Saturday,	16	62	72	61	The weather has this week (with the exception of Monday last which was showery) been uncommonly fine. There has been occasionally, a little fog; but the winds, generally prevailing from North and north west prevented its visits from being so lengthy as they have of late been.

The English Mail for July arrived here on Thursday last, bringing dates to the 2d of that month.

The accounts from Russia continue still to come to hand through various channels, and are therefore destitute of that authenticity, which would give good grounds for remarking upon them.

The affairs of Portugal appear to be daily assuming a more serious aspect.—Don Miguel has placed Oporto in a state of blockade. Conjectures of various kinds are in circulation as to the course to be pursued by England in consequence of this measure. The protection of her trade will it is thought by some, render her interference in some way or other necessary.

The Crown Land System again.—We last week mentioned that we were in expectation of hearing again from our Liverpool friend "Phocion," and we have not been disappointed.—Nor do we think the friends of the system have any reason to complain of negligence on the part of their champion, that is to say, provided the quantity of his matter can in their estimation make up for its quality.—Indeed were it not that we have taken a warm interest in the business, on the sole ground of informing the public regarding its injurious tendency and effects, and with the view of arousing the energies of those to whom the welfare of the community is committed, to apply at the proper quarter for speedy relief, we should not have condescended to notice a man of Phocion's stamp at all.—We know him well, and regret much that, either as regards integrity as a member of the community, or, for the sake of usefulness as a public officer, we do not know more good.

And we know that our principal object has in part been attained, for we have received, through various channels, communications condemning alike the system itself, and the conduct of Phocion with respect to the manner of getting up the Kent petition. What was stated in the Courier about that business (though we did not state the whole facts) appears to have hung like a mill-stone about his neck ever since, and every effort he makes to keep his head above water, operates only to sink him still deeper;—his last, is a desperate struggle.—Let us just glance at it, as related in the sixth (long) paragraph of his communication.—He says "All the Gentlemen whom he consulted, unanimously approved of the measure and the petition;"—Now we know that this was not the case; and we flatly contradict his assertion, upon the veracity of a very respectable gentleman holding a public situation in the County of Kent, who, by the address and ingenuity of the Deputy was, himself, induced to sign the petition, before taking time to sift through its plausibility, so as to discover the real motives which called forth the talents and industry of the Deputy in such a remarkable manner. He has since, both publicly and privately expressed his regret for having given countenance to the thing, and even been at no small pains to explain his mistake at head quarters.

"All public documents are signed in a careless slovenly manner, and which is not to be avoided;"—really Mr. P? Well this is a new doctrine to us,—a doctrine which even your best friends will not thank you for promulgating; for whatever base purposes your "slovenly" plans (to give them no worse name) may be brought to serve, we trust there are still left amongst us some men who, for the sake of their characters, pay a due regard to the manner as well as to the matter of the documents executed by them, and also to the mode of carrying into effect, such measures as they publicly advocate.—Your sweeping calumny therefore, recoils with double force on yourself, and sinks you still lower (if possible,) in the estimation of all good men, who despise the accomplishment of unjustifiable ends, far less, the doing so, by unjustifiable means.

But does not P's own language condemn him on the point of his being disinterested in the affair? (It is well known that P. is the Deputy himself.) What does he mean by procuring of signatures? and what are we led to infer from his directly acknowledging that, by far the greater part were procured by him and his agents?" Does he think to make the public believe that he lives in a district, the inhabitants of which, being totally ignorant of their interests, require a person of his abilities and patriotism to take the lead in their public affairs; and to dictate to them the proper course to be pursued regarding them; and, that in doing so, he is conferring upon his poor blind neighbours (whose good is nearest his heart) a boon, the value of which they are not capable of properly appreciating? No, no, Mr. Deputy;—not even the circumstance of your having been for "five years" employed in drawing up Kent Petitions, &c. &c. will be sufficient to convince the community, that you are such a disinterested gentleman as you represent yourself to be, even if all the exertions you made, to procure a separation of that place from the County of Northumberland, were included in the long list of your useful public labours.—By the bye, did you ever receive, or accept of, a consideration for any of those services?—Procure signatures! Why, if the evil which the petition prayed for relief against, was so extensive in its ravages as to be injurious to all "our numerous natives every day springing into manhood," (what a pathetic appeal!) "situated all along the Gulf Shore," we should rather have expected to hear of them making application to you, to draw up a petition, while they stood by, ready to sign it, than to find that you drew it up first, and then, at an inclement season of the year, not only travelled miles, yourself, to procure signatures or the verbal authority of those who could not write it, to sign for them; but also, that Agents were employed to perform the same arduous task:—Disinterested Benefactors! what a pity your ink should ever be "frozen!"

