THE MONEY MARKET.

THE LOW CONDITION OF BANK RESERVES.

Comparison of the Prices of Leading Stocks with a Year Ago.

[Henry Clews & Co.'s Circular.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.

At the moment the main element controlling conditions in Wall street is the state of the money market. The silver agitation and populo-democratic politics have about exchanged their force and the conviction is gaining strength that these matters may be safely left for settlement at the November election. But just here, when one source of downward pressure is being relaxed, comes in a new cause of disturbance. The banks have to face a low condition of their reserves at the time when the agricultural states are urgent in their demands for currency to move the crops. Ordinarily that demand has taken from 20 to 30 millions between July and October and the present surplus of lawful money in sight available for meeting it is less than 10 millions.

How this state of the surplus compares with that of the same date of late years will appear from the following statement:

	Surplus Reserve.	Ratio of Res've to Deposits.
Aug. 22, 1896	$ 9,300,000	26.8
" 24, 1895	37,600,000	31.5
" 25, 1894	66,700,000	36.4
" 26, 1893	*6,770,000	23.1
" 27, 1892	9,900,000	27.0
" 22, 1891	14,[illegible]00,000	28.5
" 23, 1890	*2,500,000	24.9
" 31, 1889	4,800,000	26.1
" 25, 1888	21,000,000	30.1
" 27, 1887	4,900,000	26.4
" 28, 1886	[illegible],900,000	26.3
" 29, 1885	56,900,000	39.5
" 30, 1884	31,100,000	35.2

*Deficit.

This comparison is far less unfavorable to the present condition than might be inferred from the tone of feeling with which it is regarded. In six out of the last twelve years, the surplus in the second half of August has been less than ten millions; and, in five of the dozen years, the ratio of reserve to deposits was lower than it is now. Indeed, the present reserve is not sufficiently below the normal limit to warrant any serious apprehension for the future of the money market. The years when the figures were notably higher than now were periods of unhealthy redundance following collapses; as for instance in 1894 and 1895 which reflected the redundancy following the panic of 1893; and in 1884 and 1885, which presented an accumulation of currency arising from the crisis in the spring of 1884.

This fall money movement is always largely self-regulative. It is an almost invariable rule that foreign gold comes in to take the place in the banks of the paper sent to the interior. The European payments for our new crops of grain and cotton turn the exchanges in our favor and gold comes in more freely than at any other season of the year. And, if the pressure on the home money market becomes acute, it is found easy to get relief through issues of 60 day foreign bills against deposit of collateral. It thus turns out that, in four years out of five, the withdrawal of legal tenders to the interior is compensated by the receipt of gold from abroad.

It is not to be overlooked that, owing to the general contraction of business, the borrowing wants of merchants and industrialists are very moderate; a fact which is clear from the loans and discounts of the clearing house being forty eight millions less than they were a year ago. Stock Exchange wants have also been reduced to a very low scale, partly owing to the very small amount of stock afloat on the market and partly from the extremely low range of prices. For the purpose of illustrating the latter point, and also as affording an exhibition of the disastrous effects of the silver agitation upon the value of corporate investments, the lowest recent prices of stocks in comparison with those of a year ago are here presented:

