

POETRY.

T-O-M-O-R-R-O-W.

(BY JAMES KENNY, ESQUIRE.)

To-morrow, to-morrow,
We pay what we borrow,
To-morrow's to-day's easy pillow;
To-day is the day.

To-morrow we'll work
Like Tartar or Turk,
To-day we are fellows of mettle, Hey! give me good wine,— 'Tis your birth-day or mine;— So drink and to-morrow we'll settle.

That dear hazard-box,
Hear its musical knocks, Inviting our rousous so clever;
Come, seven's the main,
We'll try once again,
And to-morrow renounces it forever.

How oft, when I mope,
Comes smiling the Pope,
And cries—'to-day's ails and your sorrow,
I promised, I know,
A dozen long ago,
But be sure you shall have it to-morrow.'

Fair maiden, beware,
And do have a care,
When you hear from Edward, or Harry!
'To-day, pretty Miss,
We'll indulge in a kiss,
And to-morrow, my darling, we'll marry.'

My friend Mr. Price
Has writ to me twice,
And I haven't yet answered his letter;
It's really a shame,
But my headache's to blame;
To-morrow, perhaps, 't will be better.

I'm sorry to say,
I promised, to-day,
To dine with my aunt in the Borough, She'll stew like the deuce, But I'll write an excuse,
And she'll get it quite early to-morrow.

My House above stairs,
Is so out of repairs,
The rain on the roof dribbles through it;
Which nuisance aquatic Is rotting my attic,
To-morrow I'll have them to do it.

My tooth pains me so,
I'm determined to go,
To a Dentist, to let him remove it;
But the weather's so queer,
And to-morrow, I hear,
A change in the moon may improve it.

Thus in Calendars all,
This to-morrow must fall
On a day of such business and rout, That Fate with her scissors, Grim queen of all quizzers,
At last comes and clips it clean out.

PARODY.

By Herodotus Nib, Esq.

I'd be an Editor, mewed in a garret,
Were cobwebs in dusty magnificence hang,
With a steady arm chair and no rival to share it,
And a hat full of politics, verses and slang, I'd never fret about talents or merit, I'd never cawkish, nor challenge, nor flout;
I'd be an Editor mewed in a garret,
Ready to write my coat either side out.

O, I would plunder the wit of my betters, Scissors should minister all to my need;
Then would I look like a rare man of letters,
If I'd but warrant the title indeed,
If I'd but warrant the title indeed,
If I'd but warrant the title indeed,
If I'd but warrant the title indeed,
If I'd but warrant the title indeed.

VARIETIES.

THE WEATHER.

The editor of an English work, lately published, for the use of farmers and gardeners, by foretelling changes in the weather, &c. observes that 'When the swallows fly high after their prey, we think ourselves sure of a serene sky; but when they fly low and brush the surface of the water with their wings, we judge the rain is not far off.'

Debates.—An useless wagging of tongues where the noses have been already counted.
Ditch.—A place in which those who have taken too much wine are apt to take a little water.
Doze.—A short nap enjoyed by many people after dinner on a week day, and after the text on a Sunday.

THE SUBSEQUOUS VOLCANO.—We never tried the following experiment, which we copy from that very entertaining little work entitled, 'The Boy's own Book, or complete Encyclopedia of Diversions,' &c. a clever work, illustrated by numerous engravings, which, we understand, has cost the spirited proprietor, upwards of £300.
'Take one ounce of saltpetre, three ounces of powder, of sulphur vivum three ounces; beat, sift, and mix them well together; fill a pasteboard or paper mould with the composition, and it will burn under the water until quite spent. Few persons will believe that this can be done, before they have seen it tried.'

INHABITANTS OF COMETS.—If we estimate the intelligence of beings, by the knowledge which their place in the universe is fitted to impart, we are compelled to regard the cometary inhabitants as of an order even superior to the creatures of the earth.

Purification from Sin by Squeezing.—Multitudes of Pilgrims annually visit Malabar Point, near Bombay, for the sole purpose of squeezing themselves through a narrow cleft in the rock, apparently not wide enough to receive the body of a child, as a sure way of squeezing out their sins!

A new sect of Christians, founded by a Mr.
Garns, have sprung up at Grassington, somewhere in Great Britain, who call themselves Nazarine Cariates. Their chief tenet is, that all religious assemblies are unlawful except they be held in barns, alleging our Lord to have been born in one.

Ancient Slave Trade in England.—The wife of Earl Godwin, sister to Canute, the Danish king of England, made great gain by the trade she drove of buying up English youths and maidens to sell in Denmark.—Milton's History of England.

To make Shoes and Boots Water-proof.—Take one pint of drying oil, two ounces of yellow wax, two ounces of spirits of turpentine, and one ounce of Burgundy pitch, melted carefully over a slow fire; with this composition new shoes and boots are to be rubbed, in the sun, or at a distance from the fire, with a sponge, as often as they become dry, until they are fully saturated; the leather then is impervious to wet, the shoes and boots last much longer, and are the most effectual preservative against cold and chilblains.

