ST. JOHN'S GLOBE

ST. JOHN, N. B., JULY 18, 1896.

TO-DAY'S PAPER.

In the extra about a day there is an instalment of Conan Doyle's story 'The Red Rover', the last chapters of which will appear next week. There is the usual correspondence, dealing with letters, and much general reading. Altogether there are twenty-eight columns of reading matter in today's paper.

EX-GOVERNOR RUSSELL.

An ad group of men passed through St. John within a few hours. They had in their charge the remains of ex-Governor William E. Russell, of Massachusetts. On Monday last Mr. Russell left his home at Cambridge in apparently the best of health, but somewhat tired, and on Thursday night he died in a little fishing camp on the north shore of the Bay of Chaleur. He might have reached the home which he left on Monday, and all that will be left to his friends is the inanimate body, the earthly person that once confined a noble and generous soul. Mr. Russell had been at the Chicago Convention. He was an ardent, enthusiastic, sincere Democrat. Some things which happened at the convention were personally unpleasant to him. But he felt most deeply and keenly what he regarded as the wrong course taken in regard to the silver question. This weighed heavily upon him. He held that a great principle was sacrificed to expediency, and that being done his own course was made difficult and uncertain. A man with the truthful and generous nature of Mr. Russell must be placed in a very difficult position by action such as that taken by the Democratic party at Chicago. For a leading and prominent man, such as he was, to break with his party is no easy thing. He had, indeed, left the Republican party on a matter of principle, and allied himself with the democracy; but this really made more difficult to him a sensitive man similar action when the necessity again arose, for he would be open to much criticism and his motives might never be understood. Mr. Russell, therefore, chafed and worried over what had occurred in a scene in which he was a prominent actor. To escape from the necessity of talking the matter with friends and to avoid the evil of much discussion, and perhaps to escape from his own worrying thoughts, he went back to the Canadian river where but a short month ago he had spent some pleasant days with his wife and family, away from civilization and all its harassing problems. One day he spent there pleasantly and brought with him to his friends at home that he was feeling well. On the morning of the next day when his companions went to call him he answered not their call, and for him all earthly questions had been settled in the most summary manner. The repose of his body and his calm face indicated that he died quietly and without a struggle as he expected. The problem which he had been trying to solve had been solved for him by a higher power and in a manner which shut out forever all earthly criticism. Mr. Russell was a man of great strength and great force of character. He belonged to the nobler of the older American commonwealths. His family was an old and honored one. He had been well educated and had graduated at Harvard when he was nineteen years of age, was a warm lover of sport, a good all-round athlete in his college days and a hearty lover of fun and frolic of a manly kind. At the early age of twenty-eight years he was Governor of Cambridge, at thirty-three he was Governor of his State, and he held that office as a Democrat, so great was his personal popularity, even while the other State officers were Republicans. There was a splendid future before him in the administrative, legislative or judicial divisions of the national government, perhaps in them all; but before he had completed his thirty-third year he had passed off the stage of human existence and all that is left for his country is for men to talk of what might have been, the saddest words, as a good New England poet assures us, which can be used by tongue or pen. "This was a man," says the Boston Herald, "who had nothing to do, and if his baggage goes down on a summer sea with a whole country lamenting him it is because our political life has seldom or never seen one who has been so conspicuous for truth and duty and honor, and who has given us a higher ideal of what is best to live for. He gave us of his best, and honest tears will flow unbidden at his untimely death. Alas! that he is gone! This world is to-day the poorer for his loss."

LOCAL POLITICS.

Some interest will be felt in the course of the opposition in local politics. Elections must take place in four constituencies. Hon. Mr. Dunn comes back to St. John for re-election, and nomination has been fixed for July 28 and election for August 4. The vacancy caused over nine months ago by the retirement of Mr. Robinson in Northumberland has never been filled, and the Chatham Herald says there may be another vacancy in that county, as it is reported Mr. O'Brien, the M. P. for the district, has offered and templates accepting the office of Registrar of Wills and Deeds. It is announced in the government press that Mr. Allan Davidson, of Newcastle, will be the administration candidate for the seat vacated by Mr. Robinson. Then it is thought that there may be an election to secure a successor to Hon. Mr. Blair, and in Albert the seat held by Dr. Lewis remains to be filled.

AN ARTICLE PUBLISHED IN ANOTHER PART OF THIS PAPER.