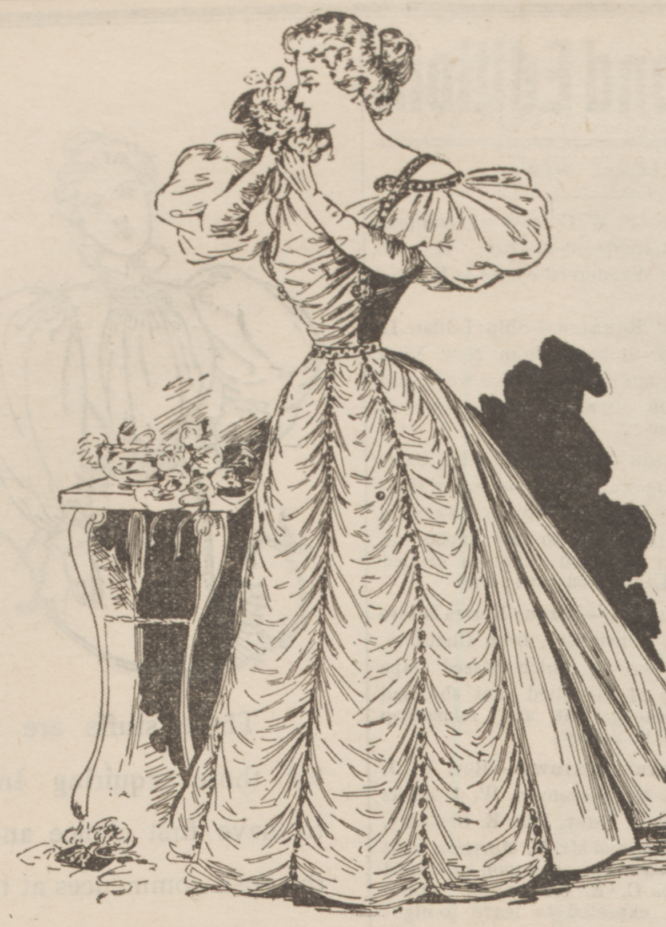
With such an abnormal shrinkage of values as these quotations exhibit, the wants of Wall street will be easily satisfied; and it is a reasonable question whether the bargains which such prices afford may not lead to foreign purchases that will increase the influx of gold from Europe. In the event of an increase of confidence in a conservative outcome of the election, this latter result would be highly probable.

The latest reports indicate that, for the last two weeks, the gold shipped from Europe for this port amounts to $10,000,000; and exchange continues weak. Estimates place the probable total imports during the next few weeks at 20 to 25 millions; and, considering the lightness of the merchandise imports and the largeness of the grain surplus awaiting export and that cotton is now selling at 8 cents, this does not seem an unreasonable estimate. Any extreme stringency in money thus seems highly improbable. At present, however, these are only probabilities, and therefore have but a partial effect upon the stock market; as they become certainties confidence will reappear, and a recovery in prices will be in order.



FOR AN EVENING RECEPTION.

Gold Passementerie, Cream Satin and Mousseline de Soie Combined.

It is now considered well for every young woman, no matter how limited her list of acquaintances, to have one dress cut low. Indeed, some go to the extreme of wearing these dresses at home in the evening. When the dress is merely cut V front and back the fashion is very pretty, and one which we would all wish to see advanced, for nothing makes a pretty girl so attractive as the inward consciousness that she is looking her best.

For formal affairs the dress is cut with a low, round neck, to reveal the graceful shoulders which attention to hygiene is giving our maidens. The gown should have a lacy effect, and just at present artificial flowers may be worn, although some, very justly, object to them.

No gown could be more becoming, or more typical of the season's modes, than that in the picture. It is of cream mousseline de soie, draped softly on the front breadth of the skirt between bands of gold passementerie. The back of the skirt hangs in pleats of the satin—cream in color, like the silk muslin. The side forms and back of the bodice are of deep gold uncut velvet, while the vest matches the skirt front. Squatty puffs of silk muslin form the sleeves, with straps of gold passementerie holding them in place.

A charming gown for a golden-haired maid.

RUIN WROUGHT BY A THIEF

NEW YORK DIAMOND DEALER A HOPELESS BANKRUPT.

Julius M. Lyon, Robbed of $150,000 Worth of Gems by a Trusted Clerk, a Relative, Forced to Assign—The Jewels Stolen and Sold for Two-Thirds of Their Value.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.

Julius M. Lyon, wholesale dealer in diamonds, 20 Maiden lane, has made an assignment, caused by the fact that he has been robbed of more than $150,000 worth of diamonds by a trusted employe.

Mr. Wallack, of the firm of Wallack & Schiel, says the thief was a relative of Mr. Lyon.

The robbery is one of the most remarkable that has ever come under the notice of the police. The employe had the entire confidence of Mr. Lyon, and had access to the safe and all the jewels in the store.

The first theft, so far as can be discovered, took place two years ago. Then the thief took thirty brilliants, worth $40 each, and sold them for $800. He entered on the books the sale of thirty brilliants at $45 each, or a total of $1,350, to a firm well known to Mr. Lyon, and which had excellent credit. According to the books, they were to be paid for in four months.

