A ROYAL WEDDING.

PRINCESS MAUD OF WALES MARRIED TO PRINCE CARL, OF DENMARK.

Brilliant Affair — The Bride's Life Described.

LONDON, July 22.

Princess Maud of Wales, youngest daughter of the Prince of Wales, and granddaughter of Queen Victoria, was married to-day to Prince Charles of Denmark, son of the Crown Prince, and grandson of King Christian IX. of Denmark.

The ceremony took place in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace. The west end was profusely decorated with flowers, flags, etc., and there was a conspicuous blending of the British and Danish flags. The Life Guards and Coldstream Guards lined the route from Marlborough House to Buckingham Palace, and crowds of people, mostly ladies, were gathered in the vicinity of the palace awaiting the arrival of the procession. A cavalcade of heralds and equerries escorted the bridegroom, who was accompanied by his parents, the Crown Prince of Denmark and Princess Louise, and his brothers Christian and Harold. The Prince and Princess of Wales and all of the Queen's children, with their families, were in carriages, except Princess Beatrice of Battenberg and her children, who were absent on account of their mourning for the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg. The Queen passed quietly into the chapel from Buckingham Palace.

The ceremony took place at 12.30 o'clock. The weather was sunny and in every way pleasant. Princes Christian and Harold supported Prince Charles, and the bridesmaids were Princess Victoria of Wales, sister of the bride, and Princesses Ingeborg and Thyra, of Denmark, sisters of the bridegroom; Princess Victoria, of Schleswig-Holstein; Princesses Patricia and Margaret of Connaught; Princess Alice of Albany, and Lady Alexandra Duff, daughter of the Duke of Fife, and Princess Louise of Wales. The Most Rev. Edward White Benson, Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of all England, officiated, assisted by the Bishops of London and Winchester. The Prince of Wales gave the bride away.

After the ceremony the bridal party and guests partook of luncheon in Buckingham Palace, at the conclusion of which the royal bridal party, headed by the bride and bridegroom, left the palace in a carriage for Marlborough House. The party left the palace at 2.45 p. m., and took the route via Piccadilly and St. James streets, both of which were beautifully decorated. All of the houses were draped with flags, bunting, etc., and there was a profusion of flowers. The streets were lined with sightseers and the windows of the clubs and other buildings along the route were filled with people, mostly ladies. The bridal couple aftewards left Marlborough House for St. Pancras station, where they took a special train for Wolverton, Norfolk, to take possession of Appleton Hall, which will henceforth be their home.

Princess Maud of Wales is very charming and bright, and is by far the liveliest and most practically gifted of Queen Victoria's many granddaughters. Although the third daughter or the youngest surviving child of the Prince and Princess of Wales, the bride-elect can no longer be said to be in her first youth. She is three years older than her fiance, and owing to her independent spirit and lively, inquiring mind, she has seen more of life than either of her sisters. She is absolutely devoted to her mother, and since the death of the Duke of Clarence she has given up many of her own special amusements and pleasures to revive the drooping spirits of the Princess of Wales. This has been the more easy for her in view of the fact that although of a far livelier temperament, she has inherited not only her mother's rare musical talent, but also the latter's love of dress and exquisite taste. She is, perhaps, the only princess who can design, cut out and complete a costume, and the little case always carried about by the Prince of Wales, which contains a compass, a pipe, half an ounce of tobacco, two cigars, six cigarettes, and a tiny box of matches was, it may be said, invented by his youngest child, and she always keeps His Royal Highness well supplied with this her own patent "hold all."

