BABES AS SACRIFICE.

TWO CRAZED MOTHERS PREVENTED FROM SHEDDING THE BLOOD OF CHILD VICTIMS.

One Found Knife in Hand—Mrs. Kiley Wanted to Make a Propitiatory Offering of Her Little Daughter.

[New York Herald.]

By the prompt action of the police two young women were prevented yesterday from taking the lives of their children in a mania for human sacrifice.

The first was Mrs. Delia Kiley, 27 years old, of No. 437 West Seventeenth street, who was discovered in a religious frenzy by other occupants of the house, a knife in one hand and in the other a Bible, the leaves spread at the story of the sacrifice of Abraham. The woman had been moody for several days past, and her husband, Dominick, had been apprehensive that her mental condition would lead her to some harm. The family lives on the second floor of the tenement and the husband's work keeps him from home between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and eight o'clock at night. They have one child, a little girl, and it was this that the mother proposed to murder.

When Kiley returned home last Wednesday he found that his wife had destroyed all the playthings of the child, and upon questioning her she laughed strangely and said it was because God had placed seven curses on them. The child was in a state of terror at that time, too frightened to cry. Kiley realized that his wife was demented, and after a consultation with the other residents of the tenement he decided that it would be as well to keep her at home, and by lenient measures endeavor to bring about a restoration of her faculties.

PROPITIATION NEEDED.

When he went home on Thursday, however, he found her in a worse condition than before. She said that she had information coming from her mother-in-law that she was to have her eyes cut out and holes bored in her body, in order that the propitiatory sacrifice might be exacted from her to serve instead of the life of her daughter. Even then Kiley refused to believe that his wife had a murderous inclination.

While he was at work yesterday morning the other residents of the tenement heard agonized shrieks coming from the apartments. Knowing Mrs. Kiley's disturbed mental condition, it was deemed advisable to break in a door, when all other inducements to have it opened from the inside had failed. The woman was discovered striding up and down the floor, brandishing the knife and reading passages of Scripture in a loud voice, with the child that had been marked for the sacrifice crouching terrorized in the corner.

By threatening to do them bodily injury the woman kept the child's rescuers at bay, but was finally overpowered by a policeman and arrested. She was taken to the Bellevue hospital, where the physicians said she was insane. The little girl said that her mother had declared that there was but one way in which they could procure their salvation, and that was that she should offer up her child as a living sacrifice.

HAD A LIKE FRENZY.

Rachel Moses, who is forty-three years old, and lives at No. 29 Norfolk street, was also admitted to Bellevue yesterday, suffering from a similar hallucination. The residents of the tenement in which she lives have for the last several days been cognizant of the fact that her children were being abused, but had no idea that the mother had any other purpose in mind than the ordinary chastisement to which the children of that neighborhood are subjected more or less, in accordance with the Biblical injunction.

Policeman Sullivan, of the Eldridge street station, had his attention called to the unusual disturbance in the rooms of the Moses apartments, and on making investigation found that the mother had acted so queerly as to justify the suspicion that she was insane. He arrested the woman and she was committed to the Bellevue hospital for further examination. The other tenants of the house, from the stories told by the children, believe that she, too, was impressed with the necessity of offering a sacrifice in accordance with her crazed religious ideas.

SHE WORE RED BLOOMERS.

Henry Keating has Retained a Lawyer to Sue for Divorce on the Ground of Abandonment.

[New York Herald.]

Henry Keating, a New York commission merchant, living at North Paterson, N. J., has retained Richard Randall to sue for divorce on the ground of abandonment. Mrs. Keating will file a cross bill, setting up cruelty and incompatibility of temperament. She has left Mr. St. Lawrence, her counsel, a torn pair of bloomers as evidence.

Mrs. Keating is about twenty-five years old and five years her husband's junior. She is an enthusiastic wheelwoman and makes a fine appearance in bicycle costume. She has a penchant for light-colored bloomers. Keating does not ride, and on several occasions has had to prepare his own supper because his wife took a notion to go out for a "spin" before his return home. Six weeks ago Keating returned to find the door locked and the usual note awaiting him telling him to wait for her.

He grew tired of this and on one occasion when Mrs. Keating came home late he damaged her wheel with an axe. She went to her parents' home, but a reconciliation was effected. Keating found his wife absent on Thursday and overheard a neighbor discussing a stunning costume. He was horrified to learn that Mrs. Keating was wearing red bloomers. When the lady returned she had hardly closed the door when the bloomers were ruined. Keating had torn them from her back.