AMUSEMENT.

A fellow shall make a fortune by tossing a straw from his toe to his nose; one in particular, has found that eating fire is the most ready way to live; and another who jingles several bells fixed to his cap, is the only man that I know who has received emolument from the labours of his head. A young author, a man of good nature and learning, was complaining to me some nights ago, of this misplaced generosity of the times. Here, says he, I have spent part of my youth in attempting to instruct and amuse my fellow creatures, and all my reward has been solitude, poverty and reproach; while a fellow possessed of even the smallest share of flattery merit, or who has, perhaps, learned to whistle doubly, is rewarded, applauded and caressed.—Prythee, young man, says I to him, are you ignorant that in so large a city as this, it is better to be an amusing than a useful member of Society? Can you leap up and touch your feet four times before you come to the ground? No, sir. Can you stand upon four horses at full speed? No, sir. Can you swallow a penknife? No, sir. I can do none of these tricks. Why, then, cried I, there is no other prudent means of subsistence left, but to appraise the town, that you speedily intend to eat up your own nose, by subscription.—Citizen of the World.

HINDOISM.—The belief in the efficacy of penances and austerities is universal in Hindustan. It is related of an individual, named Tarika, that he went through the following series of 11 distinct trials, each of which lasted 100 years, whereby he nearly dethroned the gods.

1. He stood on one foot, holding the other and both hands up to heaven, with his eye fixed on the sun.
2. He stood on one great toe.
3. He took as sustenance nothing but water.
4. He subsisted in the same manner on the air.
5. He remained in the water.
6. He was buried in the earth, but continued, as in the last infliction, in incessant adoration.
7. The same penance in fire.
8. He stood on his head with his feet upwards.
9. He stood on one hand.
10. He hung by his hands on a tree.
11. He hung on a tree with his head downwards.
To conquer this powerful enemy, Indra and other deities resorted to the aid of Brahma, and an Incarnation of Mahadeva was resolved on, who appeared in the form of Carticeya, the Hindoo Mars.

PATENT DEFINITIONS.

Debates.—An useless wagging of tongues
where the noses have been already counted.
Ditch.—A place in which those who have taken too much wine are apt to take a little water.
Doze.—A short nap enjoyed by many people after dinner on a week day, and after the text on a Sunday.
Egotism.—Suffering the private I to be too much in the public eye.
Embalming.—Perpetuating the perishable with more pains than we take to save that which is immortal.
Felicity.—The horizon (or rainbow) of the heart, which is always receding as we advance towards it.
Jealousy.—Tormenting yourself for fear you should be tormented by another.
Marriage.—Taking a yoke fellow, who may lighten the burden of existence if you pull together, or render it insupportable, if you drag different ways.

was surrounded. The indifference of this man excited the curiosity of Napoleon. He wished to know something about him; and, passing through the crowd, urged on his horse until he arrived close to him.
'What are you doing there?' said Napoleon. The workman raised his eyes, and recognized the Emperor. 'I am cutting stone.' 'You have served under me,' quickly observed the Emperor, who recognized an old soldier. 'It is true, Sir.'
'You were present at the campaign of Egypt,—you were a brigadier in such a corps?' 'Yes, Sir.' 'Why have you quitted the service?' 'Because I had completed my time, and obtained my discharge.' 'I am sorry for it: you were a brave man—I shall be happy to do for you any thing in my power: say what do you require from me?' 'That your Majesty will leave me to cut my stone in quiet: my work suffices me; I am in want of nothing.' This trait brings to mind the interview of Diogenes with Alexander; but the modest pride of the Greek philosopher was not equal to the reply of the stone-cutter.

ECONOMY.—M. Say, a celebrated French writer, on political economy, has the following story:—

'Being in the country, I had an example of one of those small losses, which a family is exposed to through negligence. From the want of a latch of small value, the wicket of a barn-yard (looking to the fields) was often left open—every one who went through drew the door to, but having no means to fasten it, it remained flapping; the poultry escaped and were lost. One day a fine pig got out and ran into the woods, and I diligently all the world was after it; the gardener, the cook, the dairy maid, and all ran to recover the swine. The gardener got sight of him first; and jumped over a ditch to stop him, when he sprained his ankle, and was confined a fortnight to the house. The cook on her return, found all the linen she had left to dry by the fire, burned; and the dairy maid having ran off before she tied up the cows, one of them broke the leg of a colt in the stable. The gardener's lost time was worth twenty crowns, valuing his pain at nothing; the linen burned, and the colt spoiled, were worth as much more. Here is a loss of forty crowns, and much pain, trouble, vexation, and inconvenience, for the want of a latch, which would not cost three pence; and the loss, through careless neglect, falls on a family little able to support it.'

