The annual Convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, to be held in October in Montreal, will be the most important ever held in Canada. It will occupy the whole of Friday, Saturday and Sunday, 9th, 10th and 11th, and will be preceded by a Quiet Day on the previous Thursday. The Board of Domestic and Foreign Missions will meet during the same week and thus the attendance of many bishops and dignitaries will be secured. Hon. J. P. Faure, of New York, has been invited to represent the American branch of the Brotherhood. The Bishop of Niagara will take a prominent part and the Quiet Day will be conducted by Bishop Courtney, of Nova Scotia.

Over $2,000 has already been collected in aid of the funds of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto. The sum of $8,000 is appealed for, which will give breathing time and stave off the threatened foreclosure of the mortgage. As the matter has been taken up with considerable show of enthusiasm and by a large and representative committee, there is little doubt that the sum immediately required will be raised.

THE NEW BISHOP.

Dean Grisdale, who has been chosen Bishop of Qu'Appelle, was appointed dean in 1882. He is a native of Bolton, Lancashire, and was educated at the C. M. S. College, Islington, London, 1865-70. In 1871 he was appointed assistant minister of the "Old Church," Calcutta, under the present Bishop of Persia (Dr. E. C. Stuart) and in the same year became minister of St. John's College, Agra. Being invalided home he was curate of Broomfield, Essex, 1872-3. In the latter year he came to Manitoba to take charge of the parish of St. Andrews, and the next year was appointed Canon of St. John's, which office he held until his appointment as Dean. The degree of D. B. was conferred upon him for distinguished service by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1876, that of D. D., honoris causa, by St. John's College, Manitoba, in 1887, and that of D. C. L. by Trinity University, Toronto, during the meeting of the first General Synod of the Canadian Church in 1893. The Dean has filled many offices in both diocese and college, and has also taken a leading part in the general educational work of the Province and in many public movements with signal usefulness and success. He was for a time honorary incumbent of Holy Trinity, Winnipeg, first incumbent of Christ Church, and latterly honorary incumbent of All Saints', Morris. In connection with the Diocesan Synod, of which he has been a member for 22 years, he has during different periods, covering in all about eight years, been secretary, and treasurer from 1881 to 1884, and from 1893 to the present time. In the Provincial Synod he has sat since its first session in 1875, when he was appointed Secretary of the Lower House, and held that office for eight years. He was appointed Prolocutor in 1887. As might be expected the Dean has a seat on most of the important committees of both Synods. He has also taken an important part in the work of the Church Missionary Society in Rupert's Land, as member of the Finance Committee; and in its work in the "regions beyond," as Commissary for the Bishop of Mackenzie River, and as Honorary Treasurer of various trusts. In educational work in St. John's College he has been successively Professor of Systematic, and later of Pastoral, Theology. He also lectures in the Arts Course. He was for many years member of the Provincial Board of Education, and has represented St. John's College on the University Council since its inception. The Dean took an active part in the events leading up to the consolidation of the Canadian Church. At the first session of the General Synod he was chairman of the House of Delegates for four days, until on his own motion the Dean of Montreal was appointed prolocutor of the lower house under the constitution as adopted, when he himself was elected deputy prolocutor. During this session Trinity University, Toronto, honored itself and him by conferring upon him the honorary degree of D. C. L. The unique position held by the Dean for so many years has been one of great influence. That he has filled it so admirably and with such grace is a sufficient witness to his rare tact, ripe wisdom and kindliness of heart.

The "Church Association" in England, having failed to keep back the ocean-tide of Church progress by prosecuting priests here and there, is now expending its means and energy in fitting out so-called "Protestant" vans, equipping them with inflammatory tracts and equally inflammatory lay exhorters, often Dissenters, and sending them to rural parishes. There the van is drawn up as near the rectory gate as possible, and addresses are made to the crowd, attacking the Church and her teachings, and often abusing the vicar by name. In some cases the police have had to interfere to put down riotous disturbances. A country parson lately wrote to the Bishop of Wakefield, complaining of the language of a van lecturer who intruded into his parish, and quoting some of the expressions used. The Bishop (Walsham How) replied, expressing his indignation at such proceedings. The language used, he said, was "simply horrible and hateful," and the whole affair "most unchristianlike." The secretary of the Church Association then wrote to the Bishop that the council of the association "did not defend the language used, and agreed that it bordered too much on the irreverent," and then went on to compare the man who used such language to the prophet Elijah and the clergy of the Church to the prophets of Baal. "Whilst Your Lordship," he says, "is eager to denounce Elijah's jeers at Israel's false gods, you seem to have no word of reproof for Jezebel's false prophets." This sounds like a leaf out of seventeenth century Puritanism.

In a speech delivered at Epsom Lord Rosebery said that one of the most startling features of the age in which we live is the different code of morality which obtains with regard to public enterprise and private individuals. Private individuals, if they fall into debt, are no longer imprisoned, but they are visited to some extent with the moral censure of the community. But, with regard to public enterprise, the facts are different. "I suppose," said he, "that there are few of us who pass a day without receiving some agonizing appeal from some struggling promoter of a good cause who has laid out £1,000 on a scheme with only £100 to meet it. And the result is that a debt which he would have been reprimanded for incurring as an individual is regarded as meritorious, as representative of a 'cause.' Our clergy throw themselves boldly into the ocean and trust to the benevolence of individuals to pull them out of their discreditable position."

