BRITISH POLICY.

LORD SALISBURY'S NEW ATTITUDE TO TURKEY.

The Queen Has Intervened—South African Affairs.

LONDON, Sept. 12.

The orders issued to the British squadron under Admiral Seymour to rendezvous at Salonica in October are distinctly connected with the change in British policy towards the Porte which marked the arrival of Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador in Constantinople, without practical intervention by England, with or without the approval of the other powers. The game which Russian diplomacy played under Prince Lobanoff's artful hand of paralyzing all interference in the Sultan's misdoings until the time became ripe for the utter ruin of Turkey to the aggrandizement of Russia seems about to end. The question is asked here why Lord Salisbury so long followed a merely tentative policy and what caused the change to a more pronounced and independent one. There is no doubt that the Queen's indignation over the Constantinople massacres had much to do with it. Her Majesty rarely interferes, but when she does the interference is effective. The recent disclosures in the publication of the Bismarckian letter of 1875, in which it was seen how Queen Victoria by writing to Emperor William first foiled Bismarck's plan for the final conquest and division of France, is a striking instance of her power when she chooses to exert it. Apart from the message which she is understood to have sent to the Sultan through Sir Philip Currie, expressing her indignation and horror of massacres, the Queen is known to be using her influence with the Czar. The visit of the Russian imperials to Balmoral, which was supposed to be a purely family affair, devoid of all possible political results, is likely to prove quite the other way, and to have more practical influence on European politics than either the visit to Vienna or Breslau, and possibly more even than the Paris demonstration. The current cant of European papers about Prince Lobanoff's death effecting no change in Russia's diplomacy verges on nonsense. There may be no alteration in Russia's aims, but since Prince Labonoff's death other and more potent influences are intervening to alter the immediate course of Russian policy. Among the factors working upon Lord Salisbury are the protests reaching the foreign office from British subjects in Constantinople and other parts of European Turkey regarding want of protection from outrage, and the demand of the religious press in England for the suppression of the Sultan's regime—not the dissenting press alone, that has always been clamoring for the suppression of the "unspeakable Turk," but Established Church papers have now taken up the cry. "Let not Lord Salisbury," says the Christian World, "stand between the Czar and Constantinople. Better if the Turkish capital became the centre of a free state. But if that is impossible we should resign ourselves to the Russian advance. The rule of the Czar is bad enough, but there is in the hearts of the Russian people the seed of better things."

Mr. Chamberlain's absence from the Colonial office is distinctly felt. Lord Selburne, his locum tenens, has as under secretary for the department somewhat of a reputation as a promising young man, but he does not appear able to deal with the sudden troubles arising in South Africa. All bade for peace when Mr. Chamberlain left for the United States. The dominant control Cecil Rhodes had exercised in South African affairs was gone, Rhodes himself being under pledge to come to England to be heard in defence of himself and the British South African Co. Just before Parliament was prorogued Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons that "Rhodes had not control over a single policeman." Now Rhodes, usurping the functions of Gen. Sir Fred Carrington, the commander of the British forces, is trying to make peace with the Matabele chiefs. He has offered them terms which General Carrington refuses to accept and generally deals with affairs in Rhodesia as if he were still master of the situation. Lord Selburne doubtless keeps in cable contact with his chief, but it takes a strong and early hand to deal with Rhodesia. The immediate result is conflict of personal interests and something of confusion. The Matabele war if it continues will owe its continuation to differences between Rhodes and Carrington. The former would make after peace on conditions which would leave a large section of the natives armed, the latter only on the unconditional surrender and disarmament.

Make the Most of Yourself.

It is the duty of every man to make the most of himself. Whatever his capacities may be, he is sure to find some place where he can be useful to himself and to others. But he cannot reach his highest usefulness without good health, and he cannot have good health without pure blood. The blood circulates to every organ and tissue, and when it is pure, rich and healthy it carries health to the entire system; but if it is impure it scatters disease wherever it flows. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one true blood purifier. It cures salt rheum, scrofula, catarrh, dyspepsia and rheumatism because these diseases have their origin in the blood.

NO CLUE FOUND

To the Meadow Brook Murderers.

ROBBERY SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN THE MOTIVE.

Strange Man Seen in the Neighborhood on Thursday.

[SPECIAL TO GLOBE.]

MONCTON, Sept. 12.

The Meadow Brook tragedy is beyond doubt a most atrocious murder. It is believed now that Mrs. Dutcher and son were dead long before the house was fired.

They probably met death in the same manner as the attempt was made on the little girl.

The latter remains practically in the same state as when she was carried from the burning house. Her skull is fractured and her body and arms are frightfully burned. The fracture extends from the top of the ear towards the base of the skull and is nearly six inches long and semi-circular. The ear is cut both inside and out and the chances for recovery are very slight.

A GLOBE reporter visited the scene of the tragedy this morning and saw the little girl lying on a bed in her aunt's house. She was moaning piteously and would frequently tear the wet cloths from her head. She was apparently unconscious, but occasionally opened her eyes. She recognized no one.

Once this morning she asked for her mother and then requested her aunt, Mrs. Green, to stay by her bedside.

Dr. Gaudet, of Memramcook, who is in attendance, thought her condition very critical. He could apply no remedy to the fracture and is allowing nature to take its course.

Nothing new has occurred to clear up the mystery. The remains of the boy were found Friday afternoon and put in a basket. Only a piece of the skull, part of the breast and the charred remains of bones were found. The remains of Mrs. Dutcher are just as unrecognizable, and consist only of trunk about two feet long. The bodies will throw no light on the crime.