Things that I like.—I like to see young men strutting about with cigars in their mouths, calling for snappers of gin and brandy, and drinking them off with great non-chalance, because it looks so genteel and manly.
I like to hear young men swear bravely, especially in the company of respectable females; it shows good sense and very excellent breeding.
I like to see young ladies laugh in Church; it shows that they are pleased with the sermon.
I like to see a dashing belle trip along the street, dressed in the most fashionable gear, with her heels, (not over clean) peeping through her stockings; it shows a becoming carelessness of herself.

Mr. Martin's Picture of the Deluge.— The engraving is just published of this extraordinary picture. It is engraved in the same style with Martin's other works, but from the absence of the variety of lights and colours, which characterize his Belshazzar's Feast, it was more difficult to execute with effect. It is, however, a most successful effort, and conveys the grand and gloomy effect of a picture upon one of the most sublime subjects which the history of the world has presented to the imagination of the poet or the painter.

The genius of Mr. Martin is original.
He is another example of the success, and deserved success, which attends those who establish a style in art of their own. The power of this artist in representing the space, magnitude, and grandeur of objects, which may be styled the 'sublime ideal,' is wonderful. No artist of the present day can impart to his canvass the impression of sublimity in natural objects as Martin does.
If he paint a cavern, it is seen drawn out and expanded to the fullest size; yet its long-drawn, remotest recesses, are brought before the eye with astonishing verisimilitude.
Alpine precipices, and oceanic expansion, appear in their full dimensions on his canvass. Martin is the only artist we have ever seen whose pictures are stamped at first sight with the unearthly sublimity of Miltonic poetry; we do not, of course, mean this of his figures, which are in themselves mere accessories to the other parts of his pictures, as they are with Turner in his inimitable landscape—No one but Michel Angelo ever attained the power of stamping the sublime, unearthly, and terrible, upon a Solitary figure.—We mean it of Martin's mixture of the picturesque, romantic, and grand in nature, with terrible conflicts of the elements, and all heightened by association with some subject of religious history, or with the loftiest poetry. Mr. Martin's is the poetry of painting. In the present work, he has summoned every aid to produce his great effect. The sun, moon, and a comet, are seen in conjunction. Noah's ark is placed on a lofty eminence which the waters have not yet attained; but its elevation bespeaks what the rising of the waters will be: this is a happy thought.
The mingling of many adjunctive objects, some of them peculiarly terrible, to heighten the impression of the whole scene, displays powerful invention and great judgment. But we recommend the reader to the picture itself.

Acucious portion of Sacred History is furnished, in connexion with this print, to justify the introduction of Methuselah among the afflicted group, who are awaiting their inevitable doom from the 'roar and rush of waters.' In thus representing the most aged of men amidst the horrible scene which overwhelmed the world in destruction, the painter has strictly adhered to Holy Writ.
'In the 600th year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened.' Methuselah begat Lamech at 187 years old; Lamech begat Noah at 182 years old, and in the 600th year of Noah's life the Deluge occurred. Adding those three numbers together, the total is 969; consequently Methuselah perished in the Deluge.
On the whole, this is one of the most difficult subjects Mr. Martin has attempted, but it is likewise one of his most successful efforts. He had only the power of his imagination to deluge him to success. In his Belshazzar he is assisted by his gorgeous power of colouring, as well as by the variety of passions by which the pictorial figures are agitated. Here is one unusual passion pervading the whole—namely, the dread of death. This he has judiciously varied by the maulness or the cowardliness with which it is met, and has mingled it almost magically with the most touching expression of affection in those who do not view their own death, but those of their wives and families, as the affliction most to be dreaded.

The rushing of the waters, the breaking up of the fountains, the windows of heaven opened, are, indeed, all truly and horri-fically depicted.
Byron's noble drama of 'Heaven and Earth' is finely touched in this picture:—
'Shall you exulting peak, Whose glittering top is like a distant star, Lie low beneath the boiling of the deep?
No more to have the morning sun break forth,
And scatter back the mists in floating folds From its tremendous brow? No more to have Day's broad orb drop behind its head at even,
Leaving it with a crown of many hues?
No more to be the beacon of the world,
For angels to alight on, as the spot Nearest the stars?
Shall prayer ascend,
When the swollen clouds unto the mountains bend
And burst,
And rushing oceans every barrier rend,
Until the very desert knows no thirst?
Where shall we fly?
Not to the mountains high;
For now their torrents rush with double roar
To meet the ocean, which, advancing still,
Already grasps each drowning hill, Nor leaves an unsearch'd cave.'

menced business on his premises in Charlotte street, where he will cast Composition Ranges, Brasses, Dove-Tails, Spikes, Nails, &c.; Haws, Scupper and deep sea Leads, Mill and Mill-brasses, &c. &c. He would also respectfully leave to return his unfeigned acknowledgments to all those who have formerly supported and encouraged him in the line of his business, and to assure them that the best materials that can be had necessary to constitute good work, combined with the most strict attention to business, shall occupy his entire study;—and by which he is confident of frustrating the malicious designs of opponents to the utmost of their power to depress the work of others as a means of establishing their selves.—He would further intimate, that he has had no occasion to make any reduction in the prices of his work on account of imperfections, some have done.
