lieth in peace asleep;
Light as the down of the thistle,
Free as the winds that blow,
We roved there the beautiful summers,
The summers of long ago.

But his feet on the hills grew weary,
And one of the autumn eves
I made for my little brother
A bed of autumn leaves,
Sweetly his pale arms folded
My neck in a meek embrace
As the light of immortal beauty
Silently covered his face.

And when the arrows of sunset
Lodged in the tree-tops bright
He fell, in his saint-like beauty,
Asleep by the gates of light.
Therefore, of all the pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,
The one of the dim old forest
Seemeth the best of all.

—Alice Carey.
