THE VICTORY OF FAITH.

A True Incident.

It was an Easter morning
In a Tyrol valley sweet,
In a valley where the village
Seems to nestle at the feet
Of the giant lordly mountains,
That above it firmly stand
Like the sentinel protectors
Of the noble Switzer's land.

On that glorious Easter morning
Every heart was filled with woe,
For about them closely gathered
On the hill-top stood the foe;
On the hill-top thirty thousand
Of the bravest men of France
Waited there to take the village
At the order of advance.

Said the Switzers to each other,
"'Tis the day our Saviour rose,
He whose arm alone can save us
From the vengeance of our foes;
We are few against their thousands,
Nor can we a battle gain,
Therefore to attempt to meet them
Were as futile as 'tis vain.

"Let the bells be rung for service,
And let every man and maid
Go to meet the Lord of Glory
In the robe of peace arrayed;
Tho' to fight cannot avail us,
Yet our prayers shall win the day—
To the churches, oh ye people!
And to God for succor pray."

Pealed the bells in joyful cadence
On the sunny morning air,
Swiftly, silently the people
Gathered to the house of prayer:
Man and matron, youth and maiden,
Arms of warfare laid as de,
Thronged the streets and in God's temple
Prayed for succor side by side.

As the church bells' joyful pealing
Sounded o'er the mountains near,
Suddenly the mighty army
Of the French was filled with fear;
As they saw the village people
Clothed in holiday array,
Thoughts of victory o'er them swiftly
Changed to feelings of dismay.

"See! Some friend has brought deliverance,
And this Easter morning bright
They are thanking God for succor—
Sent in silence of the night.
All in vain we hoped to conquer—
Let us fly! They may attack,
And defeat instead of victory
Follow hard upon our track."

When the Swiss, with hearts all reverent
From the presence of the Lord,
Forth into the beauteous sunshine
Of the Easter day outpoured,
All around them stood the mountains,
Bare and stately in noon light,
For Jehovah's power had conquered
In the strange and solemn fight.

WHAT TO CARRY ON A BICYCLE WHEN TOURING.

[From Harper's Round Table.]

There is a well-known system for carrying baggage on a walking tour which is eminently suited to bicyclists; this is to have two pieces of baggage. The first is a large valise or small trunk, containing clothing of all kinds needed for an ordinary two weeks' trip by rail, besides toilet articles, and so on. The materials for the other is composed of a similar set of toilet articles, and one or at most two sets of underclothing, besides an extra pair of shoes or slippers—moccasins pack easily and are very serviceable. This last is packed in a leather case set into the diamond frame of the wheel, or into a knapsack carried on the shoulders. If the diamond-shaped portmanteau is properly made it is better. Luggage seems lighter on the wheel than on your back.

The trouble with the average portmanteau is that it is too thick, making it necessary for the wheelman to straddle it instead of giving him the free use of his limbs to press up and down on the pedals perpendicularly. If you will take the trouble to have this portmanteau made to order and carefully measured, so that it will not come outside a line drawn on either side of the bicycle from the sides of the saddle to the inside of each pedal when at its lowest point in a revolution, you will find no trouble with it. This, however, necessitates its being narrower at the top than at the bottom. On arriving at a hotel for the night, it is unstrapped from the wheel and taken up to your room. Then after your bath there is a change of clothing, the slippers, the toilet articles in a little case by themselves, and your repair kit, which may be wanted in the evening for some little repairs on the wheel. The portmanteau will always be full, so take only what is absolutely necessary, otherwise you will find that some important thing has been left behind and a useless appendage brought only to be thrown away in disgust. Always carry soap and a towel. They are sometimes hard to find and oftener so bad that one goes dirty rather than use them.

ENGLISH CHARACTER.

The Bishop of Peterborough, Eng., has recently been giving an interesting lecture at Oxford — the "Romanes" lecture—choosing for his subject the English character. He believed national character to be "the abiding product of a nation's past," and more important than its institutions, which, indeed, derive from that character their vitality. Empire, riches, even literature and science, may come to an end if the national character fails in power to keep what it has acquired, as happened, it may be remarked, though Dr. Creighton did not, certainly to the Athenian and possibly to the Roman, though the latter may have perished from slaughter rather than decay. The English character was formed first of all by segregation, England displaying very early the instinct to carry on a separate life divorced from the general life of the Continent. It is true she showed a desire to expand on the continent rather than within the islands, where she slowly absorbed Wales, waited for Scotland, and neglected Ireland, but though she borrowed and expanded continental themes she refused to submit to abstract ideas. The consequence is that the English are hardly understood, the ignorance being deepened by the fact that they have never suffered the misfortunes which have bitten into foreigners "a trace of something fantastic, fanatical, or unreasonable."

A STRAWBERRY LUNCHEON.

