ST. JOHN, N. B., JULY 29, 1896.

LOCAL POLITICS.

In a press interview on Tuesday Hon. Mr. Emmerson, speaking with regard to the Local government, said that "the time might come when the principles involved would call for a cleavage of parties on the old lines of Liberal and Conservative," but "that hour does not seem to me to have yet arrived." There is not, apparently, a great difference of opinion between the view of Mr. Emmerson and the GLOBE. Mr. Emmerson merely thinks the time has not arrived to conduct the Local administration on party lines. The GLOBE thinks the time arrived long ago. The King government and the Fraser government in this province were Conservative administrations. The Local government of Nova Scotia, although it may have only Crown lands or minerals to manage and roads and bridges to maintain, has been on party lines for many years. In Prince Edward Island the division in Local politics is on Dominion lines. In Ontario the Local parties are divided on Dominion lines. In New Brunswick for some years and now the government is a composite one—an arrangement which, of course, suits the par ies to it, but it is not wholesome. It is a common report in this province to-day—and we have not yet seen it denied—that as the successor to Mr. Blair was arranged, so also it is agreed or understood who is to succeed Mr. Mitchell, an arrangement by the politicians entirely regardless of the wishes, desires or aspirations of the people.

Mr. Dunn was on Tuesday elected to succeed himself, as representative of his constituency in the House of Assembly, with the office of Surveyor General added. Mr. Dunn is a good Liberal and the Liberals of St. John are heartily glad of his achievement of new honors and emoluments. The Conservatives made no attempt to defeat him. In the present condition of affairs the attempt would be useless; and, so long as Mr. Dunn is supporting a Conservative Premier, they are probably quite well enough satisfied with the conditions.

ADIEU!

There was a formal farewell of Rev. Dr. Macrae by his congregation on Tuesday evening. Despite the glory of a beautiful summer night, which tempted people out-of-doors, and notwithstanding the warmth of a crowded room, the large assemblage listened eagerly to address, replies and speeches, and waited until the last strains of Auld Lang Syne were played and sung before those composing it shook the reverend gentleman's hand in a formal but friendly leave-taking. More than once during the evening some sympathetic utterance sent a thrill through the audience, and several times the sorrow of parting was best expressed by a gentle tear drop. Not only did the congregation of St. Stephen's church show its great regard for its minister, but Episcopalian, Baptist and Methodist, as well as Presbyterian, ministers had hearty expressions of good will to utter, while there were many citizens present to express by their attendance their appreciation of the worth and the character of the man who, after a residence of nearly a quarter of a century in this community, leaves St. John with the best feelings towards him of all creeds and classes. Aside altogether from his ministerial work, Rev. Dr. Macrae has been a most useful and excellent citizen. A scholar, a man of ready wit, a close observer of the events of the times, a broad-minded student of affairs, he was ever ready when called upon to do his share of society or public work. And he was ready without being obtrusive; willing without ever making men feel that he took up a burden for them which placed men under obligation to him. In this is the essence of true patriotism. From a truly intellectual standpoint our city is the poorer by his removal, and in many ways his withdrawal from St. John creates a vacancy which will not be readily filled. In his new sphere we hope there will be much of comfort and pleasure for him; that he will work hard in the discharge of his new duties is undoubted; that Morrin College and Quebec will be greatly benefited by his accession to the Principalship of the former is sure as the sunshine.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the Thomas case, reported in the GLOBE's despatches on Tuesday, is a legal triumph for Attorney General Longley, of Nova Scotia—a triumph the more noteworthy because he was opposed by the Hon. Edward Blake. The case was argued about a year ago, and the decision is of some importance, as it deals with the powers and privileges of the local legislatures. David R. Thomas, while Mayor of Truro, was summoned to appear before the Nova Scotia House of Assembly for an alleged libel on one of the members. After making his statement he retired, and later refused to obey an order of the House. He was charged with contempt for doing this, and was imprisoned for two days. He soon afterwards brought an action against the members of the House who had voted for his imprisonment, and won a verdict for $200 in the lower court. The Local Legislature had passed an act indemnifying its members, but this, Thomas's counsel claimed, was ultra vires. The Local government appealed to the Provincial Supreme Court, which divided equally. Then they appealed to the British tribunal, which upset the Nova Scotia judgment and affirmed the right of the Local Legislature to make laws for the protection of its members.

