GETTING IN SHAPE.

Fredericton Mail: Reports from the country districts are to the effect that the frost is all out of the ground and that the farmers are ready to begin putting in their crop during the coming week. The recent changeable weather has delayed operations somewhat, but the outlook is not unfavorable. It is scarcely likely that the farmers will go in quite so heavily on potatoes this year as they did last.

TO CORRECTLY FLY FLAGS AT HALF MAST.

Several questions have been asked the last few days as to flying flags at half mast, and for general information it may be stated that the flag should first be hoisted to the mast head, and then lowered to half mast, but not more than the width of the flag from the top of the pole, otherwise it looks unsightly if very low. Halyards should be gathered in tightly. All flags are lowered at sunset whether from half mast or not.

SURVEYING DOCK SITE.

Mr. H. M. Davy, the engineer of the Public Works Department, is making good progress with the soundings and borings at the mouth of the harbor. The district which he is now surveying is to the south of the Ballast wharf, on the site which it is alleged has been chosen for the new dry dock. There is considerable rock here below water, in addition to the reef which crops up about the mud. An accurate survey of this is being made with a view to securing a basis on which to form an estimate of the cost of excavation. The present harbor channel runs past but a short distance away, and the site is easily accessible. With this and other work Mr. Davy expects to be kept busy at St. John nearly all summer. Gales and heavy seas have hindered the work somewhat during the last fortnight.

ROYAL SALUTE FIRED FROM BARRACK GREEN

(From Monday's Daily Globe.)

Mourning for the death of King Edward VII. gave way at noon to-day for a brief time to rejoicing over the accession of King George V. In accordance with orders received from Ottawa flags on all Government buildings were raised to the mast head at noon and will remain there to-day, being lowered again to half mast to-morrow, where they will fly until after the King's funeral. Some of the private flags followed this rule, but it was overlooked by a number. Sharp at twelve o'clock the royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired from Dorchester Battery by a detachment from No. 3 Battery of the 3rd Regt. C. A. The detachment was in command of Major L. W. Barker with Capt. Magee and Lieutenants Gamblin and Clark. Four nine pounders were used for the salute. The officers wore bands of crepe on their arms as mourning.

In honor of His Majesty's succession to the throne the National Anthem and the hymn "O God Our Help In Ages Past," were played on Trintiy Church chimes at noon to-day.

In preparation for the period of mourning many of the stores and some private residences have been draped in black and purple and others are preparing for a similar demonstration. Nearly every shop window on the principal streets is decked in mourning colors with a picture of the late King as the chief feature. Some of the windows are given over entirely to these tributes of respect and in others there is a combination of mourning and business attained by the use of those portions of the stock which coincide with the mourning colors.

The City Hall has been draped from top to bottom with streamers of black with touches of purple and the Mayor's office and the council chamber have also been draped appropriately. Among the buildings around the city which show the emblems of mourning are M. R. A.'s, the Lake of the Woods building, Macaulay Bros. and a number of others.

Arrangements have not yet been made to administer the oath of allegiance to the new King to the Mayor and Common Council. On the occasion of the death of Queen Victoria the oath was taken in the presence of the Chief Justice and it is probable that a similar arrangement will be made this time.

IN THE COURTS.

Slipp and Hanson acting for the defendants, the hearing stands until the 10th inst.

ST. JOHN TRAVELLERS IN NAPLES AND ROME

Private letters from Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Ellis, written from Naples and Rome, speak enthusiastically of the beauties, natural and artistic, of these cities. Of Naples, they write, "while it cannot compare with Rome in the beauty or in the wealth of its attraction, it rivals even Quebec in the beauty of its situation and in the magnificence of the outlook over the harbor and bay. Such a sight as presents itself from the observation room of San Martini, the old monastery on the hill above the town, is beyond description!" During their stay in Rome, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis had an audience with His Holiness the Pope—on April 22—which they describe in part: "Thursday morning I called at the Canadian College and presented a letter from His Lordship Rt. Rev. Dr. Casey. The Superior was very gracious and gave me a letter to the Major-domo at the Vatican, which when I presented procured for us a card for an audience on Friday morning.' We have really crossed the 'yellow Tiber' several times but not at the place of Horatio's Bridge and the river is yellow, the water seems to be muddy all the time. This morning we went across in a carriage to have an audience with the Holy Father. We received our instructions last night to be present at the bronze gate of the Vatican at 11.30 this morning. We had to wear black, the ladies having a black lace veil over the hair. At about 11 o'clock we entered the gate, passed the Swiss Guards, and up many flights of marble stairs, with numbers of other persons, to the court yard of the palace, across that, through a beautiful corridor with Mosaic panels in the walls into a gorgeous ante chamber, where our permits were taken up. Then into the throne room — a very long room with a throne at one end, and a crucifix on a beautiful onyx table at the other; the walls were decorated with magnificent paintings. After a considerable time some of the officers came in and took a number of us through some beautiful rooms into one lovely one, with delicate, painted walls and ceiling, the pictures representing scenes from the life of Christ. It was one of a series of such rooms around which we were arranged in single rows; about two hundred persons awaiting the audience. A few minutes after twelve His Holiness arrived; he was escorted by five dignitaries in brilliant uniforms, resplendent in gold lace, and was attended by only one ecclesiastic, a comparatively young man in a purple gown. The Pope, of course, wore a white robe with a short cape and a white round cap, and a gold cross and rosary. He looked very simple beside his gorgeous attendants. He is a short man, quite stout, with a pleasant face, and does not show any signs of age or illness. Every one knelt as he passed around the room and every one kissed the ring on his finger. He paused for a moment or two for a special word with a young man near me, to whom an attendant drew his attention. We all rose and he said a few words to us, and as he delivered his blessing all the company knelt again, then he passed on to the next room and the ceremony was over, and we all came away. It was a very simple ceremony, but is something always to be remembered, so many are the associations which it awakens."