The invitations to this dainty luncheon should be written on pale pink cards and give the cheering information that, wind and weather permitting, the luncheon would be served out of doors, whilst otherwise it would be served in the dining room. The weather in our climate is so little to be counted upon that the wise hostess is she who can make a lawn party successful in the drawing room, or a picnic charming and sylvan when transferred to the library. To accomplish this, let her decorate her house with sweet smelling branches and boughs and have flowers everywhere; then if the day of her fete dawns wet and grey she may arrange her dainty tables within doors, shut out the rain and in the evening light her rooms with the lanterns destined for her outdoor party.

The table should be round, that most completely sociable of all forms. In the place of honor, upon a centrepiece embroidered in silver, and upon the snowiest of cloths, should stand a strawberry basket, enamelled with silver, and fitted with a tin or glass in which to arrange roses, maidenhair ferns, and feathery asparagus. At the four corners of the centrepiece should stand four small strawberry baskets, enamelled in pink to correspond with the roses. Tiny silver bonbon dishes may be filled with crystallized ferns, tied with pale pink ribbon. The menu holders should be Watteau shepherdess figures dressed in pink and silver; the menu should be written on the scroll of ribbon that each holds. The ices should be in the form of strawberries, with leaves of pistachio ice cream. The entire menu we give below:—

Jellied veal and tongue.
Cream biscuits. Cheese straws.
Strawberry omelet.
Strawberry tart. Love's wells.
Jellied strawberries.
Iced strawberry soufflee.
Strawberry ices.
Iced coffee.

A SUMMER DANCE DRESS.

History repeats itself in the dance dresses worn this summer. The draping of the overskirt, with bunches of flowers, is a style that flourished as early in the century as 1830. It was pretty then, and is attractive now, as the picture shows. This gown is of the shell-pink, with heart-shaped bodice. The sleeves are mere puffs of silk and lace alternating, and producing a singularly long effect, to neutralize the immense bouffant spread. The front of the bodice is mousseline de soie. A sash of broad green silk slopes from the left shoulder to the waist-line, where it goes around in a girdle, as a finish for the end of the bodice. At each shoulder there is a full knot of the green silk, fashioned like a four-leaved clover, which is the newest conceit in bows. As a balance to the green sash there is a spray of lilies-of-the-valley, with their leaves, running from the right shoulder across the bodice to the waist.

The skirt is full, in accordance with the prevailing mode. To relieve the heaviness that might be suggested by the draped overskirt, there are four rows of lace matching that on the sleeves around the bottom of the main skirt. There is more interest in the overskirt now than any other detail of dress. Some women object to them, and declare that they will never be seen in such an old-fashioned thing, but others who see how distinguished a gown can be made with the over skirt, as in the case under consideration, wisely resolve that the taste of their grandmothers was not bad in many respects. The distinguishing characteristic of this gown is the mass of flowers that break out into bouquets in different parts of it. For the summer hotel "hop" it is as charming a creation as has come from Paris this season.

The flowers worn in the hair, twisted around the soft coil of the tresses, are the same as those worn in the gown, while the loose bunch, tied with shell-pink ribbon to match the gown, are mainly lilies-of-the-valley, with their leaves, and pink sweet peas.

KOOTENAY.

RHEUMATISM—SWORN STATEMENT.

County of Wentworth, }
To Wit: }

I, James Dillworth, of the City of Hamilton, in the County of Wentworth, and Province of Ontario, ironworker, do solemnly declare:

1. I live at 374 Bay street north, in the City of Hamilton.

2. About three years ago I was attacked with Sciatica and Rheumatism, which was intensely painful, and most of the time since then I have been unable to work, owing to such Rheumatism, and during the last year I have been unable to do any work whatever.

3. The Rheumatism was in my shoulders, back, hips, legs and feet. I was confined to my bed with the disease for four months, from the 7th May, 1894.

4. On the 10th of April, 1895, Mr. S. S Ryckman, M. P., gave me some medicine, Kootenay Cure, to cure such Rheumatism, and I have taken about two and a half bottles.

5. Before Mr. Ryckman gave me such medicine I could hardly walk at all, and last Monday, the 6th May, 1895, I started to work at lifting iron in the Ontario Rolling Mills, and I am now able to work without any trouble.

6 The Rheumatism has now completely left, with the exception of a slight soreness occasionally in the bottom of my feet, and such soreness is gradually disappearing

7. During such period of three years I doctored with three different doctors, and have tried all kinds of patent medicines, and without any beneficial effect whatever.

8. My health has continued improved since I started taking this medicine, and I cannot praise too highly the splendid curative properties of this medicine.

And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing it to be true, etc.

JAMES DILLWORTH

Declared before me at the City of Hamilton, County of Wentworth, this 11th day of May, 1895.

FRANCIS FITZGERALD.

A Notary Public in and for the Province of Ontario.

BOSTON, July 10th, 1895.

Mr S. S Ryckman, Hamilton:

Dear Sir —I have no hesitation in recommending Kootenay Cure as a great medical discovery and a first-class medicine for Rheumatism, Scrofula, Eczema or any Blood Disorder, as after several other medicines failed to give any relief to my brother, who was suffering from a very severe attack of Rheumatism, your medicine gave him almost instant relief and effected a cure.