When Mr. Lyon examined the books this entry appeared all right. The next theft was larger. In fact, the amounts taken had to be larger, as the thief was obliged to turn in some money as the alleged bills became due. He generally received, it is thought, about two-thirds of the value of stones. At times he would mark the books when a bill of $1,200 or $1,500 became due, "$500 paid, balance in a month." Finally the amounts to be paid in became so large that it was dangerous to continue the false entries.

It is the custom of Maiden lane jewellers to let persons known to be responsible have diamonds to sell. They are charged on the books to them at their selling price, and either the diamonds or the money must be returned. They are then said to be out on memorandum.

The employe would take the name of some well-known man and charge him on the books $1,000 worth of diamonds on memorandum. Then he took the stones out and sold them for what he could get.

When so long a time had elapsed as he dared permit he would mark on the books the return of the diamonds and charge them again to another person on memorandum. This was an easier method than the other and was kept up for several months. A hasty examination has shown that more than $30,000 worth of diamonds had been charged as sent out on memorandum.

Discovery came last Monday while the employe was out.

Mr. Lyon at once examined his books, then went to several firms who were charged with diamonds and found that the entries were false. He returned to his store, sent his employes away, telegraphed for his counsel and closed the doors.

Letters were sent to all the persons against whom there was a charge for diamonds. Already replies have come from this city alone which show that more than $100,000 of the charges on the books are false. No replies from out of the city have been received yet, and these may run the total up $20,000 or $30,000.

Instead of being worth more than $100,000 as he had supposed Julius M. Lyon was a hopeless bankrupt. The assignment was made and the creditors notified. Since then every known agency in the city has been brought to work for the recovery of the diamonds.

The creditors have been as much interested in this as Mr. Lyon. It is doubtful, however, if any of the stones are ever recovered.

THE SONG OF THE OX WAGON.

[St. James Gazette.]

This is the song of the straining span, the tune of the tattered tilt,
Of the slow essays in perilous ways of the wagon stoutly built,
The song that was sung in the ancient tongue when the days of the world dawned grey,
The creaking croon of the disselboom, the song that is sung to-day.

East and west and south and north the first-born herdsmen spread,
From the waters clear of the high Pamir, from the ancient Oxus bed;
On and on to the plains of the Don their creaking wagon ran,
And the disselboom showed out the doom that has given the earth to man.

Over the sands of the thirsty lands, under a brazen sky,
Where the only law men bow before is the law of the assegai;
Forth and forth to the dim far north where the broad Zambesi flows,
Still to-day in the ancient way the rumbling wagon goes

Through the forest ways where the wild things graze, the dappled, the fawn, the grey;
Where the tall "Kameel" at sunset steal, like ghosts to the silent vley,
Where the hous drink at the reedy brink of the slowly shallowing pan,
The disselboom shows out the doom that has given the earth to man.

Slow and slow the wagons go by thicket and thorn and pool,
But their thin path traced on the homeless waste is the road of the coming rule:
And in dread of that track the wild slinks back, and the thief and the beast give place,
To the farm and field of the yearly yield of the men of the wiser race.

East and west and south and north, from the days of the dawn till now,
Ere grass was burned or sod was turned by the share of the furrowing plough,
This was the tune of the tattered tilt, the song of the straining span,
How the disselboom points out the doom that has given the earth to man.

A Feature of Phenix.

"I am struck," said a well known traveler the other day, "with a few features in Phenix that mark no other town on the coast. One of them is the custom of posting up black bordered notices of invitations to funerals. I've seen that done in some of the little towns in the gulf states, but nowhere else. I know it's a sort of habit only from a conversation I had with an old timer. He said that about 20 years ago, when the town was new, there were no newspapers, and even later the only vehicle of news was a weekly paper. There was no ice to be had, and burials had to be done quickly, especially in the summer time. The only way to bring the news of the death and funeral to the attention of the public was by means of notices stuck on the posts, and the custom has continued to this date, when no necessity exists."—Arizona Republican.

A LAWYER HIRED BY THE DAY.

And the Reason He Quit This Job Precisely on Time.

With the name of Rufus Lockwood is recalled to mind one of the most extraordinary geniuses that the state of California ever produced. It is many years now since Lockwood held sway in the courts of San Francisco. He was, in his day, perhaps the best lawyer in the state, and it was only because of his utter indifference to pecuniary matters that he did not leave a large fortune behind him.