From among the various places of interest the Coliseum is described as the "most interesting place, more interesting even than the Grecian temples at Paestium. What a shame it was for the modern builders to tear it to pieces! It must have been a grander structure than all the buildings that have been made from it. Seeing it makes one lose something of one's admiration for Michael Angelo and the other great masters, for one realizes that it was not only the inspiration for much of their work, but also the source of supply for the treasures that made their monuments possible. Even as a ruin it is grand and gives a splendid idea of what it must have been in its glory with all its wealth of ornamentation intact. Practically nothing of that now remains."

"Rome," they write, "is a beautiful city. There is everywhere evidence of the old time greatness, while the new Rome is more beautiful than we imagined. The buildings are large and handsome with fine ornamentation; there are numerous beautiful statues and fountains; in fact every corner on every street has its own attractive feature, and to gain anything like an adequate idea of the wonders here one would require months and months. We have had delightful weather, not an unpleasant day here or at Naples."

INTERESTING BUDGET FROM RAILWAY TOWN

MONCTON, N. B., May 9. — Andrew Dunn, I.C.R. operator has received word of the death of his sister, Janie Dunn, at Spokane, Wash. The deceased was a daughter of the late George Dunn, formerly I. C. R. station agent at Springhill Junction, and was connected with the Canadian Order of Nurses before going west.

Only the meeting of the State Council, Knights of Columbus, will be held in Moncton to-morrow and Wednesday, all other proceedings being postponed owing to the King's death. Sunday the first and second degrees were conferred on fifteen candidates by the Moncton officers.

The International Association of Machinists passed a resolution of condolence on Saturday of the King's death.

Mrs. Dr. Keith has been appointed delegate to attend the International Sunshine Convention to be held at New York and leaves for there this week. She will also attend the Sunday school convention at Washington before returning home, representing the first Baptist church.

If thirteen years old George Fawcett ever comes before the notice of Magistrate Kay again he will be taken to St. John to serve five years in the reformatory. The boy was before the court, charged with stealing a hand satchel and three pounds of butter and as this is one of his numerous criminal offences, Magistrate Kay will take different steps next time.

HUSBANDS' DUTIES TO THEIR FAMILIES

Men who neglect their familes by constantly spending their leisure time at club rooms, of which their are many in St. John, received some attention from Rev. A. W. Meahan in preaching at High Mass in the Cathedral on Sunday. Father Meahan had read to the congregation that portion of the letter from the Fathers of the Quebec Plenary Council dealing with "The Christian Spirit in the Family." In that letter the Bishops especially admonish heads of families to devote to their homes all the time that business affairs and legitimate social duties leaves at their disposal. "Nothing so much disorganizes the family circle," say the Bishops, "than the habit prevalent nowadays with far too many husbands, of seeking apart from their wives and children distractions and amusements to which their tastes incline them. It would appear as though staying at home were a source of depression and annoyance to them. There are to be found in all centres of any importance, clubs which serve to an alarming extent as counter-attractions to the domestic hearth. It is there that, too often, men waste their leisure time, indulging in companionship, conversations and games, which leave to them unimpaired neither fortune nor health, honor, nor faith."

After reading this and other extracts, Father Meahan went on to point out the application of the latter to many heads of families in this city. Many men, he said, are doing what is censured in the letter of the Fathers, others seriously neglecting their duties to wives and children with sad consequences to them and to themselves. The wife, the heart of the family, finding herself without the companionship and affection of the head of the family, may become morose and loveless. Children suffer from the continued absence of the father from the home. Girls become flippant, as any observer may learn by walking the streets, and young men cease to be chivalrous or even respectful to them. Father Meahan hoped that the remarks of the Plenary Council would be taken to heart and that they would spend their leisure time with their families.
