ANGLICAN CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

Calendar for August.

16th—Eleventh Sunday after Trinity.
22nd—Vigil.
23rd—Twelfth Sunday after Trinity.
24th—St. Bartholomew, Apostle.
29th—Beheading of St. John Baptist.
30th—Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.

It is not generally known that many public houses in English parishes are managed by the clergyman in the cause of sobriety and economy. At Scayne's Hill, Sussex, the Rev. F. Willett runs the Anchor Inn, which he has placed under a manager with a fixed salary. Pure beer and plain food is on sale, and there is a club room with a cricket ground attached. The vicar has found profane language and intemperance, as the result of his direction of the house, plainly on the decrease. The Rev. Osbert Mordaun has managed the only public house in Hampton Lucy, Warwickshire, for the last fifteen years. He spends the profits on behalf of the villagers, in accordance with the idea of the Gothenburg system. On Lord Spencer's estate, at Harlestone, Northamptonshire, the rector, the Rev. W. Bury, works a public house on the co-operative plan, in which the customers share the profits. The model club and public house on the Prince of Wales's property at Sandringham is also under the control of the rector of the place, with the hearty support of His Royal Highness. When clerical interference in the public house or saloon business has been so keenly and ruthlessly ridiculed in America, it is instructive to know that in England the plan has been in some instances successfully tried.

Those who have worked so long and so perseveringly for the restoration of the independence of the see of Bristol have now the fulfilment of their hopes in view. The large sum, about $400,000, which has to be raised for the endowment of any new see in England, has been given or promised. A house in Bristol has been presented for the bishop's residence; and the only cause of delay in the appointment of the bishop is the necessity of raising another $25,000 for the alteration and adornment of the see house, and the addition of a chapel to it. The house is an excellent one, and the sum named for its renovation seems unnecessarily large, but the ecclesiastical commissioners have decreed it, and from them there is no appeal. The see of Bristol, founded in the sixteenth century, was attached to the see of Gloucester exactly sixty years ago, just at the time when the bishops were rising to a higher ideal of their office, and when clergy and laity were beginning to demand more bishops and to expect more of them. The movement for its re-endowment might have been brought to a successful issue a year or two ago, but there was a somewhat natural desire that Lord Rosebery, whose government was then in power, might not have the opportunity of giving to a diocese a prelate unsuited and unpopular, as in the case of Hereford. Much will depend on the first bishop of the independent see. Bristol is a hive of industry, with a nobly restored cathedral; and the appointment of the bishop ought to have the effect of quickening Church life and work among a sleepy and somewhat Puritan body of clergy and laity.

At last a serious effort is to be made for a better provision for the needs of the poorer clergy. For the last twenty years things have been gradually going from bad to worse; and from the depression of agriculture and other causes, a very large proportion of benefices do not even yield the "living wage" which those who serve the altar have at least the right to expect. The new Central Sustentation Fund, which is initiated by the archbishops and leading laymen, will attempt to centralize and combine all the local and smaller agencies already at work, to enable the richer dioceses to help the poorer, and to administer, according to the wishes of the donor, any special funds which may be given or bequeathed. The new fund, like many other recent movements, may be welcomed, not only because it will meet the present needs and alleviate the present distresses, but also because it will be a part of the working machinery of the church, which will be found of inestimable service if disestablishment should ever come.

The Bishop of Chester's spirited action in regard to the local affairs of Barnton, Cheshire, is much to be commended, and is worthy of imitation. By command of the education department, the parish is required to provide additional school places, involving an outlay of £600. Barnton being in Sir John Brunner's constituency, that gentleman is urging the villagers to establish a school board, and has offered to help in building a school. In order to frustrate this little plan, the churchmen of the district are levying a voluntary rate, and the Cheshire Diocesan Board of Education have made a grant of £100, while the Bishop has made himself responsible for any deficit there may be on the required £600. We should hope that the churchmen of Barnton will prove themselves equal to the occasion, and not suffer their Bishop to bear the whole of the burden of expense. They have a great opportunity of showing of what metal they are made, and at this particular time, when it is the fashion to tax church people with niggardliness in regard to their schools, a little self-sacrifice in Barnton would serve admirably as a refutation of such a calumny.