He told Mr. Randall that he wanted a separation from this "human danger signal" as quickly as possible. Mrs. Keating says her husband was drinking heavily at the time of the bloomer episode. Neither side will listen to overtures of settlement made by mutual friends.

THE MOST COSTLY MATERIALS USED IN THE MANUFACTURE OF DIAMOND DYES.

The best and most costly ingredients and materials are used in the manufacture of Diamond Dyes. No experiments are ever made with cheap colors with the view of increasing the manufacturer's profits.

Diamond Dyes are the world's standards, and will be kept as such no matter what the cost may be. The cheap and imitation dyes sold by some dealers are never twice made from the same grade of materials; therefore, they vary and are not reliable. Diamond Dyes give as perfect results when used by a child as they do when handled by an individual of experience.

Bright, pure, rich, fast and unfading Diamond Dyes are the world's favorites.

HIS CHICKENS ARE SAFE.

But Winnie's Daughter Is Laid Up, and There Will be Doctor's Bills.

GARDNERSVILLE, N. Y., July 16.

Last night V. H. Winnie heard a commotion among his fowls and rushed out with his rifle, seeking the skunks who were capturing his chickens. Being thinly clad, Mrs. Winnie carried his coat and kept him company while he watched for skunks.

Meanwhile "Goldie," their daughter, eight years old, missing her parents, dressed and, putting on her summer hat, strolled into the yard, sat down behind a fence and remained quiet. While walking about Mr. Winnie saw what he thought was a skunk behind the fence. It was the white ribbon on his daughter's hat fluttering in the breeze.

Mr. Winnie raised the rifle and fired. The response was an agonized scream from his idolized daughter, who was shot in one foot. She is recovering.

LOSING ITS WIDOWS.

Ohio Bachelors Robbing Galien, Mich., of Its Claim to Distinction.

DETROIT, July 18.

The village of Galien, Berrien county, Michigan, lays claim to the distinction of having twenty-one pretty widows residing within its borders.

In Jefferson Co, Ohio, there is a colony of twenty-five bachelors. The bachelors sent a committee to Galien to report on matrimonial prospects. The result was the visit of a party of the bachelors to the little town and the sequel of the unique proceedings was the announcement to-day that next week five of the Michigan widows will become the wives of five of the Ohio bachelors and the additional announcement that other similar weddings will soon follow.

The publication of the fact that Galien enjoyed the novel distinction of having twenty one widows led to all this approaching happiness.

For Weak Backs, Lame Backs, Painful Backs or any kind of Bad Backs, Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound is the Great Back Strengthener.

Wm. Rogers, 8 Ottawa Street, Toronto, Ont., writes:—"For a number of years I have been troubled with a lame back. Some of the doctors I consulted called it Lumbago; others, Kidney Disease. I received no benefit from their treatment. Nine months ago I was lucky enough to try Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound, and, after taking two or three bottles, the pain entirely left me, and I have had no return of it for 8 months now."

WEDDING IN NORWAY

AN HONORED GUEST TELLS OF ITS AMUSING FEATURES.

The Spirit of Revelry Runs High, and the Festivities Last Until Everybody Is Tired Out—Drinking the Health of the Newly Wedded Pair.

A country wedding in Norway is an interesting sight to behold, and, besides being amusing, I should think, is quite unique in its way. It is not so much the actual church ceremony, although that is strange enough in its simplicity, as the after proceedings which find such charms for the stranger.

When I was traveling in the neighborhood of the great Justedal glacier, I was invited to join in some wedding festivities, and the privilege of being the honored guest is one I shall not soon forget.

I was rather behind my time, and when I reached the village the good people were returning from the church. The first thing I caught sight of was a troop of gayly dressed men and women collected in the street and marching along to the tunes of an antique fiddle. Some were dancing, some were singing, and the older inhabitants, who had reached the age when such frivolities no longer charm, were puffing away at their curious, long, wooden pipes, the old women enjoying the fumes of smoke, if anything, more than the men.

The younger girls were most gorgeously arrayed in snow white caps and massive ornaments of gold. Their dresses were gay with every color of the rainbow. All the musical accompaniment was supplied by one old fiddler, but those simple folk enjoyed the erratic squeaking every bit as much as if it had been the finest orchestra in the world under the charge of some celebrated conductor.

The new made wife, covered with blushes, looked sweetly picturesque in her bright red skirt and snow white bodice, and her jewelry tinkled like fairy cymbals as she walked or rather gently swayed along.

Her most conspicuous ornament was the bridal crown, which it is the ambition of every village girl to wear. It is the property of the whole parish and is generally under the charge of the priest, who hands it over just before the ceremony. High above the maiden's head it stood, looking most imposing, as the sun glistened on the many jewels which were set around it.