People in the neighborhood of the crime are very cool over the affair, and a curious indifference to the occurrence exists.

Mrs. James Green said this morning she was with the Dutcher woman Thursday evening until eight o'clock. No one but the family was at home; then, shortly after Mrs. Green went home and retired, she was awakened by the barking of her own dog and Mrs. Dutcher's. Looking out of the window she saw a light burning, but thought it was a lamp. A little later the light increased and it suddenly dawned on her that the house was in flames. She called her brother, who endeavored to save the family but only succeeded in rescuing the girl. The house was very quickly burned up and no evidence that Mrs. Dutcher and her son tried to save themselves was seen. The family of three slept in one bed and when Mr. Green rushed in the room and grabbed the little girl no sound or movement was made by the other occupants.

Curiously enough, Dutcher's dog has disappeared and no trace can be found of it. Neither of the brothers of the murdered woman were around this morning.

People in the neighborhood seem to suspect someone, but talk very little. Two gentlemen driving up Meadow Brook Road yesterday saw a stranger standing on the road, but he took to the woods when the team approached.

Robbery is the only motive for the crime. It was known Mrs. Dutcher had $500 or $600 in the house. A few days ago she changed a considerable sum for a well-known gentleman of Calhoun's Mills.

The hope prevails that the little girl will recover sufficiently to give an account of the tragedy, although possibly she was struck before mother and son were touched.

The feeling here is that the little Dutcher girl should be removed to Moncton, or put in some other person's charge.

HOPE HE WILL GET IT.

DOW VANDINE'S CLAIM TO PROPERTY IN LONG ISLAND.

The Vanderbilts Must Give it Up—Perhaps.

[SPECIAL TO GLOBE.]

FREDERICTON, Sept. 12.

Dow Vandine, of the custom house, is home from a trip to New York convinced that he is one of rightful heirs to valuable lands in the heart of Long Island City now in the occupation of Wm. K. Vanderbilt. Mr. Vandine claims that his great-grandfather emigrated from Holland 156 years ago with three sons and three daughters, settling in Long Island, where he many years afterwards acquired an immense amount of land comprising the tract now claimed by his descendants, and that he leased this land for a long term of years to Commodore Vanderbilt, grandfather of Wm. K. Vanderbilt, and who also emigrated from Holland and in time married one of old Mr. Vandine's daughters. When the Revolutionary war broke out Mr. Vandine, with his three sons and two remaining daughters, came to New Brunswick, and in time located at Grand Lake, where he died and is buried. After his death his three sons and two daughters went back to Long Island. But one of them, Arthur, returned in a short time to Grand Lake, where he passed the remainder of his life. He left seven sons, of whom Joseph, father of Dow Vandine, of this city, and Arthur, of Detroit, was one. The lease of the land in question is about expiring, and Dow Vandine is communicating with other surviving descendants of the alleged lessor with the view of taking steps to secure the property.

A REAL LIFE ROMANCE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.

In his election on Tuesday to the legislature of Vermont Dr. Seward Webb makes his political bow to the American public.

This story of his rise is prettier than any romance of the loves of the sons and daughters of New York's millionaire families.

In 1890 he was attached to the Vanderbilt clinic in St. Luke's Hospital and was in charge of the surgical patients of that institution. To this clinic Miss Lila Vanderbilt, the youngest daughter of W. H. Vanderbilt, was a constant visitor. One day a little girl was brought into the hospital with a broken leg.

The interne had a soft heart and a sympathetic nature, and the sweet face of the child attracted him. He was always by her bedside, and watched the case with a solicitude that touched the child-heart of the patient.

The girl began to love him and spoke of him to Miss Vanderbilt in terms of extravagance and aroused the young woman's interest.

So, too, had she spoken to the doctor of the "kind young lady" who had so often visited her. One day the little patient relapsed. The case was critical and the doctor, alarmed for her life, watched at her bedside for hours.

While the doctor was thus engaged Miss Vanderbilt entered the room and approached the bed. She saw the handsome young man and looked inquiringly at the little girl. The patient smiled. "This is the kind doctor," she explained, "and this is the kind young lady."

Miss Vanderbilt extended her hand and clasped the hand of the man who was to become her husband.

Thus it was that a kind heart opened to Seward Webb. He did not long remain an interne in the hospital. To be one of the Vanderbilts means to be a part of the great railroad system owned by the family. Webb had studied medicine. He must now study railroading, for Miss Vanderbilt loved him. A firm—Worden & Webb—was created for him and opened business in Wall street.

The match was a happy one, and was approved by Mr. Vanderbilt.

How substantially it was approved was made known when, on the day of the wedding, the couple were presented with the stately house at 680 Fifth avenue.

When the older Vanderbilt died Mrs. Webb inherited $15,000,000. Meanwhile, the young doctor, preferring railroads to medicine, had progressed in the craft of Wall street, and had stepped into the position which his wife's wealth entitled him to.

SENT BACK.—When the steamer Cumberland arrived on Friday night, Detective Ring arrested two boys who were passengers, viz.: Charles Henderson and Fred. Comeau, from Melrose, Mass. Henderson's father, who is a train despatcher on the Boston & Maine Railway, had telegraphed to Chief Clark that Charles had run away from home with young Comeau, and asked that he be detained. The boy was sent back home to-day. Comeau, who says he is going to Fredericton, was released.