If Tewkesbury Abbey were on the Continent, the British tourist would go miles out of his way to see it, and would dilate on its glories to his untravelled friends. As it happens to be in England to how few is its magnificence known! Yet it is, without exception, the most glorious parish church in the country. Consecrated in 1125, and transformed in the 14th century with a splendid central tower and unique front, its wealth of stained glass and rare monuments, it surpasses not a few cathedrals in beauty and historic interest. But it has the misfortune of being only the parish church of a not very prosperous town, and its only endowment is a paltry £200 a year. Much has been done by local Churchmen towards restoring some of its ancient splendor, but the fabric is a source of much anxiety to its custodians, and an appeal, we see, has been put forth for funds to arrest its further decay. Something must be done, and that on a scale which is beyond the means of the parishioners—the successors of the good people of Tewkesbury who interceded for its rescue from the hands of the spoiler at the period of the Dissolution. A great opportunity is offered to rich Churchmen to preserve to the nation one of our noblest monuments of mediæval art. Perhaps when we add that the Holy Eucharist is offered daily at its altars, we are urging the strongest of all appeals on its behalf.

Inquiries having been addressed to Bishop Wilkinson (of Northern and Central Europe) as to certain ritual observances to which he conformed during a recent visit to St. Petersburg, he has written a letter to Prebendary Webb-Peploe in which he says: "Saying a prayer for the unity of the Churches at the altar is a custom universal in the East when a visitor enters a church. . . . In the present day—if ever—we ought to use such a prayer privately, as I did upon the occasion referred to. . . . It would have been a great slight to the Orthodox Church authorities whom I was visiting to have entered the monastery church of St. Alexander Nevsky, the venerable saint of the Neva, and omitted to kneel at his tomb. I knelt there for the same reason as I should kneel at the grave of John Keble or Thomas A'Kempis—not to pray to or ask anything of those saints of God, but to ask God to give me more of that divine grace which made them what they were. I think you will agree with me in this—that friendly intercourse with a view to a better understanding, to say nothing of the duty of Christian courtesy and respect for other people's way of expressing their devotion, should be our aim in dealing with churches of another communion to our own."

Have you ever heard of a medicine with such a record of cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla? Don't you know that Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier, has proved, over and over again, that it has power to cure, even after all other remedies fail? If you have impure blood you may take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the utmost confidence that it will do you good.

THE OPAL.

What is this gem with tints of rose,
Colors of foam and brine?
Wonderful light that gleams and glows,
Fading to faintest shine?

Glare and glitter of sun at noon,
Shades that in brooklets lie?
Silvery sheen of the summer moon,
Flashes of evening sky?

Hues of the violet—deeply blue;
Sunset on Alpine snow?
Flames of splendor, that pulsate thro'
Depths of purple below?

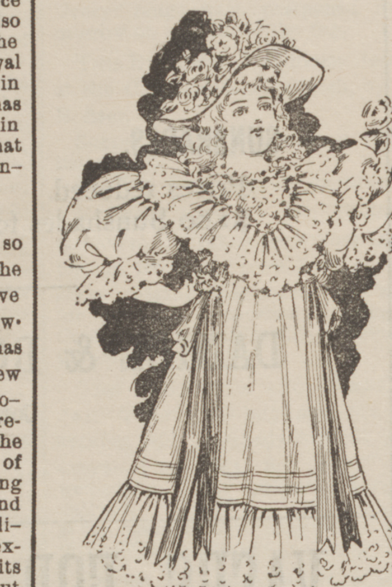
How it burns with a constant ray;
Flutters with mad desire;
Now iridescence pales away,
Now 'tis a living fire!

Weird and witching—with light serene,
Or throbbing in strange unrest—
Is it the heart of a woman seen
Thro' the veil of her milk-white breast?

WHAT THE LITTLE ONES WEAR.

Pretty Materials That May Be Picked Up for Small Prices.