The male voters of the Selden school district in Berlin, Ct., have hardly recovered from the surprise given them in the recent school meeting. They had made up a "slate," and were about to vote it through, when a bevy of ladies, headed by Mrs. Carter, walked in and demanded the right to vote. When asked to show their certificates, it was found that twelve of them had registered the previous Monday, and, therefore, they were entitled to vote. The ladies, who were in the majority, took possession of the meeting, smashed the "slate" and elected their ticket. Even the husbands of the ladies did not know of this contemplated move on their part. The men talk of taking action to have the vote declared illegal.

TIPS IN ENGLAND.

Two Well Guarded Places Into Which They Got a New Yorker.

"It is amazing," said a New Yorker, "to see what a tip will do in England. When I was younger and more adventurous than I am now, being in London I went down to Woolwich with the hope of seeing the inside of the arsenal. I went with the full knowledge that a request from the minister of the United States for a pass to the arsenal for a distinguished officer of our own army had been denied at the war office, upon the ground that, a war being then in progress, the arsenal was closed against visitors. I hung around one of the gates until the men came out at the noon hour, and, finally falling in with a man that I took for a foreman, slipped a tip into his hand and explained what I was after. He must have found me trustworthy, for he explained that one of his squad was not going back after the noon meal, and having procured me a workman's coat smuggled me in through the gate with the crowd. Once inside I was safe enough, and by the aid of the man I had corrupted I saw nearly everything worth seeing.

"It was during the same visit to England that a friend of my father's came to take him into the house of commons to hear a debate. He had been unable to obtain a pass for me, but I hurried down to the house of parliament, found a policeman, gave him a handsome tip, and told him I wished to get into the visitors' gallery of the commons. I hardly expected to succeed, but that bobby disappeared and returned with a pass bearing the signature of Joseph Chamberlain, and in I went. I haven't the slightest notion how the policeman obtained it. Perhaps it was a forgery, but it helped to convince me that in Great Britain more things are wrought by tips than by prayers."—New York Sun.

DOGS KEPT THEM WARM.

A Knife Manufacturing Town Where the Grinders Use Living Stoves.

Thiers, an old town in the Auvergne, is famous for its steel knife industry. The town has retained much of its romantic mediæval character. Its streets are narrow and crooked, and the manufacture of knives, the principal industry of the town, is not carried on in modern factories, but in ancient, small buildings along the little river Durolle, which furnishes the power for the industrial township. Curious and unique, as everything else in Thiers, is the method of work of the people engaged in grinding the knives.

The grinders, men and women, lay stretched out on wooden planks, over which they sometimes throw sheepskins to soften the boards. Head, shoulders and arms reach over the end of the board, and with their hands they hold unceasingly the rough steel blades upon the big grindstone which revolves beneath them by means of a powerful yet simple transmission. It is a very comical aspect to see these people at work, particularly because every one of the workmen has a small, long haired dog, who serves as a sort of live stove. During the long winter in the mountains a body stretched out at full length suffers much from cold in these ill protected mills, and since it is not possible for the workman to warm himself by a change of position or by moving his limbs this peculiar expedient has been adopted in Thiers. The dogs are well trained to their office. One whistle of their master calls them up, and a simple turn of the body indicates to them where they have to lie down to give new warmth to the body of their master.—Philadelphia Press.

Apples Are Good Nightcaps.

The apple is such a common fruit that very few persons are familiar with its remarkably efficacious medicinal properties, states The Bulletin of Pharmacy. Everybody ought to know that the very best thing he can do is to eat apples just before retiring for the night. Persons uninitiated in the mysteries of the fruit are liable to throw up their hands in horror at the visions of dyspepsia which such a suggestion may summon up, but no harm can come even to a delicate system by the eating of ripe and juicy apples just before going to bed.

The apple is excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digested shape than other fruits. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all. The apple helps the kidney secretions and prevents calculus growths, while it obviates indigestion and is one of the best known preventives of disease of the throat. Everybody should be familiar with such knowledge.

A Breezy Irishman.

Penrose Fitzgerald, the member of parliament for Cambridge, is a breezy, popular Irishman, of whom many good stories are told. He is rather nearsighted, and seldom remembers names. A few days ago he met a fellow member of parliament, Viscount Kilcoursie, who had just become Earl of Cavan. The new earl spoke to Mr. Fitzgerald in the lobby and, observing a puzzled look, was good enough to say pleasantly: "I see you don't know who I am. My name is Cavan." "Of course, of course, my dear fellow," was the answer, "but for the moment, I admit, I took you for that ass Kilcoursie."

A Qualified Victory.

"What's the matter, Jack? You don't behave like a man who has just become engaged to a lovely girl—smoking all day and pretending to read instead of finishing your picture for the academy."

"Oh, what's the use? The fellow I cut out is on the hanging committee."—Pearson's Weekly.

The average weight of women's clothing in winter is much greater than that which adorns the opposite sex. Worth once said that the weight of a man's winter clothes averaged 15 pounds; of a woman's, 18.