I joined the merry throng, the men raising their caps and the women courtesying low when they caught sight of me. Then I followed the party up some narrow steps to the first floor of a big thatched barn belonging to the father of the bride. An old oak chair was dragged forward to receive my portly person, and I sat me there and wondered greatly what on earth was coming next.

The villagers ranged themselves round the long, low room, on one side the girls, opposite them the young men, the matrons at the top and the elders at the bottom. Then the bride retired, of course accompanied by her husband, and changed her ceremonious garments for lighter attire. I thought her wise when I saw what followed.

When the pair returned—and during their absence there was silence in the barn—a huge bowl was offered to me filled with the national beverage. I looked at it aghast. Was I to drink it all? They intimated I was to wish them health. I touched it with my lips. Then the bride bent her pretty head and took a sip. That one taste was enough for me. But there was more to come.

They signed that I was to go on drinking. I shut my eyes and did so. Between every two drafts the bride bowed her head and courtesied before me. At last it seemed I might leave off. But, no; I had to go through it all again with the bridegroom until the bowl was empty. And when that time came I was heartily glad, for the drink was strong, and a liking for it is most surely one that could only be acquired by long acquaintance.

And now the husband led his bride into the middle of the room and tripped one of those graceful pas deux peculiar to the country.

At last, hot and flushed, they stopped and stood before me. A tiny silver cup was held out, and I was asked to drink their health again, this time in cognac. I did so without daring to think of the morrow.

This was the signal for the dancing to commence in earnest. Only four people—two men and two women—were allowed to dance at one time, but as soon as they stopped, exhausted, others slipped in and took their places, and the old fiddler scraped away until I thought his arm must break.

Presently there was a lull. Two women, dressed in gauzy, wavy dresses, stepped into the middle. They were the village dancers. Then followed a marvelous exhibition of high kicking. It was a veritable triumph in the terpsichorean art, for every few steps they touched the ceiling with their shoes, and the louder the click of their shoes the louder came the applause. And so the night hours slipped away unheeded. Dance followed dance and song followed song, until at last they could keep awake no longer, and, with a kiss to the bride and the bridegroom, one and all departed.—Hartford Times.

The Value of a Cup.

One of the most comforting things a fisherman or hunter can carry with him is a cup to drink from. Some men get along with their hands, or by leaning over a stream or spring and drinking direct from the water, but there is no comfort, and there is a possibility of lizards in this. One likes to stand erect and drink comfortably when on the march. It is more satisfactory. When one forgets his cup, he makes one from the large leaves of a tree or bush, or from paper, or uses the top of his hat.—New York Sun.

Feed the Nerves

Upon pure, rich blood, and you need not fear nervous prostration. Nerves are weak when they are improperly and insufficiently nourished. Pure blood is their proper food, and pure blood comes by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is thus the greatest and best nerve tonic. It also builds up the whole system.

HOOD'S PILLS are the favorite family cathartic, easy to take, easy to operate.

AFLOAT IN A COCKLESHELL

No News from the Two Young Norwegians Who Set Out June 6 to Cross the Ocean in a Rowboat.

NEW YORK, July 19.

Frank Samuelson and George Harbo, two young Norwegians, set out from this port on June 6 with the intention of rowing across the Atlantic Ocean. Their objects were fame and the money that might accrue from transient notoriety.

Their boat measures a bit less than eighteen feet and has a beam of five feet. No spar or sail of any sort was taken, and the two men will have to depend solely on their oars and their own exertions to reach Havre, the port they set out for. They put to sea on the evening of June 6, and were spoken thirteen days later. They were well on their voyage then, being about three hundred miles from port, and wanted nothing except to be reported.

The boat is provisioned for sixty days and her crew of two said they expected to average about forty-four miles a day. The route they were to follow is 3,250 miles in length. It was their intention to row steadily as long as good weather lasted, and to heave to and take watch and watch about when storms came and seas beat high. The boat went out provided with a sea anchor—a cornucopia shaped piece of canvas attached to a bowline, to be thrown overboard when gales arise to keep the boat's head to wind and wave. By means of this sea anchor the men expect to ride out any storm that comes their way.

Included in the equipment of the boat was a compass, sextant and chart, by which the men expected to find their way to the coast of France. They laid their route to the southward of the steamship lanes, in order to avoid as far as possible, the danger of collision. This may explain why only one report of the wanderers has been received. There is another and a more sinister explanation of the dearth of news from them, and if it should come in the shape of a report from some vessel about a boat being sighted bottom side up, tossing somewhere in midocean, no one who looked at the frail craft would be much surprised.