Let the mother of the little maid rejoice! Now is the time when she may secure remnants; odd lengths that are good for little but a small gown, at the very lowest prices. Five cents a yard will buy many a dainty bit of dimity or batiste, to be stored away for future make-up. The sweetest of armure silks, too, for little dancing gowns, can be bought for thirty-five cents.



But the dancing gowns later. Just now we are interested in dainty lawns and dimities and batistes that should be made up with a deep yoke or blouse, and a short skirt edged with a flounce, mayhap of embroidery.

These dresses are made with very low necks and short sleeves, a most comfortable mode for little ones in the hot days. Yellow and green are favorite colors. One little gown is entirely of lettuce green lawn, trimmed with white embroidery and ribbons. The hat worn with it was white, massed with pink rosebuds, making a most charming picture.

A little tot in a red fez, a white organdie frock, red ties and stockings made a pretty picture. The Latest.

HE IS A DRUNKARD AT SEVEN.

Bright Colored Boy Dying of Paralysis Caused by Alcohol.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 10.

Robbie Waters was the brightest colored boy of his years living in Stamford a year ago. He was only seven years old, but he could dance and sing, and was so quick witted that everybody who saw him engaged the lad in conversation.

To-day the lad is a helpless paralytic and hopelessly blind. He sits in a little chair in the room in a barn that is the only shelter that he and his hard-working mother have, patiently waiting for the end, which must soon come to relieve him from his sufferings.

Dr. Treadway, the boy's physician, is of the opinion that Waters's condition was brought about by the use of intoxicating liquor. His skill in dancing and singing took him into saloons, where he always attracted a crowd. Beer and stronger beverages were given him, and more than once he became tipsy.

Some folks think his condition was brought about by excessive dancing, but the physician is inclined to believe it is due to alcohol.

The Baptist Mission is caring for the child, and he has every attention, but the case seems to baffle the skill of the physician.

The Poet's Inconsistency.

[From the Western Times.]

"You speak of the brooks," said the critic, as he looked over his friend's poem, "as the most joyous things in nature."

"So they are," said the poet.

"But you are inconsistent."

"Why?"

"Because later on you say they are ever murmuring."

CHICAGO SWINDLERS IN THE TOILS.

A Bad Gang Believed to Have Been Broken Up by Three Arrests.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 10.

By the arrest last night of the principals a combination of swindlers whose operations have extended over many years and invaded many states has, it is confidently believed, been broken up. Acting on information from Mr. J. J. Larmour, postal inspector, who has been working on the case at New York for some time, that he located two members of the combination and would arrest them at once, Jas. McClure, Wm. Thomas and J. I. Tallman were last night arrested on the charge of using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes. Their New York confederates are W. H. McClure and Dr. John Craig. For years these men have conducted fraudulent schemes of various kinds under different firm names, seldom remaining long in any locality and filched, it is believed, fully $750,000 from their dupes. The early operations of the gang were in connection with a fake lottery scheme at Kansas City, Mo., and later on pretended connection with the Louisiana lottery. Lately they have been engaged in so called "bucket shop" business in this city, using various aliases, and also in the sale of bogus mining stocks to a large extent. The three men arrested here were taken before United States Commissioner Humphrey and bound over for trial.

PRICES OF STOCK IN AUSTRALIA

1,600 Guineas for a Ram.

Sydney, N. S. W., July 7.

This was the May day in the history of Australian sheep sales. Tasmania furnished the bonne bouche of the sale in the shape of the stud ram President, a champion at many shows, and perhaps the grandest animal in the colony. During the morning excellent prices prevailed, the well-known Gibson family claiming the most attention. W. Gibson realized an average of £45 11s. for 20 rams, while Thomas Gibson, of Eskdale, averaged £71 for eight rams. Turnbull, of Otago, purchased a couple of Grubb's rams, progeny of the Gibson stock, for 19 and 21 guineas respectively. Thomas Gibson's ewes averaged 32½ guineas. President was then brought under the hammer. The first bid was 500 guineas, and the competition went on by hundreds to 800, and by fifties to £950 and £1,000, amid great excitement and cheering. After this bidding ran quickly up to 1,400, when stages dropped successively to 25s. and 10s., finally ceasing at 1,600 guineas, at which price Grubb & Lawrence, of Tasmania, became the owners under partnership compact. This is the highest legitimate sale in colonial records. After the excitement of this tussle sales at 190, 175, 143, 153, 145 and 150 guineas for various Tasmanian stocks seemed mere trifles by comparison.