A VICAR ON CYCLING.

On Sunday, 9th August, in magnificent weather, the annual parade of the East Kent cycle clubs took place at Folkestone. There was a good muster. A cyclists' service was held at St. Michael's, where a short address was given by the vicar, the Rev. Edward Husband. He said that cycling, like boating and cricket, helped to fire our countrymen with nerve and muscle, and to build up the healthy body which went a long way in assisting people to embrace and believe in a healthy and manly religion. Cycling was responsible for a great decrease in drunkenness. It had done more for the cause of temperance than all the temperance societies put together. Cycling was health-giving, and it would be a bad day for cyclists if motor machines became general and they allowed machines to do the work whilst they sat upon them. It would be good for the doctors, but bad for the cyclists. They should thank God for the cycle and the health and recreation it afforded to thousands amongst our hard-worked population. On the advantages of cycling he quoted a poem by the Silvertown boy poet, who, he thought, promised to be the greatest poet of our century.

Even in India the new woman is beginning to appear. Miss Cornelia Sorabjee, B. A., barrister-at-law, of Puna, has formed a business partnership with K. P. Gadgill, barrister-at-law, of the same place.

AN AUTUMNAL WEDDING.

Chrysanthemums of White and Gold Suggest the Color Scheme.

One of the prettiest sights on earth is a country wedding. Outside the green foliage, dotted with bright hued blossoms, the quaint old church, the quiet buzz of Nature's more humble subjects; within, the solemn-looking, old-fashioned pews, the tall windows through which the sunlight floods, and the bright-faced, muslin-gowned throng.

For the country bridesmaids, simpler materials, although not less expensive, than those for town, are selected.

In the city it is now essential that a bridesmaid should have a gown of peau de soie or changeable taffeta, combined with mousseline de soie. A country maid wears a simple organdie or mull gown over a silk slip.

If a pretty picture is to be presented the color scheme must be most carefully planned. White should only appear in the bride's gown, neither should her maids wear blue, as both colors seem to have a depressing effect. It's a pretty idea to select a flower for the church decorations, using its coloring in the gowning of the bridemaids.

For instance, at an autumnal wedding among the Berkshire Hills white and yellow chrysanthemums will be massed about the church. The bridal gown will match the white blossoms, while the attendants will be arrayed in shades of yellow—two in a pale tint, two in medium yellow and two in deep gold. Of course the shades are being very carefully selected so that effect may not be marred by colors that clash.

Large hats, trimmed with plumes and chrysanthemums will be worn and gold passementerie in lengthwise bands will trim the skirts. THE LATEST.

MATE BRAM'S PAST RECORD.

Alleged to Have Incited Mutiny on Bqetn. White Wings.

BOSTON, Sept. 2.

Officials of the United States District Attorney's Office are hard at work on the bqetn. Herbert Fuller murder case. Tuesday morning a policeman found along the water front, and took to Station 1, a man named Henry Reinwald, who, it is said, was with Bram on two voyages in the bqetn. White Wings. He was a sailor on the White Wings, which sailed from Baltimore about a year ago. Bram was mate on the vessel during the trip. Bram, it is alleged, endeavored to secure enough members of the crew to murder the captain and his wife, then take charge of the vessel, and at the end of the trip sell the cargo, and, as he is alleged to have said, "Get rich quick." The first mate of the White Wings was taken before the United States Commissioner in Boston about a week ago and held as a witness in the case. It is said these facts will be part of his testimony at the trial. His name is Nickles. He is said to be in Portland, Me., on bail. Reinwald was subjected to a long examination by U. S. District Attorney Hoar, but the latter decided his testimony would not be as valuable as Mate Nickles', and he was allowed to depart without giving bonds. The only motive the United States officials can conceive in the Fuller case is the strong desire of Mate Bram to become rich by selling either the cargo or vessel.

A NEGRO SILVERITE.

[Bradford Torrey in the September Atlantic.]

At the end of the drive I handed the driver a dollar bill, one of Uncle Sam's handsomest, as it happened, fresh from the bank. He looked at it dubiously, fumbled it a moment, and passed it back. "Say, boss," he said, "can't you give me a silver dollar? It might rain." In a land of thunder showers and thin clothing, he meant to say, what we need is an insoluble currency. That, as such things go, was a pretty substantial argument for "free silver," or so it seemed to me; and I spoke of it accordingly, a week or two afterward, to an advocate of the "white metal." He was impressed by it just as I had been and begged me to make use of the argument when I got back home; as I now do, with all cheerfulness.

Don't you know that Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier, has proved, over and over again, that it has power to cure, even after all other remedies fail? If you have impure blood you may take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the utmost confidence that it will do you good.

An English correspondent says the expression "so long" is the same as the "sa lange" of the Swedes which corresponds to the "a tantot" of the French. "Sa lange" as pronounced by a Swede, is almost identical, he says, with what you would hear from a Northumbrian, if you got him to say the English words "so long."