It is a paper which takes away one's breath by the boldness of its suggestions in regard to the way in which St. John can be "boomd." While much might be done in the way of bringing summer visitors here, it will be wise to postpone even consideration of some of these schemes until after we have finished the expenditure on harbor improvements, and know just how much we are in for on the QUICKLY RESCUED.—One of the streams of the S. S. Parkin's, lying in the head, fell overboard this morning. Capt. Carter went back in this mutilated form to the House of Commons, and after a prolonged struggle the whole matter will be dropped. Then there will be inaugurated a new rent campaign during the coming winter among the Chief farmers who already threaten it, and a resurgence of energy in agitation among the Nationalists throughout Ireland.

PRIME MINISTER SALISBURY'S statement in the House of Lords yesterday when he laid upon the table of the House the papers relating to the Anglo-Venezuelan boundary dispute and his further statement in respect of the negotiations pending between the British and American governments about the establishment of a scheme of general arbitration of questions which may arise between Great Britain and the United States, afforded an absorbing topic of conversation to the House of Commons. Mr. Salisbary said satisfactory progress had been made in the negotiations. The consensus of opinion is that the Prime Minister's speech furnished a settlement of all the points in dispute between the two countries. Lord Salisbary, in making the statements, spoke more than usual, and his language was exceedingly cautious. It was this cautiousness, perhaps, which was not from speaking with his wonted lucidity, but there is scarcely any doubt entertained here but that the differences between the two governments are in a fair way to an amicable and mutually honorable adjustment.

When it became known in the House of Commons that the papers in the boundary dispute had been laid on the table in the House of Lords, a number of the members of the former body hastened to obtain copies of the correspondence, but they found that the papers had been presented in dummy form, and were not yet ready for distribution.

On the morning of Arthur J. Balfour, the government leader in the House of Commons, announced last night that he would ask the House, on Monday, to suspend the 12 o'clock rule until the close of the session. The committee reported the decision at midnight. Mr. Balfour claims that lengthening of the sittings is necessary to facilitate the discussion of the Irish land bill.

A select committee of the House of Commons, which has long been considering certain proposed restrictions of the deo-margarine trade, has presented its report. It recommends that the coloring of oleo-margarine, either in imitation of butter or otherwise, be prohibited, and that the selling of mixed oleo-margarine and butter be held illegal, even if sold as a mixture. There are other restrictions recommended, such as the prohibition of imitation, labelling, packing, etc. The committee was composed mainly of agricultural members, who carried out the ideas of the central chamber of agriculture for the English fair trade.

The American deo-margarine exporter will doubtless be able to accommodate himself to the new conditions somewhat.

MORE MUTINY AT CLEVELAND.
Troops Charge the Mob with Fired Bayonets and Many Wounded.
CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 18.
The second fight between the strikers and the Brown Hotel's forces began occurred on Friday evening. The militia kept the crowd back while the non union men were taken from the shops. The mob increased until it numbered a few thousands and extended over fifteen squares. Jeers, stones and clubs were charged from the police and the militia. Many on both sides were wounded. Just how many strikers were hurt is uncertain. Thomas McGraw and Thomas Garey were so severely stabbed with bayonets that they could not get away and are lying at St. Clair Hospital.

All day there were frequent clashes between the mob and Brown's Hotel's forces and the police and militia. Members of the mob were in a vicious mood and when ever a lone soldier or policeman could be reached violence was attempted. Troops from two o'clock p. m. were concentrated under arms and had great difficulty in clearing the streets, charges being necessary, in which the bayonet was freely used. As soon as the charge was ended the mob, which early in the afternoon numbered 5,000, would flow back against the line of steel like a wave of the sea and again begin to hoot and throw stones.

When the workmen had been taken away and the troops were returning to their quarters at the docks, another wonderful charge was made and the cold steel so driven home that many rioters had to be helped away. At this time someone sent in a general alarm to the police station and every patrol wagon was soon dashing through the streets, causing the wildest rumors among thousands on their way home from work. There was no need of police reinforcement as the rioters, which had been swollen to 15,000, began to melt away.

It looked as if the trouble was ended, but at seven o'clock an assault was made on a soldier who was passing along Wilson avenue. He fought desperately, as did the policeman who hurried to his aid. A squad of troops came to their rescue, but not before the officer had been beaten in a senseless way. Again the patrol wagons rushed to the scene, and had all they could do to force a passage through the angry mob.