But in order to shew our readers that the Deputy's consistency is as conspicuous as his disinterestedness, we shall quote a line or two from Paragraph the fifth.—"In my first letter I disclaimed in as solemn a manner as I could, that any influence whatever was exerted to procure signatures."—With much propriety may he be "determined to arouse his recollection"—'twas a pity for his cause that he had not done so at an earlier period.

As the Deputy, however, promises to explain any thing in our remarks that appears to be "dark or mysterious," we shall leave him at this time, with no further burden on his shoulders, in the line of explanation, than that which the above seems to require.—To follow him throughout the whole labyrinth into which his vanity and egotism have led him, would require us to clew up a thread, longer than the distance between Saint John and Richibucto.

But the alarm respecting the destructive effects of the New Crown Land system is not confined to this Province. We observe by the Colonial Advocate of the 22d ult. that it is beginning to spread in Upper Canada also. The Editor of that paper agrees in sentiment with us; that it had its origin in the "evil counsels of secret advisers behind the throne," and hesitate not to name the persons who support it in that Province from interested and selfish motives.

Will the Legislatures of the different North American Colonies, with such abuses staring them in the face, let another session pass without representing to His Majesty's Ministers the actual state of the case?—We should hope they would not.

MAD DOGS.—Much terror has been excited among the inhabitants, in the Parish of Hampton, from the number of mad dogs which have lately infested that quarter.

About a month ago, it was observed, that many of their sheep were killed, (principally during the night) and suspicions fell upon a strange black dog, who had been seen to bite several dogs belonging to the place. Attempts were made to kill him, but it is not as yet ascertained whether any of them have been successful.—Shortly after, Mr. James Beattie discovered that his dog had been affected; but not until two of his cows had been bit by him. Mr. B. was aware of this circumstance several days previous; but as no bad symptoms appeared about either of the Cattle, he did not at the time, take the precaution of confining them.—About the end of last week, however, one of them became vicious, and no doubt any longer existed as to what was the matter with her;—the neighbours, to secure their own safety, assisted in digging a pit into which she was thrown alive, and covered up.—Since that time, the other cow has been tied up, and it is thought it will be necessary to kill her also.—Two other cows from the same cause, were stoned to death in that neighbourhood.

We understand also, that several persons have been bit: amongst the number, was a child belonging to Mr. James Pollock, near Hampton Church, on Tuesday morning last; and, although the greatest care is now taken to secure the dogs from running at large, it is impossible to say what accidents we may yet receive accounts of, from the Country.

We are happy to learn, that these circumstances have drawn the attention of the Common Council to the necessity of taking steps to prevent this calamity from reaching the City. At a Meeting held yesterday, an ordinance was made to compell the owners of dogs to confine them within their premises for the space of two months; directing also the Marshals and Constables, immediately, to kill those found loose upon the streets.—It is certainly more judicious to prevent an evil than to cure it.

THEATRE.—On Monday evening next, the popular Tragedy of Damon and Pythias will be presented, for Mr. HARDY'S BENEFIT. The varieties and machinery of the scenic department, which has been justly admired, are, we believe, entirely the production of Mr. H's. skill, taste and industry;—it does credit to them all; and, as his friends will not have another opportunity this season of testifying their estimation of his abilities in a tangible shape, he may reasonably expect to receive on that Evening a good share of Public countenance and support.—The appearance of the celebrated Tragedian, Mr. BROWN, (who arrived last evening, and will take the part of Damon,) will contribute much to heighten the attractions of the performance.

To Correspondents.—The Poetry sent us by A Member of the Conversazioni is in type, but its insertion is unavoidably postponed till next week.

The Cart-Horse Petition is received and will appear in our next.
