he can, and working for those who are dependant upon him, fail in the struggle.

Our great joy over the arrival of a son and heir is tempered to a degree by sincere sorrow at the loss of our dear friend, companion and almost brother, Edwin P. Boyle.
Being a near neighbor we naturally saw much of him, and our association with him is a loving memory that will be cherished as a precious jewel while life shall last.
Buoyant of spirit, kind of heart, social, noble and generous, his companionship has ever been a ray of sunshine to revive our drooping spirits. None were more welcome in THE JOURNAL office than he, and none quite so ready or willing to assist us in doing up our papers, arranging things about the office or fixing up any thing which our unfortunate disability prevented us from doing ourself, and for which he would never accept a cent of remuneration. We have lost many dear friends in Fredericton, but we can truthfully say that there has been none, outside of our immediate family, whose death has been the cause of such genuine grief to us. We have not an unpleasant incident to remember in all these years in which we have enjoyed his loving and affectionate companionship, and his removal has left a vacancy among our friends and in our heart, that nothing else can fill. The immense attendance at his funeral, the tributes of affection from rich and poor, testify to the high estimation in which he was held by his fellow-townsmen, and need no words of ours to supplement. Death is but the gateway to a better life, and while our hearts are sore we can feel richer in the contemplation that he is not dead but transferred to a better home, where he is forever free from the sickness, sorrow, trial and suffering of this hard world, and where, after a few brief years we may look upon his transfigured face, beaming with the old smile of recognition, and enjoy his love and companionship through an endless eternity.

OWNERS OF HORSES

Should see the New PATENT BRIDLE.

It arches around the eye, preventing any injury to that member and affording all the daylight in front, which gives the horse the full use of his eyes and presents at the same time an Attractive Appearance.

This is considered the Best Bridle extant by all who have used it. It is impossible for it to lose its original form on account of wetness or rough usage.
It must be used to be appreciated