Doctors and lawyers in England are not having an easy time of it just now. Quite recently several members of the English bar have been struck off the roll and some doctors have figured in the courts as defendant, charged with serious offences. In one case at Liverpool the judge spoke very strongly of the conduct of the medical man.

The following advertisement appeared among the "In Memoriam" notices in the London Standard of August 10th:

AS TO HATS.

Slouched Hats Caused a Riot In Spain Which Cost Many Lives.

Has not some one calculated that a sixth part of the memoirs of St. Simon in the original is occupied with the controversy whether or not the president of parliament should wear his hat or put it on the desk when performing various functions? At length the matter was compromised. The Tiers-etat should wear a chapeau rabattu, which had the slouched brim pinned up. This childish quarrel was remembered, no doubt, when the states general met and the king harangued them. His speech over, he put on his hat, and the noblesse did likewise, according to their privilege. The commons had no such claim, but they also clapped on their chapeaux rabattus, amid fierce protests from the nobles. The revolution might have begun that day with a scrimmage in the king's presence had he not removed his own hat, when all, of course, did the same.

But slouched hats had already caused a riot in Spain, which lasted so long and cost so many lives that it might almost be termed a civil war. This was 20 years earlier. Charles III thought them untidy. He thought the streets of his capital untidy also and denounced both eyesores in an edict. Every Spaniard henceforth must pin up his flopping brim, and every householder of Madrid must clean the street opposite his premises. Forthwith the people rose. They were little interested, comparatively, in the street cleaning, but they would die for their hats. And a good many of them did, but not unavenged. More than a week the fray lasted, but it was thought remarkable by foreign observers that at 2 p. m. regularly the soldiers plied arms, the furious citizens withdrew and silence reigned for one hour. Both parties were enjoying the siesta, except, perhaps, the wounded. After that interval they recommenced. The king fled, and for the rest of his life he never returned to Madrid willingly. In fact, it was understood he designed to make Seville the capital henceforth, and only gave up the project when his ministers showed him what a vast sum he had already spent on the new palace. So, mighty may be the influence of the hat in state affairs! Finally the king compromised. He withdrew his edict so far as the realm at large was concerned. Within the walls of Madrid every man must wear his brim pinned up, but outside he was at liberty to let it slouch. But the police courts did not cease to be busy until the fashion changed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

AMERICANIZED CHINAMEN.

How Yankee Sign Painters Sophisticate Oriental Names.

It is rather amusing to note the curious disguises under which Chinese names appear on the laundry signboards so thickly scattered through our cities. It is the natural result of the Chinaman's imperfect acquaintance with English and the sign painter's absolute ignorance of Chinese.

For instance, John goes to the painter and explains—"Want paint washee washee."

"All right. What's your name?" asks the painter.

"Name Cha Li Ling," replies the oriental, and down it goes on the sign, "Charlie Ling."

It is surprising the number of these Charlies who wear pigtails, but it always come to pass in the way just indicated.

One sign painter did still better. The applicant gave his name as Cha Ku Li. This in due time appeared on a square red board as follows: "Chas. Q. Lee, First Class Chinese Laundry."

It is often alleged that the Chinese never become truly American, but here was a Chinaman pretty thoroughly Americanized, one would fancy. It was from the bumptious sign painter, however, that he got his naturalization papers.—Boston Post.

Dancing and Tunnels.

A boy of 4 asked to be taken with his elders to a ball. He was told that he must first learn to dance. Upon this he delivered himself as follows: "But I tan dance, and my way is more difficult than your way. I tan dance alone, but you have to be holded up." This was not smartness, perverted ingenuity, as some might suppose. It was a bit of perfectly natural child thought. To the little philosopher there seemed nothing in the nature of things to make dancers dance in "pairs" and hold one another in so tight a grip unless it were to keep one another from falling.

In many of these naive misinterpretations of what is seen the point of the humor involves, of course, a side hit at grown up weaknesses which lie hid from the child. A good example of the charm of this childish innocence is given by Mr. Punch when he makes little Jessie ask her mamma in a railway carriage, "Why do all the tunnels smell so strong of brandy?" to the disgust of a Puritanic looking lady traveler sitting close by. Here, indeed, I suppose, everybody recognizes that the butt of the joke is this hypocritical looking lady with her carefully hidden bottle.—National Review.

Connecticut's Nicknames.

Connecticut enjoys the proud distinction of having three sobriquets. It has been called the "Land of Steady Habits," from the sobriety and gravity of its people; the "Freestone State," from the enormous quarries of that description of stone, and the "Nutmeg State," from the tradition prevalent in surrounding communities over 100 years ago that the chief industry of its inhabitants was the manufacture of nutmegs of wood, to be passed off as genuine on unsuspecting purchasers.

But we do propose to give all classes of people Pure Wines right from the vineyards of France and Spain, at prices that are almost incredible.

Just think of $3.00 and $4.00 a case for Fine Claret (12 large quart bottles).

We couldn't improve the quality if the price were doubled. Write for Price List.