A GOOD CAREER.

The late Joseph Wesley Harper, of the firm of Messrs. Harper & Brothers, publishers, New York, was a master of his craft. A son of one of the founders of the house he was able to do what his father was not, enter college. He graduated at Columbia, so that he had the groundwork upon which to base the literary knowledge so necessary in his business. Then he learned the art of a compositor, so that he might have a practical knowledge of his craft; and after that he went into the business department of the house. Thus, by active work in the different departments, he became familiar with all the details of the business. Finally, he was placed in charge of the literary department. Here he became acquainted with great and eminent authors, whom he was able to counsel. It is something in a man's life to have been associated with Dr. Henry Griswold, Paul du Chaillu, Dr. John W. Draper, George William Curtis and many others, to say nothing of acquaintanceship with many English authors of reputation whose books the Harpers handled. His classical knowledge, his cultured skill, and his business habits helped him to success and made him useful to the authors whose books he published. The tendency among too many young men of to-day is to get away from work; few that take a college degree will take up a trade afterwards; the desire is to put the day through as easily as possible, so as to give the evenings to trivialities and to idle enjoyments. This is not the way men succeed, nor is it the means by which success is achieved. Mr. Harper's father was a man of considerable means, which he had achieved by hard labor; the sons of that generation continued in the father's work, improving it by means of knowledge without letting up in any way upon the industry, without which knowledge is of little use; and now the firm has its third generation of men, combining the influence and the skill and knowledge of the past with the dash and vim which the youthful vigor of this age can add.

Kings county, N. S., Conservatives met on Monday evening at Kentville to select a candidate to oppose Hon. Mr. Borden, Minister of Militia. No representative man was found willing to engage in the forlorn hope of defeating the new minister, but Mr. D. B. Woodworth gladly accepted the chance to secure prominence in his party again; and was nominated. The contest will be a walk-over.

GENERAL NEWS.

Aubrey De Vere is paying his annual visit to London, and his venerable figure, according to a writer in the London Chronicle, is to be seen each afternoon in the Athenæum Club. Though eighty-two years of age, Mr. De Vere still takes a keen interest in current literature and life. He is one of the very few men still living who walked and talked with Wordsworth. From him Wordsworth first heard Tennyson's lines "Of old sat Freedom on the heights" and allowed they were "stately." Mr. De Vere has contributed a chapter of reminiscences to the forthcoming biography of Lord Tennyson, his friend of fifty years.

As a result of the donation of £70,000 of the Women's jubilee offering to Her Majesty Queen Victoria the establishment of a Central Nurses' Training institution was effected. Her Majesty recently held a reception, attended by five hundred and thirty young women, who are known as the "Queen's Nurses," and who are devoting their energy to the advancement of the good work of providing the sick poor with the delicate and skilful ministry that was formerly the portion of the rich alone. The money raised to celebrate our noble Queen's jubilee year was not wasted.

The London Sunday Magazine says of Ian Maclaren: "It is rather startling to learn that the Rev. John Watson, the Presbyterian minister, the creator of 'Drumtochty,' is not a Scotchman at all. He was born in Manningtree, Essex, so that he is not even a North-countryman. But he was educated at Perth, Sterling and Edinburgh, and his first parish was Logiealmond, a village between Perth and Crieff, which is the original of 'Drumtochty.' He only stayed three years in the parish. It is twenty years since he quitted it for a southern charge, and it was only the other day that on the appeal of Dr. Robertson-Nicoll he resurrected his reminiscences in the story which has obtained such a world-wide celebrity."