The three young Princesses of Wales led, as children, a very simple and somewhat severe existence, for their mother was very old-fashioned in her views; she never allowed them to read any book she had not first perused herself, and although they are fearless riders, more especially Princess Maud, who is one of the few English sportswomen who can break in a young horse, they were not permitted to indulge in any mannish or unladylike forms of exercise or sports. Princess Maud was one of the first to persuade her mother that a tricycle was not an unroyal mode of locomotion. Her machine is a rear-steerer, with a clutch action, and her monogram and coat of arms are engraved on the seat rail. The Princess of Wales greatly disapproves of the present wheeling mania, and when some months ago it was stated that the young Princesses each possessed a smart "bike," a semi official contradiction was put in several journals.

Her Royal Highness possesses much of her father's tact and pleasant, easy manner; she is the life and soul of the Sandringham House parties, and does her best to make her mother's visitors thoroughly happy and at their ease. Life in the Prince of Wales's country house is fairly simple. The young daughters of the house have their own boudoir full of their own little treasures, and Princess Maud has found her inventive faculties of great use to her when furnishing her own room. The future Queen of England cannot bear to see young girls over-dressed or loaded with jewels. The first ring ever worn by the Duchess of Fife was that placed on her finger on the day of her engagement, and the same fact is true of her younger sister. The three princesses have also been noticeable for the extreme plainness of their toilettes. They rarely wear elaborate afternoon gowns; indeed, they may be said to have been the first to set the fashion of simple and inexpensive rough tweed and serge sailor costumes. When at Sandringham, and, indeed, at London, the three royal ladies give up a good deal of their time to the care of their various pets. When feeding their dogs, pigeons and ponies they put on large white aprons and go through the work in a thoroughly business-like manner. Princess Maud's special pets are a large black cat called Tim and a tiny King Charles spaniel, who is always washed, brushed and combed by his royal mistress in person.

Princess Maud is a first-rate angler, and can whip the Dee with rare skill; indeed, last year she broke the record by landing the largest salmon of the season; she ties her own flies. Princess Maud has long been attached to her husband, who is her cousin; in fact since they were children. Prince Carl is quiet and unassuming, and it is one of those frequent cases where opposites meet and blend most happily. He passed all his examinations in the Copenhagen Marine Academy with high honors, and is a true lover of the sea. He is adored in Iceland, where, oddly enough, it was once his duty to save the inhabitants against the depredations of British steam trawlers. He will be twenty four next August, and is remarkable for his extraordinary height, standing six feet four inches in his stockings.

THE METEOR AT DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, July 22.

The Daily News says that the Emperor William's yacht Meteor has arrived at Dublin to take part in the Kingston regatta. The paper adds that the Meteor is threatened with arrest owing to her captain refusing to pay the heavy salvage demanded by a tug for assistance rendered to the yacht a few days ago.

FISHING IS GOOD.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., July 22.

The first fishery news from Labrador has been received. Excellent catches are being made along the southern part of the coast, but the northern part is blocked by ice, preventing navigation. This ice will probably prevent the Peary expedition steamer Hope from reaching the coast so as to land a party there which was originally intended.

S. C. PORTER'S.

GREATEST BARGAIN YET OFFERED.

We secured this week from a large Montreal manufacturer 20 dozens more of LADIES' VERY STYLISH BLOUSE WAISTS at a very large discount off the regular prices, and wishing to close the lot out at once we have marked them at prices that must make them sell rapidly.

We are showing a 90c. Waist for 59c., and a $1.75 Waist for 98c.

They are very stylish patterns and colorings, full sleeves, laundried collar and cuffs, and are certainly the best made and most stylish Waists shown here this season.

ENGLAND'S POSITION.

BISMARCK INTERVIEWED ON THE SUBJECT.

Possibility of Conflict Between England and France and Russia.

BOSTON, July 22.