ALL KINDS OF INSURANCE.

[From the Bulletin, Toronto.]

We have insurance companies to provide indemnity to all sorts and conditions of men, for loss arising from many of the varied contingencies of life, calamities and misfortunes, personal and financial, that may befall them. Among the latest in the field is the Provident Bounty Association, organized with a capital of £10,000, to which subscriptions are asked. The promoters of this new venture, according to Pearson's Weekly, say: "It is notorious that many people marry with the hope of improving their fortune, but frequently disappointment comes with the advent of an unexpectedly large family. This association provides, to some extent, for that contingency by at once giving a substantial sum in the case of the birth of twins."

Another new departure, and one equally unique, is the undertaking of the keeper of an English "pub" to insure his customers against loss from getting drunk. For a premium of 2d. he guarantees to defend his "policy-holder" should he fall into the hands of the "cops" and to pay his fine if convicted.

NOT TO BE FOUND IN THE REPORTS.

[From The Bookman.]

A prominent Philadelphia lawyer was narrating to a younger advocate some of the delays and complications of a Chancery suit in which he was engaged. "Bless me!" said the junior advocate, "I never heard of anything parallel to that except Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce." The other at once looked thoughtful and pretty soon, pleading an engagement, went off. The next morning he went into the younger man's office with an air of great vexation. "Look here," he said, "Why can't you remember names accurately? Here I've spent the whole night trying to find that case of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce that you mentioned, and there isn't any such case in the Pennsylvania law reports at all!"

Her Day is Coming.

[From the Providence Journal.]

The Republicans of Wyoming are talking about nominating a woman for governor of that state; and, contrary to all the teachings of the alleged humorous paragraphers, the supply of willing candidates doesn't seem to be at all affected by the provision in the state constitution which requires that a person must be over 30 years of age to be eligible for the office.

An Indication.

[From the Washington Star.]

"No," said the young man to his friend at the summer resort, "you needn't trouble yourself to introduce me to Miss Seeranbrown. She must be very homely?"

"Have you seen her?"

"No. But everyone that knows her speaks of her as having 'a lovely disposition.'"

Embryo Wisdom.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

"And, now, scholars, what is it we come to Sunday school to learn about? Annie may answer."

"Please, ma'am, it's the way to salvation."

"Annie is right. Now, does salvation cost anything? What, doesn't anybody know? Why it makes us very happy because it was always planned to be free? Ah, does little Tommie know?"

"Please, ma'am, it's silver."

The cords of window blinds are good barometers. When they become tight the reason is found in the fact that the air is moist; the cords have absorbed some of the moisture, and so are drawn taut.

Not for a long time has the Queen been so moved by any act of kindness to her family as she was by the letter from the Pope accompanying the present of a massive gold antique bracelet, sent by His Holiness to Princess Maud, upon the occasion of her wedding. The letter is filled with the kindest sentiments of affection, such as a parent might have used, and the missive is considered another proof that the Vatican desires to be on friendly terms with the Anglicans.

Three persons were drowned in the waters about Long Island, Sunday, two of them at crowded resorts, where their deaths were witnessed by hundreds of excursionists. The most unusual fatality was that of F. R. One of the great charities of New York are the pure milk depots, established by the eminent philanthropist, Nathan Straus, for the free delivery of pure milk to the poor people, especially to poor children. Bottled milk is also issued on free coupon books to children under two years of age who are sick. There are 13 distributing depots for the delivery of this pure milk, four of which are in the public parks where infants and children are kept much of the time for their health.

The loan is getting smaller and smaller, and is finally paid off and discharged. The property is freed from encumbrance, and forms for the owner and his family a comfortable home.

There is none of the worry and anxiety that is felt by one who is simply a tenant, or whose property is covered by a mortgage which is rapidly eating it up.

One of the oldest and most successful institutions in existence.