A curious story is told about one of the paintings just disposed of at the sale of the late Lord Leighton's effects. It is the large picture of Orpheus wooing his wife from Hades, painted by Lord Leighton, and exhibited under the title of "The Triumph of Music" in the Academy of 1856. It followed his first great success, the "Cimabue Procession" picture, exhibited in 1855, and bought by the Queen, but it was received with a volley of hostile criticisms from the press. The young painter was cut to the quick; indeed, he always was sensitive under censure, even where, as in this case, he did not think it was intelligent or just. The picture passed out of sight, after its first exhibition, and not even his most familiar friends knew what had become of it. Lately it was found rolled up in a cellar at his house, and now it has been hurriedly mounted and framed, it bears no sign of the wear and tear of forty year.

PERILS OF THE FISH TRADE.

[London Chronicle.]

Nothing seems easier on the face of it than to keep a fried fish shop, provided you can stand the peculiary adhesive smell appertaining to the business. But it is not so simple as it seems. A case that was tried at the Bow county court on Saturday shows that success depends upon technical and mercantile facilities, and considerable force of character.

The plaintiff in this case wanted back the money he had given for the business—a snug little connection, the good-will of which cost £6 8s.—on the ground of misrepresentation as to the trade, but the defendant contended that the plaintiff's utter ignorance of fish anatomy and Shadwell prices unfitted him for his position. For one thing, he did not know how to cut the head off a fish; and then, again, when he went to Shadwell Market, what did he do but pay the price they asked for the fish.

"Fancy doing that at Shadwell," the witness for the defendant remarked; "he made me wild to see him, that he did. Why, when they asks 7s. for a trunk of fish I says: 'No, cully; four bob's the price,' but not he—blowed if he didn't go and pay the seven bob."

In the face of such evidence as this there was nothing to be said. It should be a warning to those who think that the fried fish trade "comes natural."

AUSTRALIA'S GREAT HEAT.

The Highest Temperature Ever Known in That Country.

In many of the inland townships in New South Wales the inhabitants have become panic stricken at the great heat, says the Sydney Herald, Eye witnesses describe the alarm as taking a superstitious form. On some stations the remarkable sight was witnessed of the Australian magpies—wildest of birds—taking shelter among the domestic fowls of the yard in their endeavors to escape from the fierce heat. Their behavior was that of dazed and stupefied creatures. They are perfectly indifferent to the presence of human beings. Perhaps the most striking effect of the unexampled heat was furnished from a place named Nyngan, from whence came the brief and pointed message, "Mosquitoes are being killed by the heat."

A thermometer hung in the shade at the coolest point of the River Darling, the largest stream in New South Wales, registered 107 degrees as the lowest at the coolest hour of the night and 129 degrees as the highest during the heat of the day for these twenty-six days. During this same time the heat one day in the city of Adelaide was 172 degrees.

HORRORS OF RUSSIAN SUPERSTITION

Some peasants were tried at Moultana, in the government of Viatka, Russia, recently, on a charge of murder, committed by way of human sacrifice to the heathen gods whose worship is still curiously blended with the Christian superstition of the people in many provinces. The prisoners were acquitted for want of evidence. From Ostrogoshk there now comes the report of another extraordinary murder trial, which, though of a different character to that of Moultana, goes to show how rankly superstitious are some of the beliefs still prevalent among the Russian peasantry. Two peasants who had taken to dishonest practices, such as horse stealing, fell back upon an ancient belief that, if traced, they could render themselves invisible by holding a lighted taper or candle composed of human tallow. To obtain these ghastly lights the two thieves waylaid and murdered a young villager of 18 years of age. They disemboweled the body and carried off the intestines and other fatty organs. Whilst melting these down in their lodgings they were surprised by their landlady, who, being suspicious of the peculiar odor pervading the room, and having heard of the murder, communicated with the police. The culprits were arrested and confessed their crime.

The many friends who have so graciously remembered the Knights from year to year on this occasion will kindly send their donation of flowers to St. Andrew's Rink Wednesday, 5th, and Thursday morning, the 6th inst. Friends wishing the Knights to send for flowers will kindly notify the committee at the rink.