Lockwood went at one time to Horace Hawes, a very distinguished lawyer, and the author of the consolidation act which is now in force. Hawes had a reputation for close figuring, and Lockwood knew it. He said, "Mr. Hawes, I'll hire myself to you for one year from date at a salary of $25 a day, payable every night."

"All right," said Hawes, delighted to engage the services of the brightest mind in the state at so low a figure—for the salary was not a great one in those days—and the bargain was sealed. It was 11 o'clock in the morning. But from that time on, it is said, Hawes never missed an opportunity of reminding Lockwood of his bondage. He would say, in the presence of others, "Lockwood, go fetch that book," "Lockwood, do this or that," etc. Lockwood never said a word, but did as he was bidden, and Hawes enjoyed his triumph.

Finally it came to the day when the year's engagement terminated. There was a most important lawsuit on hand, of which Lockwood had made a careful study. No one in the state could possibly have handled it as he did. Well, on the day in question Lockwood stood in court, an array of lawbooks in front of him, and expounded his views in masterly fashion. Suddenly he looked up at the clock and saw that it was the hour of 11. Closing the book from which he was quoting, he turned to Hawes, who was sitting beside him, and said: "Mr. Hawes, a year ago today at this hour I contracted to work for you one year. My time's up, the contract is canceled and I am going."

Thus did he repay his master for the humiliation heaped upon him. Hawes was in the greatest consternation. He could not possibly take up the thread of the case where Lockwood had left it, and he begged and implored him to proceed. But Lockwood remembered, and he turned a deaf ear to all persuasions. He kept his word; the contract had expired.—San Francisco Bulletin.

A Square Drink.

But of all the attractive features of this charming spot, Rothenburg, the annual festspiel, celebrating the capture of the town by Tilly during the Thirty Years' war, ranks first. At that time, and indeed until 1803, Rothenburg was a free city, taking an active part in the peasants' war of 1525 and in the Thirty Years' war of the following century. It was in the course of the latter, in 1631, that the celebrated Tilly appeared before Rothenburg and demanded its capitulation. This the citizens refused, with the result that the gallant little town was besieged and taken. Tilly and his generals proceeded to the rathhaus and demanded the municipal keys of the burgomaster. At the same time Tilly imposed a fine of 30,000 thalers and garrisoned the town with his soldiers.

The burgomaster pleaded in vain for some mitigation of the penalty, until the victorious general, after remaining for some time unmoved by his entreaties, conceived the extraordinary notion of offering to restore the freedom of the town on condition that one of the inhabitants should come forward and empty at one draft an immense beaker of wine, containing about 3½ liters (over three quarts.) This was an unheard of feat, even in those hard drinking days, and for some time his offer remained unaccepted. The opportunity of freeing the town from a foreign yoke seemed, however, too important to be lost, and accordingly a patriotic citizen named Nusch resolved to attempt the difficult task imposed by the conqueror. As a matter of fact, he drained the beaker at one draft, and, although tradition relates that a severe illness followed the feat, still he saved the town, for Tilly kept his word and restored the independence of Rothenburg.—Chambers' Journal.

London Cabbies' Trick.

"Like a ride, sir? Jump up. Nothing to pay."

The writer was taking a stroll along the Thames embankment one fine evening after supper when the driver of a smart looking four wheeler pulled across the road and hailed him thus curiously.

I jumped on the box beside him, and, noticing my look of inquiry, he explained: "You see, sir, we cabbies are not allowed to drive empty through the Strand during this half hour just as the theater goers are coming out. Of course there is a dead certainty of getting a fare now if we can only manage to get into the street. So to prevent the place getting filled with cabs there is a policeman at every side turning with strict orders to turn us back as soon as there are enough on the bank.

"But no bobby in the world can stop a man driving a fare into the Strand, and so we ask a likely looking customer to oblige us and jump in while we drive past the constable. Once in the street, we are pretty sure of picking up a fare before we are noticed and ordered out again.

"Thank you, sir, very much," he added as I alighted a few doors from the Villiers street end of the crowded thoroughfare, "and good night! Cab, sir? Yes, sir," and he quickly drove off with his new fare.—Pearson's Weekly.