A special despatch to the Globe from London says: "A despatch from Hamburg says the following is an authorized expression of Prince Bismarck's views upon the pending European crisis: English policy is governed by anxiety about the conflict which England must fight out with Russia and France. France is striving for the Soudan and Russia for India and as England is their common antagonist in these aspirations they are natural allies, even without a treaty. Egypt is of great strategic importance to England's position in the Soudan and India, and is therefore the pivot of British policy, the anxieties of which have been not a little enhanced by Russia's recent attitude toward the Egyptian question. England will not give up Egypt, but does not feel herself a match for Russia and France, and is therefore casting about for help, hitherto and let us hope in the future, in vain so far as Germany and Austria-Hungary are concerned. But the British are tormented by another anxiety: they no longer believe in the stability of their European empire, for, whereas many things have changed elsewhere in the last decade, England's system of defence is still the same as in Wellington's time. It suffices for her non-European countries. In view of the world-wide extent of her interests she would have more ships on foreign coasts than Russia and France. But the power or powers which predominate where the conflict must be decided, that is in the English Channel and the North Sea, will be victorious. The French channel fleet alone is already a match for the English and its junction with the Russian Baltic fleet would put an end to England's superiority in the waters in which the conflict must be decided. Add to this that her insulated position involves the danger of England being starved by an enemy so that she must unconditionally surrender if a victorious hostile fleet should succeed in cutting off her supplies. England has not ignored this danger, and is therefore working diligently at the task of increasing her navy to such an extent that it will be superior under all circumstances. If she maintains her superiority at sea, her antagonists must try to convert the sea war as quickly as possible into a land war and to seek a decision where all the nerves of the world wide meet, that is in London."

It is officially reported that there were 8,086 sick troops in military hospitals throughout the island during the last week of June.

THE IRISH LAND BILL.

Government Defeat on One of the Clauses.

LONDON, July 22.

The House of Commons to-day proceeded with the consideration of the Irish Land bill. Clause 24 of the measure provides that advances under the purchase acts shall consist of money and not of guaranteed land stocks. When this clause was reached Sir Thomas Esmonde, anti-Parnellite member for the West Division of Kerry, moved that the advances should consist of guaranteed land stock and not of money.

The Irish landlords joined the Nationalists in support of Sir Thomas Esmonde's motion and it was carried by a vote of 99 to 86. This vote against the government was received with frantic cheers from the Irish members and Mr. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury, withdrew the clause altogether.

PASTOR BREADY IS MAD

Because the Women of His Congregation Inspected a Saloon at St. Joseph, Mich.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., July 15.

Several prominent ladies in this city connected with the Law and Order League, which has been causing the arrest of saloon men, were standing across the street watching those who entered Kibler & Seaver's saloon. Later they ventured to the front of the saloon, when they were invited inside. The bar room, which is the finest here, was filled with people, among them many business men. The women stood horrified watching the men drink, and they remained there for half an hour. They were invited to participate, but refused, and were shown through the building, which includes wine rooms and gambling rooms. They remained for two hours in the establishment, which was in the meantime visited by hundreds of people. Before their departure they said they did not suppose it was a place like that. To add to the excitement, they took a ride to Benton Harbor with some of the saloon men. The affair is the talk of the town and Minister Bready is so mad that he may try to have their names dropped from the church roll.

A SKY SCRAPER THIS.

New York's New Building that Will be Twenty-Nine Stories.

NEW YORK, July 18.

The rage for going up higher has not yet ceased among New York builders. Just as the St. Paul building is towering up above the highest point of the American Surety structure, as that had over-topped its predecessors, comes the foundation-laying of a sky scraper that will scrape deeper into the sky than any of the others. It is to be built on Park row, just north of Ann street, and will extend back to Theatre alley. Twenty-six stories are to be piled one on top of the other, and on the top of the twenty-sixth will come two three-storey towers, reaching finally a height of 386 feet above the sidewalk. The building will be furnished with fifteen elevators—nine from the first floor to the twenty-first, four express elevators to the twenty-sixth, and two from the twenty-sixth to the twenty-ninth.

It is not improbable that still another sky-scraper will be begun on Park row within a year, negotiations to that end having been entered into by a large insurance company. The three, together with those already built to the north, would make this the most imposing short street in the world.