NEW ST. JUDE'S CHURCH is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected will be opened in less than a month. The carpenters have now finished their work and the edifice is in the hands of Mr. Geo. R. Craigie, who intends to make the interior as handsome as skill and good paints can, and when completed the church will be one of the prettiest in Carleton. Comfortable pews are to be put in.

EAGLE ROCK is one of the prettiest places in New Brunswick and cannot be surpassed as a site for picnics. It contains many pretty and shady nooks, and a refreshing stream runs through the grounds. Good fishing can be had in the near vicinity. On Wednesday next, Aug. 5, the Carleton Presbyterian church will hold its annual picnic at Eagle Rock. Great preparations are being made for an enjoyable day, and, apart from the native attractiveness of the scene, there will be running races and jumping, archery, quoit throwing, air gun shooting and other sports, for which beautiful prizes are offered. This picnic should be largely attended. Trains will leave Carleton in the morning and afternoon.

A JULY WEDDING.—At the residence of Hon. James D. Lewin, Lancaster Heights, at two o'clock to-day, his granddaughter, Miss Estelle E. Lewin, was united in marriage with Mr. Charles R. Fisher, who is well known in musical circles in St. John, and was formerly organist of St. Andrew's church in this city. The bride was given away by her grandfather. Her bridesmaid was her cousin, Miss Bessie Lewin, and Mr. Fisher was supported by Mr. Fred. Macneill. Rev. George W. Fisher, of the Fairville Methodist church, performed the ceremony. The house was beautifully decorated with evergreens, ferns and flowers, and the scene in the parlor at the ceremony was a very pretty one, the couple standing under a large bell of clover and sweet peas. After the marriage service the guests—who were limited almost entirely to relatives and immediate friends of the bride—were entertained at luncheon. Miss Lewin, who was married in a dress of pale blue Dresden silk with lace trimmings, made a very beautiful bride. The bridesmaid wore a yellow muslin gown. The young couple left by the afternoon train for Fredericton, after which they will go to Nova Scotia, spending the honeymoon there. Later in the season they will take up their residence at the Hollins Institute (where Mr. Fisher is professor of music), Hollins, near Roanoke, Virginia. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and beautiful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher carry with them the good wishes of hosts of friends in St. John for their future happiness.

The following letters are self-explanatory:

"THE MEDICAL RECORD" for the week ending July 18th presents to its readers a number of original articles. Its editorials discuss interesting topics, and the correspondence contains letters from London and Berlin. The society reports give a full account of each of the three days' proceedings of the American Laryngological Association's meeting, and the departments devoted to "News of the Week," "Progress of Medical Science," "New Instruments" and "Medical News" all present items of particular interest. This issue also contains the obituary notice of Samuel Sexton, M. D., of New York, an eminent otologist, whose research in his specialty had aided for him world-wide recognition. Messrs. Wm. Wood & Co., publishers, 43 to 47 East Tenth street, New York.

"THE NEW MAGDALEN."—At the Opera House on Tuesday evening, a large audience for the second time greeted Miss Ethel Tucker and her strong company, and left at the conclusion of the piece thoroughly satisfied with the graceful accomplishments of the actors. "The New Magdalen" was put on and is a very attractive and emotional play. Miss Tucker, in her representation of Mercy Merrick, held the attention of the audience and won repeated applause. Miss Muir and Mr. Meldon were special favorites and sustained their part very creditably. Miss Harmon has many acquaintances in the audience who enjoy her clever work. She is a Calais lady who has frequently visited this city and is personally well known. The general support was excellent. To-night "The Lost Paradise" will be put on and will no doubt draw another crowded house. The play is one of the strongest pieces of the company's repertoire and is produced with a reality that is pleasant and striking.

THROUGH THE ROOF.—People about the I. C. R. depot this morning enjoyed a good laugh at the expense of George Maloney, who was engaged doing some housecleaning. The roof of the ticket office is of glass and there are strong broad divisions on which the workmen stand when cleaning. Mr. Maloney was at work when his feet slipped and he fell, striking the softest part of his anatomy against the glass. It broke beneath his weight and he slid through the opening, his body going downward, with his head and feet sticking in the air. Fortunately the opening was not large enough to slip through, but he went down quite a distance before being firmly pinioned. Those who were near, while rejoicing that he had not suffered any injury, could not suppress their amusement over his awkward position, his frantic struggles to get free, and his stammered calls for assistance. He finally pulled himself up. Ticket Agent Hanington was in his office when the accident occurred and narrowly escaped being hit by the shower of broken glass.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

Mayor Robertson received the following letter to-day:

OTTAWA, 27th July, 1896.

SIR,—Mr. J. V. Ellis has telegraphed to the Hon. Minister of Public Works that the city of St. John is ready for the dredge New Dominion, which has just completed work at Spoon Island.

The Hon. the Minister of Public Works has decided to assist the city of St. John in the improvement of the harbor in connection with the deep water service, but he desires to know exactly what the city intends doing—particularly in the way of dredging—as the dredge New Dominion is not a suitable one for deep work.

I have written Mr. E. T. P. Shewen, one of our engineers at St. John, to call on you and ascertain the nature of the improvements which are contemplated, and if you would be so kind as to give him all details he will report at once, and arrangements will be made as soon as possible to assist in your work.

Yours obediently,
LOUIS COSTE,
Chief Engineer.

His Worship the Mayor, St. John, N. B.

No information has yet been received as to whether or not the Dominion government will permit a foreign dredge to come in in bond.

THAT RELAY RIDE.

Mayor Robertson's Message Got to Halifax this Morning.

The greeting of Mayor Robertson to the Mayor and citizens of Halifax was delivered to Mayor McPherson at 9 o'clock this morning. The delay of seven hours which occurred Tuesday morning broke up all the arrangements, and when the message was started on its way again at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the relay men were nearly all absent from their posts, and those who were carrying the message were compelled to rest all night. This morning Mayor Robertson received the following acknowledgment:

HALIFAX, July 29.

The Mayor, St. John:

Fraternal greetings received at 9 o'clock this morning. Halifax reciprocates contents. Will write to-day. D. MCPHERSON,
Mayor.

Wheelmen and others who have been interested in this effort will find the explanation of the delay in the following despatch:

HALIFAX, July 29.

The message of greeting from the Mayor of St. John to the Mayor of Halifax was delivered to the latter this morning. E. N. Rhodes and G. Douglas, the relay carriers from Amherst, were detailed to carry the message from Oxford to West Chester, but being in a hurry to get to Halifax and somewhat overcome by the ride they stopped at River Philip, where they boarded a train after delivering the message to a local wheelman named Schurman, with instructions to take it to West Chester. Schurman, it appears, got tangled up amid the country lanes and in desperation left it at a country store called "Collingwood Corner," where it was eventually located by McLean, of Truro, at 2 p. m. yesterday, who brought it to West Chester, but not without accident, as in coming down the mountain side at a terrific rate he was thrown violently to the ground and partially stunned. He arrived at Truro at 4.34 in the afternoon, riding 34 miles in 2 hours and 35 minutes over heavy roads. Haliburton carried the message from Truro to Brookfield, where he delivered it to Harris, who in turn conveyed it to Elmsdale, where he was joined by Symonds. These last two journeyed together to Wellington, where both wheelmen were obliged to rest for the remainder of the night. Symonds eventually bringing the paper on to Halifax by wheel this morning, delivering it to the Chief of Police with instructions to deliver the same to the Mayor at the earliest opportunity. Haliburton says that when the break occurred the relay men were only two hours behind time. Douglas and Rhodes are the delinquents charged with the delay. But for their erratic actions and blundering, according to official statement, the message should have reached the city at noon yesterday. As it is, the various clubs interested have gone to needless trouble and expense, which is to be regretted.
